A tract of 140 acres, bordering on Flushing Creek, has been purchased by the Long Island Railroad from the Flushing Bay Improvement Company. The land is situated on the west bank of the creek, and is in two parcels, extending to the tracks of the Whitestone branch of the railroad. With this purchase the company has acquired all the land between the creek and the Whitestone branch of the railroad and between the Main Street drawbridge.

The railroad has completed plans for the development of its holdings in the district for the accommodation of freight barges and steamers. Along the creek front wharves will be erected. The creek will be made available for commercial use, plans already having been approved by the New York City Dock Department and the United States War Department.

The land was formerly marshy, but much of it has been made available by filling in.

Several streets will be cut through the property and warehouses and industrial plants will be built there.

WHERE CITY NEEDS TIMES SQ. STATION

General Protest Likely Unless Commission Sees Fit to Modify Plans.

CIVIC BODIES MAY ACT

Unless the Public Service Commission sees its way to modify its plans for the disintegration of the traffic of the new subways by separating the B. R. T. and the Interborough express stations at Times Square, it will have to face a protest from all parts of the city. Although those who have property and business interests near Forty-second Street and Broadway naturally are especially alive to the misfortune of the adoption of such a plan, it is realized that it is a matter in which every subway traveler is more or less concerned. So the importance of the question is to be brought to the attention of all New Yorkers, in whatever neighborhood they may happen to live.

While two of the large property owners of the city, Robert Goelet, representing the Ogden Goelet estate, and Nicholas Biddle, representing the John Jacob Astor estate, asserted yesterday that there could be no possible question in their minds of the necessity of placing the B. R. T. express station in Times Square north of Forty-second Street, so as to make with the Interborough express station a great traffic exchange and centre, Jefferson de Mont Thompson, President of the Broadway Association, said that he already had written to ask the commission for a formal hearing on the matter, and that, if necessary, he would bring it before the Federation of Civic Associations of the city, which numbers more than twenty-five organizations similar to the Broadway Association and the Fifth Avenue Association.

When Mr. Biddle was seen yesterday about the matter, he said that he was very much surprised to hear that there was any question at this time of the placing of the B. R. T.'s express station at any other place than running north from Forty-second Street under Broadway. Six months or so ago he knew that the Broadway Association and other persons interested had gone into the question thoroughly with the commission, and he had gained the impression that assurances had been given to them that the original tentative plans of the commission for the B. R. T. line would be modified.

"I am convinced," said Mr. Biddle, "that this modification should be made not for the sake of any particular property, but in the interest of the whole city, and in order to provide for proper handling of its complicated traffic problems. It seems to me that the construction of a traffic exchange north of Forty-second Street at Times Square, where the two great lines come so close to each other, is the reasonable and natural thing to do."

Similar views were expressed yesterday by Robert Goelet. He said that he was in the most hearty sympathy with the idea of placing the B. R. T. express station under Broadway, running north from Forty-second Street, as he was especially impressed with the importance of providing some means of connecting the two great new subway systems. Thus, Mr. Goelet said, he believed that the interests of the trade and travel of the city would best be served.

Moreover, he put no confidence in the possibility of effecting any change in the course of the city's traffic by the mere device of placing the B. R. T. express station at the north end of Times Square. Mr. Goelet believes that the congestion of traffic, of which some of the Commissioners who have opposed the modification of their riginal tentative plans have expressed themselves afraid, can be relieved best by creating a centre especially to deal with it at Forty-second Street and Broadway and thus meeting the public demands.

The Broadway Association, which is composed of a large number of the leading merchants and property owners in upper Broadway, has before now thoroughly considered the Times Square situation. Its consulting engineer, H. G. Opdycke, made a special study of the possibilities of the situation for them, and laid before the Public Service Commission his suggestions in the form of a carefully thought out plan. This was taken down to the commission last Winter by a large delegation from the association, and was shown to some of the Commissioners at an informal conference, not, of course, as being a final solution of the problem, but as showing one method of accomplishing the wishes of the men most directly interested.

At the time the association brought the matter up the commission had its hands full with a number of other vital matters concerning the great subway problem. There were many legal details to be worked out and many plans to be drafted by the engineering force on sections of the two lines which necessarily had precedence over Times Square. The association consequently was willing to await the time when the Commissioners would take up their particular suggestion in its order.

It has been, however, a matter of surprise to them that so far no notice has been served on them that the commission actually was engaged in discussing this question, on which they feel so deeply. They realize that whatever decision is arrived at now must be final, and that if five years from now it is plain that a mistake has been made it will be impossible to rectify it. They have considered that a body as representative as they are should have some reason assigned to them for the disregard of their views.

Mr. Thompson wrote, as their Chairman, last week to ask for a public hearing, and is prepared to call a meeting of the association to protest as strongly as it possibly can unless the commission changes its views. Moreover, feeling as he does that people from all over the city visit the Times Square district in greater numbers than probably any other district, except possibly the financial, and that, therefore, the entire community is interested. Mr. Thompson is considering the advisability of bringing the question before the Federation of Civic Associations.

The President of this is Robert Grier Cooke, President of the Fifth Avenue Association, and Mr. Thompson is Vice President. Its membership includes representatives of all the important neighborhood organizations of the city. Mr. Thompson said last night that he was certain that it would be impossible for the Public Service Commission to withstand such an expression of public opinion unless it could give some controlling engineering reason against the creation of a great Times Square traffic centre.

EARLE GONE TO ITALY?

First Wife's Lawyers Search Four Liners In Vain for Her Son.

When the Red Star steamship Finland arrived from Antwerp yesterday a thorough search was made among the 396 cabin passengers and 1,116 steerage passengers for Ferdinand Pinney Earle and hiseight-year-old son, Harold, whom he kidnapped from a school near Paris. Henry Wellington Wack, attorney for Mrs. Emma Emilie Fischbacher, Earle's former wife and the mother of the boy, had a representative at the pier to serve Earle with a writ of habeas corpus ordering him to produce the boy before Justice Seabury in Part II. of the Supreme Court. No trace of Earle or the boy was found.

A vain search was also made of the North German Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, which arrived from Cherbourg a little ahead of the Finland.

It was stated later in the day that Mr. Wack had received a cable message notifying him that Earle had taken the boy to Italy. When Mrs. Fischbacher obtained her divorce the French courts placed the child in her custody.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—While the Red Star liner Marquette was moving up the harbor this afternoon the Supreme Court refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus for Ferdinand Pinney Earle and his son and a female companion, who were supposed to be passengers in the ship. But when the vessel docked it was found that the mud-owned party was not on board. Attorney Wack carefully, but vainly, scrutinized the passengers in the interest of the first Mrs. Earle. The Leyland liner Bohemia was also searched in vain.

ASK WILSON TO CUT MASS.

Brooklyn Christian Endeavor Union Sends Him Its Protest.

The Brooklyn Christian Endeavor Union has sent a telegram to President Wilson asking him not to attend the Pan-American mass on Thanksgiving. This is their protest:

Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President, White House, Washington, D. C.:

The Board of Directors of the Brooklyn Christian Endeavor Union, Incorporated, comprising societies with an aggregate membership of 4,000 young people, kindly ask you to not attend Pan-American thanksgiving service in the Catholic Cathedral this year, account of publicity given this act of former Presidents by that Church, evidently to show Administration approval. JOHN B. PAYNE, Chairman.

The Washington Ministerial Association first raised objection to the custom, which has been followed for several years.

PRIMARIES CASE CLOSES.

Senator Carroll and Luke O'Reilly to Hear Verdict To-day.

The defense of Senator Daniel J. Carroll, Lawyer Luke O'Reilly, and three others, on trial before Justice Kelby in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, on charges of conspiracy and intimidation of election officials at the primaries in the Fourteenth Assembly District in March, 1912, was closed yesterday afternoon. Senator Carroll did not testify.

District Attorney Cropsey and Robert M. Elder finished summing up late in the afternoon and the trial adjourned for the day. Justice Kelby will deliver his charge to the jury this morning.

Luke O'Reilly, under cross-examination by the District Attorney, did not admit any of the charges made by Thomas P. Owens one of the defendants, who turned State's evidence in the trial. Justice Maddox, Justice Stapleton, and Philip A. Brennan were put on the stand as character witnesses for O'Reilly.

REFUSES TO AID POLICE

Obtained the Pearls on Nov. 4 and Said He Would Find a Purchaser.

Detectives were sent scurrying about the city yesterday in an attempt to find a necklace composed of fifty-four graduated pearls worth more than $10,000. The necklace was the property of Victor A. Picard, an importing jeweler of 141 Fifth Avenue. He turned it over on Nov. 4 to Harry W. Shattuck, a jeweler of 15 Maiden Lane, who said he could find a purchaser.

Shattuck was arrested yesterday morning by Detectives Flannelly and Schmidt of the East Twenty-second Street Station on the charge of grand larceny, but although he was questioned for more than an hour and then arraigned before Magistrate Marsh in the Essex Market Court he refused to tell what had become of the pearls. He was held under $1,500 bail to await a further hearing next Friday. Last night, at the request of the police, the bail was raised to $3,500. Shattuck was unable to put up the bonds and was remanded to the Tombs.

On Shattuck when he was arrested were found pawn tickets which led the police to make further inquiries into his business affairs. One of these tickets showed that $300 had been advanced to him on a pearl at Goldstein's pawnshop, 103 Park Row, and another showed that an unset diamond had been pledged at Simpson's, 164 Bowery, for $350. From what Shattuck said the police believe that the pearl pawned at Goldstein's place was not one of the jewels which composed the $10,000 necklace. Experts who know every pearl in the necklace will examine the pearl at Goldstein's to-day to determine that point.

Shattuck was asked by the detectives what he had done with the necklace.

"Well, if you had given it to anybody you wouldn't say so," was his reply, according to the police.

At another time Shattuck said he had given the pearl to a friend and that he understood it had been pawned. He wouldn't give any clue to help the detectives in their search for the necklace, however, and they were inclined to doubt his story. They are of the opinion that the necklace has not been broken up and that it will be recovered after Shattuck has had a chance to think things over in the Tombs for a day or two.

Shattuck, who is about 50 years old, said he had been in the jewelry business in this city for thirty years. He lives at Sayville, L. I. He obtained the necklace, which weighs 334 grains, and has a centrepiece weighing twenty-four grains, from Picard on Nov. 4 on a consignment which provided that he should return it within three days if he had not found a purchaser. As the days passed, Picard became worried and got in communication with Shattuck.

The return of the jewels was promised, but Shattuck did not put in an appearance until Monday, when he promised to call at Picard's shop yesterday. The importer was suspicious and called in Detective Smith of the Burns Agency. Smith watched Shattuck's home at Sayville all Monday night and followed him to this city yesterday. Then he asked him to come to Picard's shop, where he was arrested.

Shattuck has desk room at the Malden Lane address with another jeweler, H. H. Collard.

GIBBONS ON THANKSGIVING.

Issues Message Calling on Country to Give Thanks for Prosperity.

Special to The New York Times.

"Of all the nations of the earth that are called upon to return thanks to the Giver of all good gifts the United States is among the most conspicuous. We enjoy material prosperity in very marked degree. We are at peace with all the nations of the earth, and we have peace within our own borders.

"It is to be sincerely hoped that our complications with Mexico will in the long run be adjusted, not by the sword, but by the pen and voice, which are mightier than the sword."

WARNING.

The Christmas Number of The New York Times, on Sunday, Dec. 7, will be sold out far ahead of time. If you want the sections containing the Sargent paintings and The Girl of To-day, the only way to get them is to order early.—Adv.

TO TRY NEW POLICE SIGNAL.

West Thirtieth Street Patrolmen to Make the Tests.

Police Commissioner Waldo announced yesterday that the Twenty-third Precinct, with headquarters on West Thirtieth Street, would be the scene of a trial of a new system of police signaling. The system was designed by experts of the telephone company and the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity to make it possible for the station house Lieutenant to get into quick communication with the men on post, who can now be reached only when they call up from police telephone boxes or are found by roundsmen.

The system contemplates the removal of all signal boxes from the sides of buildings and their being mounted on separate posts at the curb line. Each signal box is to be surmounted with a signal bell, which will ring until the patrolman on post opens the box, and at night by a green lamp which will be electrically illuminated until the call is answered. These signal boxes will be tried on twenty-eight fixed posts in the Twenty-third Precinct. If successful, it was said yesterday, the plan will be extended throughout the city.

White House Hears Boston Chimes.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—The chimes of the Old North Church were rung to-day in honor of the Wilson-Sayre wedding, and a direct telephone wire was arranged so that the notes were clearly audible in the White House. Dr. Albert H. Nicholls, President of the Boston Guild of Chime Ringers, supervised the ringing.

On These as Security Foye Borrowed $207,000 from Philadelphia Banks.

MAY GET BACK $175,000

Accounts in Banks Discovered in Addition to $102,000 on Him When Arrested.

PRISONER REFUSES TO TALK

James Edward Foye, the $75 a month clerk of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of this city, who in one month was able to steal and forge stock certificates of the General Electric Company, the market value of which is about $360,000, was arraigned in the Tombs Court yesterday morning and remanded to the Tombs to await extradition to Pennsylvania.

Foye, who was arrested in the Pennsylvania station on Tuesday night, appeared in court looking dapper and not at all cheerless. He was, however, a very non-communicative prisoner and refused even to answer questions as to his age, the identity of his parents, and his nationality.

Those in the courtroom were amazed that so youthful and apparently so unsophisticated a clerk could have managed to gain access to the vaults of one of the biggest trust companies in the city and then proceed to tear out of the General Electric's book unsigned certificates the face value of which, when properly filled out, represented more than $360,000 at the present quotations. The fact that the trust company has said that Foye did not have access to the certificate books caused many to wonder if the prisoner did not have an accomplice. This theory was frowned on by officials of the trust company, who said they were positive that Foye had acted alone and without the aid or knowledge of any other person.

It was on Oct. 23 that Foye appeared at the office of Charles T. Brown & Co., brokers, of Philadelphia, and asked for a loan of $10,000, offering as security forged certificates of General Electric stock, supposed to be worth approximately $20,000. The name of an official of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, which is the transfer agent for General Electric Company stock, and also that of an official of the Guaranty Trust, registrar, had been forged on the certificates.

The official of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, whose name was forged is understood to be Augustus V. Heely, the Secretary. No intimation as to the name of the Guaranty Trust Company official whose name was forged was given yesterday.

Borrowed $207,000.

The total amount of money that Foye was able to borrow on the twenty-six one-hundred share certificates that he appropriated and then forged, was said yesterday to be $207,000, and of this amount it is believed that between $160,000 and $175,000 will be recovered. Already recovered is a certified check for $87,000 that Foye obtained in Philadelphia on Tuesday, $5,000 in cash found on his person when arrested, about $40,000 on deposit in the Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust Company, and an unnamed amount said to be in the Harriman National Bank, which brings the total of the stolen money, now in sight, to somewhere between $160,000 and $175,000. In the event the larger amount is correct this would leave about $32,000 still unaccounted for.

Furthermore, it became known yesterday that the statement given out on Tuesday night, following the arrest of Foye, that the theft of the certificates was discovered at least a week ago and that since that time detectives had been at work on the case, was an error. As a matter of fact the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company did not know that a single certificate had been stolen until after the issuance of the certified check for $87,000 on Tuesday. It now appears that after Charles T. Brown & Co. had negotiated the $87,000 loan and had turned over the certificates given them by Foye as security, together with Foye's note indorsed by Mr. Brown, to the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia, an official of the bank thought it might be good business to call up the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company on the long-distance telephone and ask for a little information about the young man who owned so great an amount of General Electric stock.

The Philadelphia banker asked the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company if James Edward Foye was registered on the books of the General Electric Company as the owner of the large amount of stock. The "no" of the New York bankers was emphatic.

Found Foye Had Started.

A hurried investigation disclosed that Foye had left Philadelphia on the 4 P. M Pennsylvania Express, and that he was then within less than an hour of New York. That was the first time anybody suspected that a swindle had taken place. The police here were notified, and Foye was arrested as he stepped from the train.

"Had it not been for the curiosity of that Philadelphia banker," said a lawyer identified with the case yesterday, "there is no telling how great a sum Foye would have gotten away with."

Charles T. Brown, the Philadelphia broker, hurried to New York as soon as the theft was discovered and made the complaint on which Magistrate Breen held Foye for the action of the Pennsylvania authorities yesterday.

PRESIDENT'S TWO TURKEYS.

Rhode Island Gobbler This Year Has a Rival from Kentucky.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Whose turkey shall be served for Thanksgiving dinner at the White House—Horace Vose's or South Trimble's?

That is the problem confronting Mrs. Wilson. The chances are that the public and Messrs. Vose and Trimble will never know how she solves it.

It is more of a problem than appears on its face, for the White House Thanksgiving turkey for four decades has been furnished by Mr. Vose, while Mr. Trimble is the Clerk of the House of Representatives, a former member of Congress, a good Democrat, a firm supporter of the Wilson Administration, and a friend of the President.

Mr. Vose lives at Westerly, R. I. It was forty-three year ago, in the Administration of President Grant, that he began sending his prize gobbler to grace the White House table on Thanksgiving Day. He has had no opposition. Mr. Vose's selection for the Wilson table arrived at the White House this morning. Dressed for the oven, the turkey weighs thirty-seven pounds. It was fed on special food for seven weeks.

Mr. Trimble raises turkeys on his place near Frankfort, Ky. His bird had been promised and was expected at the White House by this evening. This gobbler is seven pounds lighter than the Vose turkey, but Mr. Trimble has been feeding him on red peppers and other things, and he contends that no Yankee bird can approach his in flavor.

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, declined to say whether he had used his influence in behalf of either the Vose turkey or the Trimble turkey. Mr. Tumulty has received a Thanksgiving turkey from Mr. Trimble.

BLAUVELT BILL IS LIMIT.

Glynn Told Democratic Majority Will Go No Further on Primaries.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—The Direct Primary bill, prepared by Senator George A. Blauvelt, an abstract of the text of which was printed yesterday, is the ultimatum of the Democratic majority of the Legislature. Gov. Glynn was so informed by Senator Robert F. Wagner before the Senator departed for New York this evening.

Senator Wagner said that his party legislators would go no further than the limit prescribed in Senator Blauvelt's bill.

This bill, while it does not abolish the State Convention, deprives it of the power to nominate candidates for State offices by providing that all candidates, whether for State or local offices, shall be nominated at official primaries. Primary candidates may be designated either by a petition of a small per cent. of the enrolled party, by a vote within a political subdivision, or at a convention made up of delegates elected, subject to party rules and at party expense, by the enrolled party voters at unofficial primaries. The State Convention may thus select the organization primary candidates and continue to formulate the party platform.

Party committees will provide party rules and regulations, and select the organization emblem to be used on the primary ballot. Party committees will be elected, subject to party rules, at unofficial and not at official primaries.

ANOTHER GRANT IN ARMY.

Another Grant is going to be a soldier. The latest of the descendants of Ulysses S. Grant to enter the army is Chapman Grant, a grandson of the civil war General. It was announced yesterday that he had resigned his place as assistant curator of the Children's Museum of the Brooklyn Institute to accept a Second Lieutenancy in the Fourteenth United States Cavalry. His resignation will take effect on the first of the month and he will report for duty on Dec. 15 on the Mexican border, where the Fourteenth Cavalry is now stationed.

"I merely thought that there might be a war," said Lieut. Grant yesterday, "and if there is to be one I want to be in it. As far as the matter of my appointment at this time goes, I have no inside information as to the likelihood of a war. In a way I am taking a chance on it. But I guess I would have gone into the army anyway, war or no war."

Chapman Grant is a son of Jesse R. Grant and a nephew of the late Gen. F. D. Grant. He was graduated from Williams College three years ago, and since that time has been devoting himself to scientific work. He became curator of entomology at the Children's Museum in Brooklyn on Sept. 1 last.

BREAKS BLEASE PAROLE.

Murderer Freed by Governor Promptly Shoots a Man.

Special to The New York Times.

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 26.—Elmore Wright, a convict recently paroled by Gov. Blease, shot his wife's cousin, Ernest McAbee, last night, because McAbee took him to task for abusing his wife. Wright had served three years of a life term for murder when he was paroled.

Samuel K. Williams, another beneficiary of Blease's clemency, was arrested by a United States Marshal today as he stepped from the penitentiary. Williams is accused of a post office robbery in Alabama.

Lester Bryant, paroled convict, escaped two months ago from the Greenville County chain gang, and the Greenville authorities have notified Blease that they cannot find Bryant to notify him of his good fortune. He was serving a five-year sentence for manslaughter.

The Governor to-day paroled Benjamin John, a Syrian, who has served only a few months of a life's sentence for murder. Blease told the man to get out of the State within twenty-four hours and go to Syria and never return to the United States.

Blease also liberated a burglar who had served six years of a ten-year sentence, and previously had served a sentence in the Federal prison at Atlanta. This makes a total of 105 convicts to whom he has extended clemency in honor of Thanksgiving.

Activity at Harbor Hill.

It is reported that Clarence H. Mackay is to return, with his children, to Harbor Hill, his $6,000,000 country place near Roslyn, L. I. Many employes who received notice that their services would not be required after Dec. 1, have been notified that they will remain. Several horses and ponies have arrived at Harbor Hill this week.

$4,000,000 FUND AND $62,501 MORE

Christian Associations' Campaign Ends with Its High Limit Safely Passed.

$1,175,000 FROM 5 PERSONS

But Janitor's Donation of the $1 Given to Him for a Turkey Wins Most Applause.

The $4,000,000 building fund of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations of this city was oversubscribed last night by $62,501 as a result of extending the time limit for one day. The announcement that the goal of the strenuous, nerve-racking two weeks' campaign had been reached was greeted with cheers that shook the walls of the Hotel Manhattan, where the leaders met last night at 8 o'clock for the final tally. A momentary pause in the cheering was the signal for some one to start the Doxology, and the fervor put into the singing of the hymn by the men and women there assembled was even more impressive than the applause.

The gift of the odd dollar of the oversubscribed amount was received with even more enthusiasm than that of $25,000 contributions, of which there were four. This $1 was contributed by a janitor in the following simple and earnest, if ungrammatical, note:

> I see by the paper this morning that you have not got your $4,000,000, and so there is nothing else for me to do than help you. This morning a lady gave me $1 for a turkey; then I thought that I have to be without turkey and send that $1 for your fund. I am a janitor that love the lost. God bless you. 40 ST.

A vote of thanks was proposed for the janitor and carried with prolonged cheering, and one of the women said she would see that he got his turkey anyway.

Big Gifts on Final Day.

The gifts of $1,000 or more that carried the fund to success and beyond were as follows:

Tired and worn out from their day's search for further contributions to make up a deficit of $126,498, the committee chairmen, team leaders and workers crowded into the room on the first floor of the Hotel Manhattan until every seat was taken at the tables and along the walls, while many stood near the doorway. George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee, called on William M. Kingsley, the official announcer and funmaker of the campaign, to ask for the reports of the various teams and committees.

Mr. Kingsley provoked a laugh by saying that Tuesday night's failure had put the pain in campaign. He added that he had been very fond of the team captains, especially Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan, but that as his wife was present he couldn't speak at any further length on that subject. As Mr. Kingsley read their names, the leaders made the following reports, which showed that a total of $138,999 had been collected during the day:

Celebration Startled Wayfarers.

The place of honor for the day's collections went to the team captained by Mrs. E. R. L. Gould, with $57,458, and her announcement brought every man and woman in the room to their feet. The applause lasted for a full minute. Mrs. Gould said that $25,000 of her collection had been given by Mrs. S. B. Harkness, another $25,000 anonymously, $5,000 by Mrs. Daniel G. Reid, and $1,000 from Henry Clews and Mrs. W. L. Harkness. Mr. Kingsley caused another laugh by commenting on the Clews gift with the words "Wall Street," because the workers have not met with the success they expected in the financial district.

Second place went to Miss Dorothy Perkins, Captain of Team 25, who announced $54,079, and she, too, had to wait quite a while for the cheering to stop. Before she could go on William Fellowes Morgan stood up behind the guest table and shouted. "It's over,

J. K. M'GUIRE FOUND, IS IN PORTO RICO

Indicted Ex-Mayor Says He Will Return—Hennessy's New Charges.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 26.—James K. McGuire, ex-Mayor of Syracuse, who is under indictment in New York for violation of the law prohibiting a person from soliciting a political contribution from a corporation, is in San Juan.

He arrived here late last night on the steamship President, from Santo Domingo. He expressed his intention of proceeding to Havana, from which port he said he probably would sail for New York on Saturday.

The San Juan police, it is reported, received a cable inquiry from District Attorney Whitman regarding McGuire.

PROMISES NEW DISCLOSURES.

Hennessy Says Contractors Will Give Proof of Blackmail.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—John A. Hennessy, on his arrival here to-day from Binghamton, said that he had obtained what he called "confessions" from several contractors on State work which would be of great aid to District Attorney Whitman in his search for graft. The revelations, he said, involved a "big" Tammany man, who formerly was a State official. What Hennessy called the whole "crooked deal" he said would be exposed through him by District Attorney Whitman at the resumption of the John Doe inquiry before Chief Magistrate McAdoo in New York City on Monday. Two contractors, he said, would take the witness stand on Monday and tell the "whole story."

Mr. Hennessy would not say who the ex-State official was, but he intimated that he was a man widely known. The man he had in mind, he said, was now out of the country.

"Do you mean James K. McGuire?" he was asked.

"No, it is not McGuire," replied Hennessy. "It is somebody much higher up."

Mr. Hennessy said that he had known of the "deal" for several months but had said nothing about it because he was unable to prove a case. The necessary proof, he said, had come into his possession within forty-eight hours.

"The crime was committed in New York City and there is no doubt about District Attorney Whitman's jurisdiction," Hennessy said. "There are several men implicated and the big man, I rather think, is out of the country and is a fugitive from justice. I will say that he is a person who generally is reputed to be a collector for a high official in the present Government of the State of New York."

"Will the evidence in your possession be sufficient to convict any one?" he was asked.

"It is sufficient to convict all the bagmen," Hennessy replied.

According to Mr. Hennessy Mr. Whitman as yet does not know of this new development in the graft investigation. Assistant District Attorney Clark, who arrived here to-day from Mr. Whitman's office, acknowledged that he had heard nothing of the new Hennessy evidence. He said that he would be glad to hear it from Hennessy.

When Mr. Hennessy was pressed for information regarding his evidence, he said that he could not discuss it with anyone until he saw Mr. Whitman in person. It was understood that this would not be until Monday morning.

"This is nothing that I ever mentioned before," explained Hennessy. "It never came out in the campaign. It is one of the graft stories which I kept secret until I could get a certain man to 'come across.' Has he 'come across'? I should say until he had, and in the presence of three witnesses. He will testify before Mr. Whitman on Monday. His disclosures will be by far the most important made up to this time."

"Is your story one of bribery?" he was asked.

"I'd call it pure blackmail; that's what I'd call it," said Mr. Hennessy. "It will open the door for Mr. Whitman. A large amount of money was carried down to New York and paid over to a 'big man' there. This big man is a member of Tammany Hall and his relations with a high Tammany official have been a matter of gossip for some time. The blackmailing plot was formed in Albany but was carried out in New York. I have the necessary corroboration, too."

Mr. Hennessy said that he had a new asphalt and oil case to put before Mr. Whitman. The case, he said bore no relation to the blackmailing case.

Referring to the evidence of Fillmore Condit, New York representative of the Union Oil Company, which resulted in the indictment of James K. McGuire, Mr. Hennessy said:

"Mr. Whitman hasn't the real oil story yet. But I think he will get it."

Henry A. Rubino, counsel for the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, was in this city to-day. His presence led some persons to believe that he had come at the request of District Attorney Whitman to look up some ends of the graft investigation. Mr. Rubino denied this, however, saying that he was here to be present when State Highway Commissioner Carlisle filed his answer with Gov. Glynn to the charges which he, Rubino, had made against Carlisle. Commissioner Carlisle filed his answer with Gov. Glynn this afternoon, but neither the charges nor the answer will be made public by Gov. Glynn until Friday morning. Neither Gov. Glynn nor Mr. Carlisle would discuss the charges to-day.

Before leaving for New York this evening Mr. Hennessy gave out this typewritten statement regarding the charges against Commissioner of Highways John N Carlisle:

"Mr. Hennessy, after reading the statement of Mr. Rubino, said that in his judgment the District Attorney of Albany County ought immediately to begin an investigation whether the crime allegrd by Rubino was committed, or to prove that Mr. Rubino never had and has not now any evidence to substantiate any charge which he made."

WHY CHAMBERLIN GOT MEMO.

Was Anxious, He Says, to Obtain Open Asphalt Market.

It was learned yesterday that there was information in the District Attorney's office to the effect that it was James K. McGuire who conducted the negotiations with the State Highway Department which resulted in drawing up road specifications which only the Barber Asphalt Paving Company's materials satisfied.

One of the bits of evidence bearing on this point is the memorandum made by Fillmore Condit on Aug. 13, for Arthur B. Chamberlin, formerly associated with the Barber Company, now an independent asphalt broker. Chamberlin was a witness in the John Doe

COWDRAY GIVES UP COLOMBIAN GRANT

Opposition of This Country Leads to the Abandonment of the Oil Concession.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 27.—Lord Cowdray's firm, S. Pearson & Son, in a statement given to THE NEW YORK TIMES, announces that it has received a telegram from Bogota in which Lord Murray of Elibank says that he has withdrawn the contract for a concession to develop the oil resources of Colombia. He hae taken this course owing to the political feeling that has been engendered by the negotiations. The statement proceeds:

According to a dispatch just received, the modified contract with the Ecuador Government to take the place of the one rejected early in September has passed the lower Chamber and its second reading in the Senate, a commission of the Senate having reported favorably on the amended terms. Congress, however, adjourned without a final settlement.

We might point out that it is impossible to carry on an oil industry in undeveloped countries without the encouragement and support of the Government. It is necessary to obtain full facilities for the improvement of communications—such as railways, roads, wharves, the laying down of pipe lines, &c. Without such, an oil industry in a new country cannot compete successfully with those in a developed country.

The contention that Lord Murray was asking for conditions which would constitute a monopoly was entirely wrong, as the areas he was asking for were only a fraction of 1 per cent. of the total area of the country concerned.

When it was announced here that Lord Murray had obtained important concessions in Colombia the news was hailed as a remarkable victory for British commercial enterprise over its American rivals. The announcement of the withdrawal of the contract has been received with dismay, and has provoked strong protests in some quarters against the methods alleged to have been adopted by the Pearsons' American rivals in preventing its completion.

The Financial News, in an article on the subject, declares that the political feeling in Colombia which caused Lord Murray to withdraw the contract was undoubtedly fomented by American oil interests, which have received the active support of the United States Government in their endeavors to frustrate British enterprise in Central America.

The Financial News then republishes a communication that it received recently from "a well-informed correspondent," which alleges that the United States Government, with the object of preventing the completion of the Colombian contract, brought great pressure to bear on the Colombian Minister at Washington. It is added that it was pointed out to him that the completion of the contract would not be convenient, in view of the diplomatic negotiations proceeding between the two countries. The same policy, this correspondent asserts, was pursued by United States interests in regard to the contract arranged between the Pearsons and Ecuador. The Financial News continues:

"The unscrupulous action of the United States Government on behalf of the Standard Oil octopus has had its desired effect, anyway as far as Colombia is concerned. The sufferer in the long run, however, will be Colombia. This last episode will go to support the view that the American oil interests have from the beginning fomented the troubles in Mexico, and are even now keeping the Washington waxworks on the move to the detriment of British interests."

A telegram to The Times from Bogota, in announcing the withdrawal of the Pearson contract from Congress, says that probably the new Ministry will next year desire to revive it, as a commission of the lower chamber made a unanimous report in its favor. The correspondent adds:

"Lord Murray has signed the contracts for the Cartagena and Buenaventura harbor works. Other prospects are under consideration."

LONDON, Nov. 26.—In confirming the report that he had decided to abandon all efforts to carry through the proposed exploitation of the Colombian oilfields, Lord Cowdray said to The Associated Press to-day:

"Our application for a Colombian oil concession has been withdrawn by Lord Murray. He took this action when he saw that the request for a concession was being used to stir up American opposition to the Pearson interests.

"I have just been informed of this action, which was taken on Lord Murray's own initiative. Our withdrawal is definite and absolute."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Opposition of the United States Government is responsible, according to the belief here, for the action of Lord Cowdray in withdrawing the applica ion of the Pearson Syndicate for oil and other concessions in Colombia. It is not admitted in official circles that this Government has actively opposed the concessions which the British syndicate was anxious to obtain, but the matter is closely connected with the diplomatic efforts to adjust the differences between the United States and Colombia growing out of the secession of Panama.

State Department officials said that they were without information about the withdrawal of the Pearson syndicate's application, but admitted that Colombia had tried to include the disposition of the Magdalena River oil fields in the discussion of the Panama incident. But they insisted that this Government had never entertained this proposition seriously and had left Colombia free to grant concessions to the Pearson syndicate or to an American company which is also seeking to obtain a share of the natural resources in the country.

ARREST ZELAYA IN HIS BED HERE

HE HAD BEEN IN HIDING

Gen. José Santos Zelaya, the deposed President of Nicaragua, for whom agents of the Department of Justice and Deputy United States Marshals have been searching since Monday on a warrant charging him with murder in Nicaragua, was arrested at midnight last night while asleep in bed in the apartment of Washington S. Valentine on the sixth floor of an apartment house at 645 West End Avenue.

The arrest of Zelaya followed the search by Government officials of two other apartments in which it was suspected he would be found. The first search was made on Monday at the Waldorf-Astoria. It was found that Zelaya had been warned and had fled. On Tuesday he was traced to the Hotel Hargrave, at Seventy-second Street and Columbus Avenue. Two of his sons were found at this hotel, to which the ex-President's baggage had been traced. It was said at the hotel that he had gone away a short time before and had taken with him a large envelope full of money which he had kept in the hotel safe.

George C. Craft, a special agent of the Department of Justice, went to Mr. Valentine's apartment just before midnight last night.

"I have a warrant for the arrest of José Santos Zelaya," he said after Mr. Valentine had answered his ring at the door bell. "I do not wish to put you to any inconvenience, but I am positive he is here and will have to search the apartment if you do not surrender him."

"Yes, he is here," Mr. Valentine said, "and he will not try to escape."

The agents of the Department of Justice was taken to a bedroom. He struck a match and by its glow made out the form of Gen. Zelaya asleep in bed. He held the match close to Gen. Zelaya's face, whereupon Gen. Zelaya awoke and was informed that he was under arrest.

Gen. Zelaya dressed quickly and asked permission to telephone to his lawyer, Luis F. Correa. Correa had been the Nicaraguan Minister to the United States when Zelaya was Nicaragua's President. After a brief conversation with Mr. Correa Gen. Zelaya took from his pocket the envelope filled with money that he had brought from the Hotel Hargrave. He handed this envelope to Mr. Valentine, and said he was ready to accompany the officer. Deputy United States Marshals were waiting outside. They conducted Gen. Zelaya to the West 100th Street police station, and later to the Greenwich Street police station, where he was locked up for the night.

Mr. Valentine accompanied Gen. Zelaya to the police station. It was said that he was a friend of Gen. Zelaya and had been acquainted with him while engaged in business in Honduras and Nicaragua.

The warrant on which Gen. Zelaya was arrested was signed by Assistant United States District Attorney Roger Wood and was taken out before United States Commissioner Shields. It was prepared under orders received from Attorney General McReynolds, upon the request of the State Department. The arrest is made under a clause in the treaty with Nicaragua providing that this Government shall "provisionally detain" any person suspected of a crime in Nicaragua. Extradition papers on a charge that Zelaya murdered two Nicaraguans in 1901 are said to be on their way from Nicaragua. At first it was supposed that the execution of two American citizens, Cannon and Grove, caught with a rebel army in Nicaragua, was responsible for Zelaya's arrest, but this was denied.

Gen. Zelaya's grandson, Robert Lee Zelaya, who is 5 years old, pointed out to reporters yesterday, while in a department store with his mother, some detectives who were lurking near by. The boy's mother, who is an American and a grandniece of Gen. Robert E. Lee, pointed out the detectives also. "They have followed us all day," she said. "Wherever we go, I look around for them, and in three different stores in which I have been shopping I have found them. And this is the 'land of the free,' to which our fathers came merely in order that they might be free. Because my father-in-law happened to prefer the welfare of his own people and refused to sell them out to American concession hunters he was driven from power, and now all the sinister influences of these concession hunters and public officials whom they have bribed is used to force all who are of his family to live in an atmosphere of terror and of momentary expectance of serious harm.

"I am proud of my American ancestry, but my experience as a member of the household of a man hunted down by American exploiters has made me wish time and again that the people of our country could only know enough of Central American conditions to be immune to the skillful efforts of those with a big money stake in discolor all the facts of Central American conditions and so justify the use of marines and bluejackets to destroy all forces that stand in the way of cruel commercial exploitation of the Central American people."

Mr. C. Alfonso Zelaya, who joined his wife while the interview was in progress, gave this explanation of the State Department's attitude toward his father:

"The Emery lumber claim," he said, "was worked under a concession permitting my father to make biennial examinations to see that all terms were complied with. For one thing the company was required to plant a small tree each time it sawed down a matured one and for another it was required to pay the Government a percentage of all profits. The investigators my father sent reported that the young trees had not been planted as required and that they had been offered bribes to report that everything was all right. My father canceled the concession. One of the two Americans my father is said to have killed was no American at all. He had taken out citizenship papers in a Central American state and has children there to-day surviving him."

OUTLINES ZELAYA DEFENSE.

Counsel Will Contend Offense Is a Political One.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—When told of the arrest of ex-President Zelaya in New York to-night, his counsel, Corry M. Stadden, arranged with Solicitor Folk of the State Department for a hearing to-morrow at the department, when he will try to demonstrate that the warrant for Zelaya's arrest should be cancelled because the offenses charged against him are political.

An effort will be made to show that Sixto Pinada, one of the men alleged to have been assassinated by Zelaya, was killed by another person. It will be asserted that Toribio, the second man killed, was shot by the police. In each case it will be asserted Zelaya knew nothing of the deaths until after they occurred.

The State Department declines to cancel the warrant for the provisional detention of Zelaya efforts will be made to obtain his release pending the arrival from Nicaragua of documents to support his defense.

LOSES NEW $1,000 BILL.

Detectives of the West Thirtieth Street Station are searching for a new $1,000 bill, which, according to Morris Campbell of the Hotel Claridge, Broadway and Forty-fourth Street, who owned it, was lost soon after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Slosson's billiard parlor at Broadway and Thirty-first Street.

Mr. Campbell told the police he had been playing billiards, and is of the opinion that it dropped on the floor while he was making change. In the billiard parlor it was said nothing was known of the loss, and no money had been reported found.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 27.—The Daily Chronicle and The Daily Mail, commenting editorially on the German preparations for the Panama-Pacific Exhibition, urge the British Government to reconsider its attitude.

The Daily Mail says that since the Government announced its decision not to participate the situation has undergone a change, the new American tariff having materially enhanced the prospects of increased British trade with the United States.

MORGAN GIFT TO FRANCE.

Art Objects Relating to Lives of Marie Antoinette and Napoleon.

ASTORS SWEAR OFF TAXES.

Vincent and Mrs. John Jacob Astor Say Assessments are Wrong.

Mrs. Madeline Force Astor, widow of John Jacob Astor, called at the Department of Taxes yesterday and swore off part of her assessment on personal property. She had been assessed for $250,000, and after explaining to Commissioner Charles T. White that the value of her assessable personal property had been overrated, her assessment was reduced to $170,000. Vincent Astor, who had been assessed for $350,000, sent an affidavit to the commissioners saying that he did not live in the city, and that he paid personal taxes in Rhinebeck, Dutchess County. The assessment was cancelled.

A representative of the Lawyers' Title Insurance Company appeared for the estate of the late John C. Martin and explained that $365,000 in cash belonging to the estate and now being held in a bank here should not be assessed while the matter was in the courts. He was informed that taxes on the amount would have to be paid until the affairs of the estate were settled.

DIES BEFORE DINNER PARTY

Mother-in-Law of Prof. McBain Expires Suddenly of Heart Disease.

Mrs. C. T. Bartlett, 70 years old, died suddenly of heart disease at 7:30 o'clock last night in the apartments of her son-in-law, Prof. Howard L. McBain, of Columbia University, in the Cambridge Hall Apartments, 456 Riverside Drive.

Mr. McBain, who is a Professor of Municipal Government in Columbia, was giving a small dinner party to Albert Springs, a lawyer and former classmate of 128 West Thirteenth Street, and Julian B. Beaty of 65 West Fifty-fourth Street, who, during the absence of Robert Adamson during the recent campaign, was Acting Secretary to Mayor Kline. Mrs. Bartlett had told her daughter, Mrs. McBain, that she would rest awhile before dinner, and when Mrs. McBain went to her mother's room later to call her she found Mrs. Bartlett unconscious. Dr. W. S. Bickham of 440 Riverside Drive was summoned, and when he arrived he found Mrs. Bartlett dead.

Mrs. Bartlett was the widow of the President of the Haverstraw Brick Company of Warsaw, N. Y.

'FEDERAL OWNERSHIP SURE'

Ripley Says Legislatures and Labor Unions Are Sapping the Railroads.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 26.—"Government ownership of all railroads is coming, as certain as fate," said E. P. Ripley, President of the Santa Fé, to-day. With Mrs. Ripley, he is en route to his Winter home at Santa Barbara.

"What is there to prevent it?" he added. "The Legislatures hamper and cut our profits and labor unions take what is left. We are practically between the devil and the deep sea. But Government ownership will fail.

"Is the Panama Canal an example of efficiency? It is not. I will wager the Government has done nothing in Panama that private enterprise, backed by sufficient capital, could not have accomplished at much less cost.

"Government ownership will be a great thing for stockholders, because the people always pay well, but I warn you it will be bad for the people, because the usual standard of inefficiency maintained by the Government will be employed in operating the roads."

Mr. Ripley said that general business conditions were fine and that prosperity was "rampant," but that a "few souls" had been scared by the political changes.

REBELS CLOSING ABOUT TAMPICO

Mexico City Hears a Report That Oil Port Has Been Attacked.

TRAIN SERVICE CUT OFF

HOSTILITY TO COWDRAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—A persistent rumor, which was traced to the German Club, has been in circulation here to the effect that Tampico had been attacked by the rebels. There have been indications that the rebels were closing in on the town and preparing syndicate would not ask for the concession unless it felt that the Government was prepared to support the proposal. This is despite the possibility that the United States would back up any Government that would repudiate concessions granted by Huerta.

The present administration here is continuing to carry on its programme as laid out regardless of any action taken by Washington to the contrary. It is thought that if this Congress is able to approve the concessions now pending the purpose of the administration will be served.

The Danish Consul will publish tomorrow a notice asking all subjects to register in order that they may receive protection in case of need. It is stated that by the courtesy of the British Government they will be protected by the British representatives wherever they are.

Threat to Fire Tampico Oil Tanks.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 26.—"Remove the gunboat Bravo, or we will fire on the oil tanks in the City of Tampico and along the banks of the river above."

This threat, according to private information received here to-day, was sent to the commander of the Federals at Tampico yesterday.

So long as the garrison at Tampico is aided by the guns of the Bravo, which is anchored in the river just off Fiscal Pier, there appears to be little chance for the rebels to capture and hold the city. But they might easily devastate the whole region by carrying out their threat to set fire to the oil, estimated at 100,000 barrels. Should the oil in the tanks up the river be fired, the floating flame would be carried into the heart of the city, most effectually removing the menace offered by the gunboat, and would destroy all the shipping and probably a large part of the town, too.

That the rebels will carry out their threat is regarded by some of the officials here as by no means improbable, although foreigners owning property in the neighborhood of Tampico are depending upon the promises of the rebel commanders not to molest the wells or tanks.

Tuxpam and Tampico Isolated.

Advices from Tuxpam and Tampico are meagre because the lines of communication are interrupted. Practically the only method of communication is by wireless from the warships to Vera Cruz, from which point the information thus obtained is relayed to the capital. There is a growing belief here that the campaign inaugurated by the rebels against Tuxpam is directed against Tampico more than against the former port. It is suggested that the rebels sought to attract attention to their approach upon Tuxpam so that the advance against Tampico might be overlooked and the Government send troops away from Tampico.

The point of concentration of the rebel forces is at Tamiahua, a town at the head of the lake about half way between the two ports. Rebels are also moving southward from the neighborhood of Victoria, in the State of Tampaulipas, toward Tampico. At Tampico there are said to be about 800 Federals supported by the gunboat Bravo. The War Department has announced that Gen. Joaquin Maass, Jr., who figured largely in the campaign north of Monterey, will proceed at an early date from Vera Cruz with reinforcements for Tampico, but as yet he has not started.

There is no prospect of the resumption of traffic over the main line of the National Railway. The rebels who recently blew up a train at Carneros, south of Saltillo, also destroyed several bridges. Reports have reached here that in the engagement brought on by the dynamiting the rebels were victorious, the incident developing the fact that between Carneros and Saltillo the rebels were concentrated in force.

The Federals under Gen. Velasco, who were dispatched from Saltillo westward to recapture Torreon, have thus been placed in a difficult situation, as communication with the capital has been cut.

Zapatas Becoming Active Again.

A serious situation has again developed in Morelos and adjacent States through the reappearance of the bandit forces under Emiliano and Eufemio Zapata. These two chiefs are now at Huahutla. Travelers from the south say that they have issued orders for the concentration of their followers in the neighboring hills. For some weeks past there has been a slight lull in their activities. This was due to the rainy season, which made operations difficult, and to the fact that some thousand of them had been detailed to gather corn and other crops in the isolated portions of the State of Guerrero.

The orders to the Zapatas' men are said to be to burn every hacienda they pass and start a campaign of destruction more vigorous than ever.

Preparing for Siege in Mexico City.

In the Mexican capital the organization representing the European colonies, the members of which have banded together for possible defense, is working quietly and expeditiously. The foreign residents hope to agree upon some locality where they may concentrate, if necessary, and which will be regarded as a neutral zone. Steps have been taken to procure 1,000 head of beef cattle, one hundred milch cows, 1,500 sheep and food in sufficient quantities to keep them for several weeks.

Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister, sent notification to-day to all British residents to register at the Legation in pursuance of the plan of defense against a possible emergency. A similar step was taken by the Cuban Chargé d'Affaires.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR TUXPAM

Gen. Maass Expected in Vera Cruz —Refugees Await Steamers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 26.—Gen. Joaquin Maass, Jr., is expected to arrive to-night with a trainload of troops en route to Tuxpam, which is reported hard pressed.

All the ships sailing for the United States in the near future have full bookings of American passengers eager to leave the country, although many are returning to Mexico City convinced that there is no danger.

John Lind is expected here to-morrow.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 26.—Since the departure of John Lind on the battleship Rhode Island the Consulate has received no reports from him on the situation at Tampico, nor has any word come from Rear Admiral Fletcher.

Mr. Lind sent word to-day that he could return at any time. It is believed that he will arrive to-morrow morning on a passenger train.

Wireless messages from the warships at Tampico and Tuxpam indicate that all is quiet at those ports.

Passengers who arrived to-day by coastwise setamer reported that the rebels were three miles from Tampico last night.

TUXPAM REPORTS REASSURE.

Fletcher Wires That Oil Properties There Are Uninjured.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Most of the reports received by the Government today from Mexico show that foreign nations have less cause for worry over conditions there than they had a week or so ago.

Admiral Fletcher to-day sent the Navy Department a full report on the conditions as he found them at Tuxpam, and the apprehensions that have been entertained for the past fortnight owing to representations made by Lord Cowdray and others in regard to the British and American properties in the region were definitely allayed. Admiral Fletcher's report was as follows:

Tuxpam oil district, 700 square miles, representing investments $50,000,000, half American, includes about 25 oil fields, 60 oil storage tanks in 15 or 20 localities, 175 miles pipe lines, in which 100 Americans and 20 foreigners are employed.

No pipe lines, no storage tanks, and no oil wells have been destroyed or injured. No Americans or foreigners have been killed, injured, or lives threatened, and none thrown out of employment on account of insurrection. Oil wells, oil camps, pipe lines, &c., in operation, with output somewhat below normal.

One oil well only shut down for three days; cause not ascertained.

While threats have been made of closing down the works for non-payment of assessments, no shutdown has yet been made. The only serious specific injury to the oil industry in this district is due to conditions of insurrection and unrest affecting labor employes, and general disturbances of operating resulting in decreased output. Tuxpam is well garrisoned by 400 Federals and a gunboat.

Orders were issued by the War Department to-day for the Twentieth United States Infantry to proceed from Fort Douglass, Utah, to El Paso. This movement is made because citizens of El Paso asked it on the ground that the Huerta Government would make a desperate effort to recapture Juarez from the constitutionalists, and both sides would probably pay less attention than ever heretofore to protecting residents on the American side of the boundary. A squadron of the Twelfth Cavalry, which was sent to look into the reported uprising of the Navajo Indians, will also be ordered to the border. The Tenth United States Cavalry, which is stationed at Fort Ethan Allen, Vermont, will soon be sent to the border probably to Fort Sam Houston, or to the Second Division at Texas City. This is a negro regiment. The delay in moving this regiment is due to the necessity of fitting up the transport Kilpatrick to accommodate the men and horses. The Second Cavalry, which, it is said, will be kept on the border, is to be brought north in a few weeks, according to statements made at the War Department today.

The National Red Cross Society today asked permission from the War Department to bring the wounded in today's and yesterday's battles across the international boundary into El Paso, where they could be cared for in the Red Cross hospital. The request was granted after a reference of the question to the State Department.

Prof. John Bassett Moore, counselor of the State Department and Acting Secretary of State in the absence of Secretary Bryan in Virginia, prepared an opinion in regard to the international questions involved. He held that the request might be granted on condition that the wounded of both contending forces were dealt with alike, and that such wounded persons were brought into the United States subject to the policy that has been enforced for the past year as to part sans of both Federals and Constitutionalists. The restriction was imposed that only the seriously wounded should be received, so that those whose wounds are of a minor character will not be allowed to come across the Rio Grande.

The War Department is acting on the estimate of the Red Cross officials, that probably as many as 500 wounded will be brought into the hospital at El Paso. As soon as convalescent, the wounded will be interned and rationed by the War Department until returned to Mexico.

It is reported that many of the Federal wounded are anxious to get across the boundary in order to avoid a possible massacre by their victors. The War Department, however, will draw the line sharply at admitting any but the more seriously wounded. In this Government is being put to great expense for the subsistence of interned fugitives.

For the purpose of relieving the crews of the battleships that have been on duty in Mexican waters since last February, Secretary Daniels is considering sending several vessels in the reserve fleet to Mexico. The fear of disease, as well as the possible danger of the men getting into brawls while ashore, has made it necessary to keep them on the ships continuously for nine months, much of the time in intense heat and under conditions of great hardship.

The reserve fleet, under command of Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, is stationed at Philadelphia and consists of the battleships Kearsarge, Kentucky, Iowa, Indiana, Massachsuetts, Alabama, Wisconsin, Illinois, Maine, Mississippi, Missouri, and Montana, and the scout cruiser Salem. There are enlisted men available to man two of these vessels and it is expected that orders sending two vessels from the reserve fleet to Mexico will be issued within a few days.

WHO'S WHO IN MEXICAN OIL.

Cowdray (British) and Doheny (American) Interests Paramount.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The importance of the oil producing industry of Mexico is indicated by careful reports on the subject made by the Geological Survey. Those reports show little or no interest of the Standard Oil Company in Mexico in 1911 and 1912, and this finding fits in with rumors often published that the Cowdray interests preempted the field against the Standard Oil in the last days of the Diaz régime.

According to the Geological Survey's report of 1912, 95 per cent. of the oil produced in Mexico was handled by two concerns—the Doheny interests of the United States said to have headquarters in California, and the Pearson Syndicate, of which Lord Cowdray, formerly Sir Weetman Pearson, is head. The Pearsons operate through the Compania Mexicana de Petroleo El Aguila, a producing, refining, and selling company with headquarters near Tuxpam, known as the Eagle Oil Company; the Mexican Eagle Transportation Company, with a fleet of tank steamers, built or in process of building, of 200,000 tons cargo capacity, and the Anglo-Mexican Petroleum Products Company, an export sales corporation.

The Doheny interests are concerned with all phases of the industry except refining and selling to the ultimate consumer. They operate through the Mexican Petroleum Company of Delaware, Limited, which owns the Mexican, Huasteca, Tuxpam, and Tamiahua Petroleum Companies, all producers and marketers, and the Petroleum Transport Company of Maine, with a fleet of oil tankers of 37,000 tons capacity.

The Waters-Pierce Oil Company, once a subsidiary in Texas of the Standard Oil Company, is mentioned in the report chiefly as a purchaser from the producing companies, though in 1911 the company itself went into the producing business in Mexico in the Topila district, not far from Tampico. A well-known Washington lawyer, who was counsel for the Waters-Pierce company, received $50,000 in gold from President Madero's brother the day the President took office, and this lawyer is now the local adviser of the Constitutionalists.

The production of oil became a great industry just about the time the revolutionary movement gained its greatest impetus. In 1907 the total output was only about 1,000,000 barrels. By 1910 the output had increased to only 3,300,000 barrels; but in 1911 it jumped to 14,051,000 barrels, and the next year it mounted to 16,558,000. Since then, according to the Geological Survey, the output has been limited only by the tanking capacity of the steamers employed, though political disturbances have interfered so far that most of the wells are capped to prevent the flow of oil.

"Oil companies by the score," says the Geological Survey's report, referring to the scramble for concessions in the hinterland of Tampico and Tuxpam, "sought and obtained land holdings during the year 1911, and their operations will be factors of the succeeding annual period. One was the Pearson interest, with the greatest oil well ever drilled in the world. The other constitutes the Doheny interests.

"The stimulus given to the Mexican oil trade by the development of the great Potrero del Llano (Pearson) and Juan Casiana (Doheny) oil fields at the close of 1910 turned the energy of the large companies from the pursuit of petroleum pools to the work of marketing a product embarrassingly large."

Fifty cents a barrel is thought to be a fair valuation to put upon the Mexican oil; so the output for 1912 was worth something more than $8,000,000 in gold. At this valuation, according to reports to the State Department, the oil now stored at Tuxpam and Tampico is worth about $8,500,000. At Tampico are tanked about 12,000,000 barrels, and at Tuxpam about 5,000,000.

VILLA EXECUTED SCORES.

Most Federals Killed at Juarez Apparently Shot After Surrender.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 26.—One hundred and eighty-four wounded men are in the Juarez hospitals to-night as a result of the unsuccessful Federal attack upon Juarez.

Pancho Villa and 6,000 rebel troops are back in Juarez. South of Juarez, for eighteen or twenty miles, there are no rebel soldiers. Villa says he has some further south, and that the city is well guarded against a reappearance of the enemy.

The rebels captured a number of Federal field pieces and a military train. He said yesterday that he had captured 500 Federals. To-day he brought fewer than 200 to Juarez. He admits executing some of them.

Apparently the greatest number of dead as a result of the fighting are those who faced the firing squad and paid the penalty of supporting the Huerta cause rather than that of Villa, Madero or Carranza.

A trip over the battlefield to-day failed to reveal more than a few bodies, and two of those had the hands bound—a sign that the dead men had been executed.

Rebel soldiers explained that the Federal dead had been gathered up and buried; and they pointed off vaguely beyond the hills. If there were many Federal dead as a result of the battle, except those executed, the rebels carried the bodies a great distance across the country to bury them. The general belief is that most of the men who filled the graves were shot after capture. The rebels admit executing prisoners who had volunteered for service with the Federals.

The rebel army riding into Juarez today exhibited many souvenirs of the victory. Some of the soldiers wore blue uniforms of dead Federals, divested of their brass buttons and army insignia. Many rebel officers wore capes and coats of Federal officers, and one of the rebel Captains wore a new Federal cap.

On the whole, however, the rebels had not decked themselves with many of the spoils of war. They admitted removing the uniforms of the men they executed before shooting them, as it was necessary to conserve all wearing apparel.

The suffering of the wounded rebels who were brought to Juarez were borne usually with great fortitude. With gaping wounds in the head or chest, or with limbs dangling from bullet and shrapnel wounds, the men sat or lay stolidly on the crude kitchen tables which the surgeons were using in their work of dressing the hurts.

"I never saw such indifference to pain in my life," exclaimed an El Paso doctor. "The victims scarcely ever spoke of their wounds. One man, when told that he could not live, smiled and said: 'Well, Madero died for his country; so can I.'"

That the Federals will not make an attempt to reorganize their disabled forces is generally believed in Juarez. They have been cut off from those of the States to the north and from the rest of Mexico on the south. Rebels control nearly every city of importance in the State of Chihuahua, and the State capital is an isolated spot on the map of Mexico. It is impossible for the Federals to obtain reinforcements or supplies from the south on account of many rebel commands surrounding the city. As Villa controls the northern portion of the State, it is expected that the Federals in Chihuahua City under Gov.-Gen. Mercado will be forced either to surrender or to starve. They are said to be destitute of ammunition.

A train which was abandoned by the Federal forces a few miles south of Samalayuca in the retreat to the south after the battle of Tierra Blanca was cap ured by Gen. Villa's rebel troops late this afternoon, according to an official message received to-night at the Juarez military headquarters.

On the train were four field pieces belonging to the Federal forces. The twenty cars of the train were loaded with the effects of the Federal regiments.

MARINES OFF FOR THE GULF.

Fully equipped for possible service on Mexican soil, a detachment of 250 marines will leave the New York Navy Yard at 6 o'clock this morning for Pensacola, Fla., by way of Philadelphia. While no orders as to the ultimate destination of the men have been received at the yard, it is understood that they are to be held in readiness at the Florida naval station for reembarkation to the east coast of Mexico in case of need.

The detachment has been fitted out as an expeditionary force, having a full equipment for service in the field. This includes a landing battery, consisting of one of the new so-called British-American three-inch rapid firing guns. The men will leave the yard this morning equipped for a year's service.

Col John A. Lejeune, commanding the Brooklyn force, went to Philadelphia last evening to arrange for the embarkation of his men on a transport there. The marines from Brooklyn will form part of a regiment which is assembling at the League Island Navy Yard. If ordered to land in Mexico, this regiment will operate as an advance base force in such expeditionary work as may be commanded. It will include an engineering force, a signal corps, and a mine-laying corps.

IDEALISM IN MEXICAN POLICY.

Ambassador Herrick Praises It at Paris Banquet.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Speaking at the Thanksgiving Eve banquet of the American Club to-night Myron T. Herrick, the American Ambassador, alluded to Mexico, and spoke of the constant misunderstandings which occurred in international politics. These, he said, were especially likely to occur in the case of such a policy as that followed by the United States in relation to Mexico, which, he added, "is not self-seeking, but involves an idealism which is found at the base of all great movements."

"I am confident of the upward trend of ideals in international politics and believe that the United States, by taking the stand she has, brings an element to international politics which will be of value to civilization and the progress of the world."

The banquet was presided over by W. S. Dalibet, and among the guests were Maurice Labori and Prof. Claude H. Van Tyne of the University of Michigan. M. Labori expressed his thanks for the hospitality shown him during his recent visit to America.

Spain May Send a Warship.

MADRID, Nov. 26.—The Spanish Cabinet this afternoon discussed the Mexican situation and, it is reported, decided to send a warship to Mexican waters.

Funds to Move Texas Guardsmen?

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 26.—Funds for the transportation of local companies of the Texas National Guard are said to have been deposited in Dallas banks by the United States War Department. The purpose of arranging for transportation was not made known. It was said to be sufficient to provide for quick movement of the guardsmen in case of an emergency.

ARREST LABOR HEADS IN MURDER INQUIRY

Colorado Military Authorities Put Two in Jail, but Gov. Ammons Orders One Freed.

MINE WORKERS ROUSED

TRINIDAD, Col., Nov. 26.—E. L. Doyle, Secretary-Treasurer of District No. 15 of the United Mine Workers of America, and Robert Uhlich district organizer, were arrested by the military authorities to-day and locked in the city jail, pending a further investigation of the allegations contained in the confession of Louis Zancanelli to the murder of Detective G. W. Belcher. Gen. John Chase afterward ordered that the military patrol be doubled and extra precautions have been taken to prevent a possible outbreak.

Doyle was released from jail late tonight after the receipt of an order from Gov. Ammons demanding that he be set free.

The arrest of Doyle caused very much feeling in union circles. It followed his appearance at an inquiry at which he was questioned concerning his knowledge of the whereabouts of A. B. McGary, a national organizer of the United Mine Workers of America, for whose arrest a military order was issued this morning by Gen. Chase.

Doyle admitted having written to McGary at Des Moines questioning him regarding the report that McGary had signed blank tickets found in Zancanelli's possession when he was arrested. Information that the letter had been written had reached Gen. Chase previously when the letter was opened by mistake by a Des Moines attorney of the same name. Robert Uhlich has identified the signature of McGary on the cards found on Zancanelli, who swears that he was hired to commit the murder.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 26.—A request that he act as Chairman and referee was presented to Gov. E. M. Ammons to-day when the committees representing the Colorado operators and striking miners met in an effort to reach a settlement, or at least a truce, in the Colorado coal strike.

SUES A WOMAN FOR $50,000

Miss McGill Defendant in Action for Alienation.

Papers were filed yesterday in the Supreme Court in Jersey City by Mrs. Mary Mayer of 78 Sherman Avenue, Jersey City, in a suit for $50,000 damages against Miss Eleanora McGill, daughter of the late John D. McGill, who was President of the Hudson County National Bank.

The papers ask the amount, claiming that Miss McGill alienated the affections of William Mayer, who is a chauffeur for Miss McGill and husband of the plaintiff. Mayer has been in the employ of Miss McGill since early in 1912. According to the papers filed by Mrs. Mayer, she alleges that he has neglected his family. She got an order from the court demanding that he pay his wife $4 for the support of herself and five-year-old son. When Mrs. Mayer rebuked her husband for his conduct toward his family, she says he answered:

"Well, I have to keep my job."

Miss McGill was the wife of William B. Carr, whom she divorced. She was allowed to resume her maiden name.

She also announced gifts of $1,000 each from Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and James H. Post, both of whom had given before.

Six Nickels from Bowery Boys.

Mrs. Nathaniel B. Potter, Captain of Team 29, carried off third place with $23,421. Miss Elizabeth F. Dodge was fourth with $20,080, of which two gifts of $10,000 each were given anonymously. The Chairman of the Bronx Committee said that Lewis D. Schoenberg had contributed $1,000 through the efforts of Martin Vogel, Sub-Treasurer of the United States. In making his announcement of $44.30 Cleveland A. Dunn, Captain of Team 19, said that the thirty cents was in six nickel contributions from men of the Bowery branch. Capt. Seth M. Milliken of Team 20 announced $1 as his total collection from four subscribers. This was the smallest contribution, with the exception of the $1 from the janitor, which was the Executive Committee's sole collection for the day.

Announcer Kingsley termed Francis Louis Slade, Captain of Team 1, the "royal flush in our pack" when he said that his team had gotten $9,780, of which $6,000 was the gift of Charles W. Harkness, who had previously given $4,000; $2,000 additional from Mrs. Frederick Billings, and $1,000 from Waldron P. Brown.

Chairman Perkins then called on the Rev. Richard C. Morse for a blessing before taking up the remaining business of the evening, which consisted in reading resolutions of thanks to the various firms, corporations, and individuals who have helped the cause and the giving of three cheers and a tiger for all those who had taken part in the campaign.

Some Resolutions of Thanks.

The first resolution was to thank the Guaranty Trust Company for furnishing the headquarters for the noonday luncheons free of cost. The others were:

We hereby express our united thanks to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, to J. P. Morgan & Co., and to the Heidelberg Building for their displaying so prominently the clocks used in the campaign. May time deal gently with them all.

From the bottom of our souls we thank the Mason-Seaman Taxicab Company for the many taxicabs furnished us without cost.

Dodges Gave Another $100,000.

Cleveland H. Dodge, who gave $275,000 to the fund direct and then contributed one-half of the conditional $100,000 announced anonymously on Tuesday night, said he had begun to raise money for the Y. M. C. A. before most of those present were born and that he knew from his experience that the present fund would not have been completed but for the efforts of George W. Perkins. He called for three cheers for Mr. Perkins, which were given with a will. The other $50,000 of the conditional $100,000 was given by Miss Grace H. Dodge. There were lusty cheers also for the two Dodges, who have given between them $625,000. John D. Rockefeller and Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., contributed altogether $350,000.

Charles S. Ward, general director of the campaign, was called on for a speech. He said that it was a glorious victory for New York, and because of the way things looked on Tuesday night it was glorious because it was a difficult one. Miss Grace H. Dodge said that she wanted to thank them all on behalf of the girls of New York. Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan thanked the men for being content with $1,000,000 of the fund and allowing the women to have $3,000,000.

Mr. Perkins called for three cheers for Miss Cora L. Tatham, General Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., who had been sent out West to get a subscription and was still absent last night.

Contributions Numbered 17,244.

"I have just this word to say" said Mr. Perkins, "and I feel it from the bottom of my heart, and that is, had it not been for the large number of small subscriptions it would have been utterly impossible to wake this town up to its duty and obtain the large subscriptions. It has been the cumulative effect of these mites that has brought out the large donations. What a wonderful Thanksgiving the success of this fund means for this city. New York has won a great victory for itself."

Mr. Perkins then said that the total number of subscribers was 17,244, and these subscribers were cheered collectively.

William M. Kingsley, one of the members of the Executive Committee, announced that some day they were going to do it again for $400,000. "In planning our campaign," said Mr. Kingsley, "we found that the Salvation Army had also planned to raise $1,000,000 for a memorial to Gen. Booth, $560,000 of which was to be raised out West, and the other $500,000 in New York. They have already raised $100,000 of the amount in the East, and need $400,000 more. We promised them that we would help them on their proposition, but," laughingly concluded Mr. Kingsley, "not just at present. We are tired, but triumphant."

J. K. M'GUIRE FOUND, IS IN PORTO RICO

proceedings last Monday and denied on the stand that he had made any attempt to restrain Condit from making revelations concerning the McGuire brothers. In the course of the testimony, however, he acknowledged that he had known of the McGuire dealings for a long time and that he had asked Condit for a memorandum of his dealings with the McGuires.

James K. McGuire, according to Condit, solicited a campaign contribution from Condit's company, the Union Oil Company of California, on Aug. 5, 1912. The statement or memorandum which Condit made for Chamberlin is dated Aug. 13, 1913. This was the time when Tammany was desirous of obtaining evidence against Sulzer.

The Condit statement specifically names James K. McGuire as the man who arranged for the "closed" road specifications in the interest of the Barber Asphalt Company. It was McGuire himself, according to this statement, who made this acknowledgment to Mr. Condit. Here is the Condit statement:

Aug. 13, 1913.

Early in August, 1912, James K. McGuire called on me in our office. He said he was no longer connected with the Barber Asphalt Paving Company. He said he knew of the asphalt specifications used by the New York State Highway Department, which gave the Barber Company most of the highway business for its materials. He said this arrangement had been made by him with the Highway Department.

He said a new arrangement was being made. Bids would be received early in September for 500 miles of road construction; that it was proposed to admit five asphalt companies, each for 100 miles of the road to be built; 100 miles Barber Company, 100 miles Warner-Quinlan, 100 miles United States Asphalt Company, and we could have our material specified for 100 miles of the roads on the same terms and conditions as the other companies.

I asked what the terms were. He said we must contribute $5,000 toward the campaign fund and his brother George McGuire of Syracuse must get 1 cent per gallon for acting as our agent. He said the Barber, Warner-Quinlan, and United States Asphalt Companies were going into the arrangement.

During the same week I was called twice on the long-distance telephone by a person who said he was George McGuire of Syracuse. He spoke each time about my talk with James K. McGuire and wanted to know if we would agree to the proposed arrangement. On the second day he telephoned I told him our company would have nothing to do with the matter.

FILLMORE CONDIT.

A reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES called on Arthur B. Chamberlin yesterday in his office, 7 East Forty-second Street. Chamberlin told why he had obtained this statement from Condit.

"It is not true," said Chamberlin, "that I got the statement for Tammany Hall or for any one else but myself. I am not even a member of Tammany and I don't know Charles F. Murphy. I do know his nephew, Charles F. Murphy, Jr., very well, but only in a business way. The reason I got that statement was to have a card up my sleeve in my fight for fair specifications. Why, I represent nearly every asphalt company in the country, except the Barber Company, and I haven't sold any material in this State for over a year. I wanted to get fair road specifications. I took Mr. Condit's statement up-State with me."

Mr. Chamberlin said that he had told only one man about the contents of the statement.

"Who was that man?" asked the reporter.

"That was John J. Delaney, Commissioner of Efficiency," replied Chamberlin.

"Did Delaney take the story to Tammany Hall?" asked the reporter.

"I had a talk with Delaney only last week," replied Chamberlin, "and he assured me that he had kept the matter strictly confidential."

It appears, however, that the news got out somewhere, and that it was circulated as far west as Buffalo. It was there that George H. McGuire and James K. McGuire heard it. On the evening of Nov. 5, the night before George H. McGuire took the stand in the John Doe proceedings for the first time, the McGuires met Chamberlin.

"They came to me in the Manhattan Hotel that evening," said Chamberlin yesterday. "They asked me whether I had any affidavits concerning them. I said that I didn't, and that was true."

Chamberlin volunteered no information to the McGuires concerning the Condit statement. George H. McGuire appeared on the stand on the following day, not knowing that District Attorney Whitman already had an inkling of the story.

"I am perfectly willing to testify again if Mr. Whitman wants me," said Chamberlain, "but as I told him last time, I have nothing to tell. I am a good Democrat, and never was in favor of Tammany Hall politics. I sought to protect the decent Democrats in my testimony by telling what Condit told me about the McGuire dealings. As set forth in his statement to me, James K. McGuire did not say he was collecting for the Democratic Party. He merely said that he was collecting for the campaign."

Tammany Hall, it was reported yesterday, might assert that McGuire never had any association with the organization.

District Attorney Whitman, it is understood, has evidence to offset any such move. He will endeavor to show, it is understood, that McGuire worked with Tammany and that the funds which it is charged he solicited from corporations were intended for the Democratic State Committee. Whitman has evidence, it is understood, that at least one asphalt corporation paid the $5,000 contribution

OSBORNE PLANS INQUIRY.

Carlisle Charges First Will Be Considered by Glynn's Investigator.

James W. Osborne, Gov Glynn's graft investigator, and Arthur T. Warner, his assistant, were in conference at 115 Broadway yesterday regarding methods of procedure. It was announced after the conference that Mr. Osborne, sitting as a Commissioner under the Moreland Act, would begin the inquiry at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon at the Capitol.

The first matter to be taken up by Commissioner Osborne, it was said, would be the Rubino charges against State Highway Commissioner John N. Carlisle.

After the Carlisle case is disposed of the investigation will consider the fight which the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company has been waging against the Barber Asphalt Paving Company regarding road specifications; the appointment by Commissioner Carlisle of George C. Diehl, Harold Barker, and George de H. Washington as members of a Highway Advisory Board with salaries of $10 a day, and then the alleged Cooperstown conference between William Sulzer, George H. McGuire, and Commissioner Carlisle, where important decisions regarding specifications, it is said, were reached.

Commissioner Osborne denied that as expected any friction with District Attorney Whitman. Whitman, he intimated, would be busy with the campaign graf evidence while he would be considering other matters.

Indications of friction came from other sources, however. It is understood that Gov Glynn want Osborne to take charge of everything which clearly is not in Mr. Whitman's jurisdiction. Everett P. Fowler's attorney questions Whitman's jurisdiction in that case.

Whitman insists that the indictment rightly was found here instead of in Onondaga County, and that it is his duty to prosecute Fowler.

It is understood that Mr. Whitman will be glad to turn over to Mr. Osborne all cases over which clearly he has no jurisdiction, but that he insists that there shall be no interference when jurisdiction lies in two or more counties of which this county is one.

COL. MULHALL LOSES SUIT.

Court Directs That World's $10,000 Be Split with Barry.

Trial of the suit of Richard Barry against Col. Martin H. Mulhall for one-half of the $10,000 the latter received from The World for the series of letters which the Colonel obtained while acting as the confidential agent of the National Association of Manufacturers began before Justice Greenbaum in the Supreme Court yesterday. It speedily terminated by the court directing the jury to return a verdict for the plaintiff for $5,125.

The Colonel was the main witness and after him came several employes of The World, but none of the testimony served to shake the strength of the agreement entered into between the Colonel and Barry that the proceeds of the sale of the documents should be split fifty-fifty. It was contended by the defense that the plaintiff was supposed to get his profit from the transactor by the compilation of the letters in book form which it was thought might have a decided charm for one of the big political parties. Then it came out that whatever money came from publishers or politics should be split fifty-fifty. In brief, it appeared that Mulhall and Barry were to market the letters and reap as big a harvest from them as possible.

After the verdict Col. Mulhall said: "I have only begun to fight. The case will be appealed."

Conscience Fund Gets $1 Man Found

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—One of the queer contributions to the Treasury's conscious fund came to-day in a letter from New York. The sender inclosed a dollar bill which he said he had found on the street in Washington. He didn't know what to do with it. The Treasury did and put it in the fund.

CLERK FORGED $360,000 STOCKS

Mr. Brown retained Norman B. Beecher of the firm of Burlingham, Montgomery & Beecher of 27 William Street, as his attorney, and after a long conference with Mr. Brown, Mr. Beecher late yesterday afternoon made this statement:

Charles T. Brown & Co., Stock Exchange Building, Philadelphia, Penn., under which name Charles T. Brown does business, is engaged in the security investment business. From time to time Mr. Brown has been accustomed to place loans secured by Stock Exchange collateral for customers in New York City and elsewhere. Among these customers is Miss E. B. Foye, a member of the New York Consolidated Stock Exchange. At various times during the last two months Foye has placed loans through Mr. Brown with various banks in Philadelphia. The collateral furnished by Foye as security for these loans has in each instance been certificates of stock of the General Electric Company standing in Foye's name. These loans have aggregated some $200,000. Yesterday Foye secured from Mr. Brown a certified check for $97,000, representing the proceeds of loans which Mr. Brown had placed for Foye, secured by further General Electric Company certificates of stock, and with the check in his pocket returned to New York.

In the meantime some of those who had taken part in the last loan took the precaution of telephoning to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in New York City to assure themselves that Miss Foye was registered on the books of the General Electric Company as owner of the large amount of stock for which he had presented certificates. The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company advised them that Miss Foye was not a stockholder of the General Electric Company. Immediately upon receipt of this information the police in New York were notified that Foye had left Philadelphia on the Pennsylvania Railroad train leaving there at 4 P. M., and requesting the New York police to cause his arrest upon its arrival in New York City. Upon the arrival of the train at the Pennsylvania Station Mr. Foye was arrested.

Steps are being taken by Mr. Brown and the banking institutions in Philadelphia to recover as much as possible of the money which Foye had secured. Attachments have been issued, and every effort is being made to discover Foye's assets.

Seek Foye's Accounts.

Mr. Beecher said that he understood that Mr. Brown's note went in with the collateral, which would seem to indicate that Mr. Brown might be held responsible for the difference in the amount obtained on the forged certificates and the amount recovered. Mr. Beecher said further that every bank in New York had been communicated with in the effort to find deposit accounts in Foye's name, and that if anybody knew of any such accounts he hoped that in the interest of justice they would communicate with him. Mr. Beecher also said that his information was twenty-six and not twenty-one certificates were stolen and forged. It had been stated by a person connected with the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company that twenty-one was the number.

Concerning the Consolidated Stock Exchange dealings of Foye, Mr. Beecher said that he had been informed that the prisoner had recently squared up a number of small accounts on the Exchange. Previous to that, he said, the young man's standing on the Exchange had been a bit cloudy.

No securities have been stolen from the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. Foye had no access to the securities of the company. Foye was a temporary clerk, engaged upon the best of references. We feel that it is to those who have loaned money that no further statement shall be made until all the facts are known.

Foye could not obtain securities, Mr. Sloan explained, as they are kept in strong boxes, to which he had no access. The obtaining of the blank stock certificates, which are kept in books similar to large blank check books, would not have been a difficult matter, he said, despite the fact that Foye did not have ready access to them.

"The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company will not suffer financially as the result of the forging of the blank certificates," said Mr. Sloan. "The losers will be those persons who loaned money on the certificates, the circulating of which the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company was, of course, entirely in ignorance of."

"Do you think it possible that Foye may have an accomplice?" Mr. Sloan was asked.

"No, no," he replied. "I am convinced that there was no one concerned in the theft but himself."

Once Employed by Gates.

Mr. Sloan said that Foye had at one time been employed by the firm of which the late John W. Gates was the head. He is also said to have enjoyed the confidence of John W. Gates's son, the late Charles G. Gates.

It also became known yesterday that in addition to the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia, which issued the $97,000 certified check on Tuesday, that three other Philadelphia banks and the brokerage firm of Chandler Bros. & Co. of 111 Broadway had figured in the loans negotiated for Foye.

Chandler Bros. & Co. issued this statement:

The facts are that Foye, through C. T. Brown & Co. of Philadelphia, negotiated loans for $200,000 on 2,000 shares of General Electric stock, of which 1,400 shares were placed with four Philadelphia institutions and 600 with our firm. While the loans were being placed on Tuesday our office, as an extraordinary precaution, inquired of the transfer office after the number of shares in Foye's name, but did not receive word until 4 P. M. that the stock was not on the transfer records.

The arrest of Foye on the arrival in New York followed, checks and cash for $150,000 being recovered and attached. It is believed that further recoveries will be made and the losses minimized. Our loss is fully protected under a $100,000 Lloyd policy.

It is stated that the General Electric Company signatures to the stock certificates are valid, but that the transfer and registrar's certificates are forged.

Early yesterday morning Foye, after spending the night in a cell of the Greenwich Street Police Station, was taken to Police Headquarters, where Inspector Faurot, head of the Detective Bureau, endeavored to get a statement from him, but without success. The prisoner complained that the cells in the Greenwich Station were very uncomfortable, and, furthermore, he was indignant because he was taken to Police Headquarters in a patr

DAILY CABLE DISPATCHES TO THE TIMES

PLAGUE IS RAGING THROUGH ECUADOR

Scores Dying Weekly from Bubonic Disease at Guayaquil, Panama Hears.

REVOLUTION GAINS GROUND

Political and Commercial Crisis Said to be Imminent—Government Suppressing News.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 26.—Passengers just arrived here from Guayaquil report that bubonic plague is raging in that city and that the Government of Ecuador is suppressing the news.

The plague is especially prevalent in the rural districts, it is alleged, where scores of persons are dying weekly. Two hundred and thirty persons are reported to have died within the past two weeks.

The passengers also say that the revolution is growing daily in Ecuador and that a commercial and political crisis is imminent in that country.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Dispatches to the United States Public Health Service from Guayaquil, Ecuador, show alarming increases in the number of cases of plague and yellow fever there. Forty-six cases were reported for October, and there is an increase to 112, as shown in the latest report received last week. Deaths from one disease or the other range from 5 to 11 daily.

The local Government, failing to obtain a loan for the amount required for the construction of an adequate sanitary system, has undertaken the work on its own account with such means as it can command, abandoning the French plant that was long under consideration and which received the approval of Col. Gorgas of the United States Public Health Service when he inspected the harbor of Guayaquil last Spring.

The Government of Ecuador has been notified by the United States that unless Guayaquil is cleaned up and a successful sanitary system installed all vessels putting in there will be barred from passing the Panama Canal, because of the danger to the health of passengers and crews of vessels using the canal.

Guayaquil, sometimes called Santiago de Guayaquil, the principal seaport of the Republic of Ecuador, is situated on the western bank of the Guayauil River, about twenty miles from its mouth. It has about 25,000 population.

The site of the city forms part of a low, level tract of ground bounded on the north by the hills of Santa Ana and the streets are for the most part laid out with great regularity. To the north lies the old town, mostly inhabited by the poorer classes; to the south the new town. The houses are for the most part built of bamboo.

PANAMA CHINESE LOSE.

Supreme Court Rules They Must Pay Head Tax—Decide to Stay.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 26.—The Supreme Court to-day decided the Chinese registration law in favor of the Government and to the effect that all Chinamen must register and pay $250 each as head tax, or be expelled from the country immediately.

Leaders of the Chinese say they will comply with the requirements and remain.

MISHAP TO DAUCOURT.

But Airman Attempting Paris-Cairo Flight is Not Hurt.

KONIEH, Asia Minor, Nov. 26.—Pierre Daucourt, the French aviator who, with a passenger, is attempting a flight from Paris to Cairo, was overtaken by a storm in the Taurus Mountains to-day.

While making a landing Daucourt's aeroplane was dashed violently to the ground and wrecked.

Neither Daucourt nor his passenger was hurt.

NOT TO MODIFY HOME RULE.

Asquith Reported to Have Decided Against Ulster's Exclusion.

BELFAST, Nov. 26.—According to The Belfast News Letter, Premier Asquith intends that the Home Rule bill shall pass into law as it now stands, and so informed a delegation of Ulster Liberals who protested to him against the exclusion of Ulster from the provisions of the measure.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Chief Liberal Whip, F. H. Illingworth, addressing the National Liberal Federation at Leeds to-night, said there would be no general election prior to 1915.

MRS. PANKHURST SAILS.

Carries $20,000 Away and Expects Arrest on Landing.

With $20,000 in her pockets and a gentle smile on her face, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the English militant suffragette leader and mother of Christabel and Sylvia, sailed for Plymouth at noon yesterday on the White Star steamship Majestic, accompanied by Mrs. Rheta Child-Dorr and her press agent, Miss Joan Wickham. Very few women connected with the American suffrage movement were at the pier to see her away, as the goodbyes had been spoken at the Eltinge Theatre after the lecture on Tuesday, Mrs. Pankhurst said.

When Mrs. Pankhurst received the reporters on the deck of the Majestic she was asked to step into the social hall out of the noise of the whistles on the river. She declined, as she said she loved noise and always spoke better under those conditions than in a quiet room.

"I am very pleased with my visit to the United States," she said, "and shall come again next year, even if we do get the vote, as we need the money. We women are as much entitled to come over to America for contributions as the Irish are, who have taken millions of dollars away to fight for Home Rule.

"As soon as I land at Plymouth I expect to be arrested and sent to jail to serve my unexpired sentence. I shall probably go on hunger strike again and the authorities will have to release me. It is possible that they will take away the money I am taking with me. You never can tell what the English police will be up to next.

"I have found the American public broad in the matter of the book written by my daughter, but some individuals are narrow. The book will continue to be sold and my daughter will continue to live in France and do her editorial work there, where she cannot be molested by the English Government. I shall have to campaign in England and take my chances of arrest and imprisonment, for my work is distinct from my daughter's and each must operate along her own line."

BORWICK SUITS SETTLED.

Three Actions Have Apparently Been Disposed of Privately.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The actions in which Mrs. George Borwick, who obtained a divorce a few months ago, was the chief figure, have apparently been settled privately. Mrs. Borwick has resumed her maiden name and is now living with her parents in New York.

When the divorce action was heard there were three suits pending. In the first Mrs. Borwick sued her husband for certain articles which he refused to surrender. Then Mr. Borwick was the defendant in an action brought by a firm which claimed a large sum for articles of clothing supplied to Mrs. Borwick. The third action was the Chancery Court case of Borwick against Robb. Mr. Robb is a London solicitor against whom Mrs. Borwick brought an action for libel in connection with the early proceedings regarding her suit for the restitution of conjugal rights.

These actions have been omitted from the official lists, indicating, apparently, their satisfactory disposal privately. It is said that after the divorce action both parties agreed that it was preferable to obviate any further discussion of their domestic troubles in court.

ROYAL SNUB FOR SHAW.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 27.—The Berlin correspondent of The Times in reporting the first performance of George Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion," at the Deutsches Theatre, says the critics do not give the play a very favorable reception.

After the second act Prince August Wilhelm of Prussia left the theatre. It is thought that this is significant on account of Mr. Shaw's side hits at religious feeling and the motives of martyrs.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—George Bernard Shaw is rehearsing "The Philanderer" for production in New York in December. The American actress, Thais Lawton, has been engaged for the leading woman's rôle.

MURDERER GETS 10 YEARS.

METZ, Nov. 26.—Lieut. Tieges of the artillery was to-day sentenced by court-martial to ten years' imprisonment and to be cashiered on the charge of killing Ensign Förster of his own battery.

Tieges had been celebrating by a long drinking bout his acquittal by court-martial on Sept. 29 on a charge of disturbing a religious service. His brother officers refused his invitation to join him, and Tieges thereupon commanded his junior officer, Förster, to attend. When Förster remonstrated with Tieges for getting intoxicated, Tieges drew a revolver and shot him dead.

The severity of the sentence on Tieges is almost unprecedented, German courts-martial as a rule dealing leniently with officers charged with offenses of this kind.

EXTRA TAX ON UNMARRIED.

French Senate Committee's Proposal in Regard to Income Tax Bill.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—French spinsters and bachelors over the age of 30, unless they have at least three persons dependent on them, are to be subject to an increase of 20 per cent. in the income tax imposed by the bill now under consideration.

The Senate Committee in charge of the bill introduced this clause to-day, when it ended its examination of the measure, which has taken four years to prepare.

The report is soon to be submitted to the Senate.

Burial of Mme. Marchesi.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Mme. Marchesi was buried in the family vault in Montmartre Cemetery to-day beside the bodies of her husband and her daughter, Stella. The body was brought from London. Mme. Marchesi's daughter Blanche, and several of the famous teacher's pupils were present at the ceremony.

Big Liner to be Launched Dec. 17.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—The North German Lloyd Company announces that the new liner Columbus, of 35,000 tons, will be launched at the Schichau yards at Danzig on Dec. 17 by the Crown Princess. A sister ship of the Columbus is also being built at Danzig. The two vessels will be far larger than any at present in the fleet of the company.

MADONNA FOR PUBLIC VIEW.

Raphael's Painting to be Reframed and Exhibited by Duveens.

The famous "Cowper Madonna," by Raphael, which, as reported in THE TIMES of yesterday, was purchased by Duveen Brothers of this city for a record price of more than $500,000, will arrive in New York within the next two months and the public will have an opportunity to see it.

The picture is to be reframed, which is the cause of the delay. It is now in a frame of 1810, very ugly and not at all in keeping. The Duveen Brothers are sending to Florence to have a model made of the frame that is around another of Raphael's famous pictures, the "Madonna del Gran Duca," in the Pitti Palace. This is a Florentine frame of the period and will make a worthy setting for the beautiful Madonna which is to come to this city. It will take from six to seven weeks to make the new frame and the picture will arrive here about the last of January, it is expected.

It will then be placed on exhibition in the galleries of the Duveen Brothers, 720 Fifth Avenue, corner of Fifty-sixth Street.

CONTRADICTS THE DUVEENS.

Lady Desborough Denies They Offered to Sell the Raphael to England

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 27.—Lady Desborough writes to The Times, contradicting the Duveens' statement that they offered the Panshanger "Madonna" by Raphael to the nation. She says:

"The picture was offered by us to the Trustees of the National Gallery before its sale to the present purchasers was agreed to, not by the purchasers after they bought the picture."

BRITAIN IMPEDING HAGUE CONFERENCE

It Is Now Said the Next Peace Meeting Cannot Be Held Before 1916.

FEARS FOR LONDON TREATY

Correspondence with Powers on Rights of Shipping in Time of War Reveals Divergent Views.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 26.—Confirmation of recent reports of the probable postponement of the third Peace Conference at The Hague is found in declarations made to-day in diplomatic and official circles.

It is stated that, in view of the necessary preparatory labors, it will be impossible for the international conference to assemble before 1916 or 1917 at the earliest instead of in 1915, as originally planned.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs informed the Second Chambers to-day that the premature convocation of the Third Peace Conference would seriously hinder the preparation of the programme. He added that the Netherlands Government was considering the conclusion of a convention with the United States in the spirit of Secretary of State Bryan's peace plan.

Recently, he added, the Dutch Government submitted to the Washington Government a proposal looking to the convocation of an international commission to devise measures to avert the danger of the spread of yellow fever through the opening of the Panama Canal. Washington received this favorably, and the Governments at Berlin, London, Paris, and Lisbon had been communicated with in regard to the subject.

The Minister concluded by saying that the Dutch Government was not able to support the agitation against the treatment of political prisoners by Russia, because it considered this matter outside its purview.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—It is understood here that the main obstacle to the holding of a Peace Conference in 1915 is the reluctance of the British Government to submit to it the Declaration of London, which involves radical changes in the principles of international law relating to the rights of shipping in case of hostilities.

The correspondence so far exchanged on that subject has, it is said, revealed such wide differences as to jeopardize the success of the conference.

WOMEN'S MUNICIPAL PARTY.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Women's Municipal Party was formally started at a private meeting at the Duchess of Marlborough's Sunderland House last evening. Two hundred women were present.

The Duchess of Marlborough, who presided, said the new party would be strictly non-political and would represent women as women.

Women's interests, as illustrated in municipal activity, would be centralized on a platform broad enough to include women of all political views. In proof of that it was proposed to lay the women's programme before the leaders of the municipal parties to insure that it was a programme to which all women could give united support.

New members elected to the Council included Mrs. Bernard Shaw and Lady Beerbohm Tree.

TO ABANDON PLYMOUTH.

Express Hamburg-American Liners Will Call at Southampton.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Hamburg-American Company has decided to make Cherbourg the first port of call for its express steamers from New York on the homeward voyages. This will involve the abandonment of Plymouth as a port of call, passengers for England being landed at Southampton.

Nothing is definitely known at Plymouth concerning the cause of the decision, but it is pointed out that the naval authorities refused to allow the Imperator to be berthed inside the breakwater.

MRS. ROOSEVELT RETURNING

Leaves Chile for Panama — Col. Roosevelt Going to Valparaiso.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss L. Margaret Roosevelt, daughter of W. Emlen Roosevelt, left here to-day for Panama on their return journey to the United States, while Col Roosevelt departed on a visit to Southern Chile.

The ex-President's next stop will be at Valparaiso.

ELLIOTT STAYS IN JAIL.

American Accused in England Is Remanded for Another Week.

EAST GRINSTEAD, Sussex, Nov. 26.—The case of John Love Elliott, formerly of New York, had a hearing lasting several hours to-day in the local police court, where a full bench of magistrates sat to investigate the charges of serious and flagrant breaches of the law brought against Elliott on the allegation of neighbors. The public were excluded from the court.

Elliott has been in custody since Nov. 21, when he was arrested on a warrant issued after several persons residing in the vicinity of his residence had communicated to the police circumstances said to have been related to them by his two daughters, who had lived alone with him there since March 20.

The court ordered that Elliott be remanded for another week in custody.

Kaiser Able to Travel.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—Emperor William has so far recovered from his recent indisposition that he was able to depart to-day on a visit to his brother-in-law, the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, at the latter's hunting lodge. His sojourn will be followed by a visit to the preserves of his friend Prince von Fürstenberg.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

BRIEG, Silesia, Nov. 26.—The entire local registered mail was stolen by a band of thieves from a train approaching this town last evening. One of the robbers used the simple device of pulling the emergency signal, which brought the train to a standstill, and, while the train crew searched the coaches, the other members of the gang entered the mail car, seized the sacks, and walked off unnoticed. It is thought that the cash booty was small.

HONGKONG, Nov. 26.—Thirty Chinese were drowned in the harbor here to-day, when a launch in which they were being conveyed from the wharf to a steamer was run down and sunk by the Japanese steamship Sechu Maru.

PRINCESS LOUISE EVICTED.

American Owner of House in Paris Obtains a Court Order.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Princess Louise of Belgium, daughter of the late King Leopold, has by order of the Paris courts been evicted from her residence in the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne by her landlady, Mrs. Whitcomb, widow of a wealthy Californian, who left much valuable house property in Paris.

The Princess failed to pay her rent and Mrs. Whitcomb recently had her furniture sold by public auction, but the prices obtained were low. Mrs. Whitcomb then obtained an order against the Princess to compel her to place in her residence enough furniture to cover the amount of the rent. The Princess failed to comply, and the court has now expelled the royal tenant and appointed an expert to assess the damage to the house.

The Princess did not appear in court.

FORBIDS TALK TO SMOKERS.

Head Master of Harrow Takes Extreme Measures on Tobacco.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Smoking has not only been forbidden to boys at Harrow, but by an order just promulgated it is also forbidden to visitors to the famous old school.

The head master, the Rev. Lionel Ford, has posted a notice to this effect, and he also requests the boys not to appear in the high street or other public roads adjoining the school with persons who are smoking.

The boys are asking advice regarding the procedure they should adopt should a scholar meet his father in the high street and the father be smoking. Is he to "cut" his parent or sternly order him to cease smoking?

THE LAST DREADNOUGHTS.

Reported Change in British Plans—$14,000,000 Ship Launched.

DEVONPORT, Nov. 26.—The British superdreadnought Warspite, an improvement on the Queen Elizabeth, was launched here to-day in the presence of an enormous crowd. She is to be driven entirely by oil engines, and has receptacles for the storage of 4,000 tons of liquid fuel, sufficient to enable her to go around the world.

The armament of the Warspite will consist of eight fifteen-inch guns and several anti-airship guns.

The vessel was laid down on Oct. 31, 1912. Her estimated cost is $14,000,000.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Globe claims semi-official authority for stating that the "all-big-gun" era will come to an end with the completion of the group of vessels to which the Warspite belongs.

The paper says that the ships of the Royal Sovereign type about to be laid down will be of a new design, smaller than that of the battleships now under construction, and adds that the Admiralty's decision in this connection was due to the lessons learned during the recent naval manoeuvres on the East Coast, when the submarines demonstrated their ability to take such offensive action as to render battleships almost impotent.

BLACKSOD CONTRACTS LET.

Work for the Great Harbor on the Irish Coast Arranged For.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Contracts for the construction of a great harbor at Blacksod Bay, on the west coast of Ireland, were signed in London to-day, according to The Pall Mall Gazette.

The work is being undertaken in furtherance of the scheme for the establishment of a line of steamers between Blacksod and Halifax and Boston.

A railroad to connect Blacksod with the existing railroads in Ireland is also to be constructed.

BRIDGES' GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mrs. Thomas A. Edison Arranges Reception in Their Honor.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 26.—With many relatives and friends from all parts of the United States and representatives of colleges in the East, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. William D. Bridge of 71 Snyder Street celebrated their golden wedding anniversary to-night with a reception in Miller Memorial Chapel of the First Methodist Church of this city. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, who gave the chapel in honor of her own parents.

Dr. and Mrs. Bridge were married in the Hanover Street Methodist Church, Boston, on Thanksgiving Day, 1863. Dr. Bridge was born at Duxbury, Mass., seventy-three years ago, while Mrs. Bridge is a year younger. Both are descendants of old Puritan stock.

Dr. Bridge entered the ministry in 1861, and in 1881 he became the secretary of Bishop John Heyl Vincent of Chicago, now Chancellor of the Chautauqua movement. He retired from active ministerial duty in Boston in 1892, owing to the illness of Mrs. Bridge. He was associated with Mrs. Edison's father, Lewis Miller, and Bishop Vincent in founding the Chautauqua Association.

While a student at Wilbraham (Mass.) Academy Dr. Bridge first became interested in stenography, in the development of which he was later to play a part. By hard work he mastered a system of shorthand largely of his own, and in the days that preceded the civil war Dr. Bridges went about from place to place taking down speeches at mass meetings. He made the acquaintance of Sir Isaac Pitman, and was an intimate friend of Ben Pitman until his death. He is now historian and librarian of the National Shorthand Reporters' Association.

More than 300 guests attended the reception to-night, at which a purse of gold was presented to Dr. and Mrs. Bridge.

Dr. Bridge's father and two uncles were clergymen, and Mrs. Bridge's two surviving brothers are both Methodist clergymen, one of them the senior chaplain of the United States Navy.

STOVER SENDS NO WORD.

Friends Fail to Get Any Trace of Missing Park Commissioner.

Friends of Park Commissioner Charles B. Stover said yesterday that his whereabouts still was a mystery to them. The report that Mr. Stover had registered at a hotel in San Francisco and subsequently had disappeared was not believed by those who had a personal interest in the missing Commissioner.

Mr. Stover had been absent from the city forty-one days yesterday.

The attendants, mechanics and laborers of the Park Department received their pay yesterday between 11:30 A. M. and 3 P. M. after Acting Commissioner La Roche had arranged the matter with the Finance Department.

The employes were much pleased, because, while to-day is the regular payday, they would have to wait until to-morrow for their money because of the holiday. This is the first time that such an arrangement has ever been made. Mr. La Roche said that he knew that many of the employes needed the money, and that it would come in handy the day before Thanksgiving.

GLYNN AS STRIKE REFEREE.

Asks General Electric Officials and Union Leaders to Meet Him.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—Gov. Glynn has asked the principals on both sides of the strike at the General Electric Works in Schenectady to meet with him and James M. Lynch, State Labor Commissioner, in the Executive Chamber on Friday morning, to talk over the situation and see what can be done to end the trouble. After a talk with William C. Rogers, Deputy Labor Commissioner, who has been working in the matter under his direction, Gov. Glynn said this evening that he was hopeful of an early termination of the strike.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, Nov. 26.—The strike situation at the General Electric plant remains unchanged. The company still contends that the dismissal of Dujay and Miss Leslie was occasioned by a general slackness in work, and not by their activities as union organizers. The strikers, on the other hand, insist that the discharge of the employes was a slap at union organizations, and they emphatically assert that the strike will continue until Dujay and Miss Leslie are reinstated.

The announcement that Gov. Glynn would try to bring the company and employes together was received with little interest on the part of the men. At the same time the suggestion that the whole force be employed on part time until business conditions were better, gained in favor among the men and also received the sanction of Mayor George R. Lunn, who said it was the best possible solution of the difficulty.

Can the stock clerk tell you?

Teeter back in your office chair, and give a few minutes thought to a department that does not get very much of your attention—the stock room.

How is it run? Or does it run itself? Can the stock clerk tell you—not by counting, but from his records—how many of such and such an article he has on hand? Can he tell you how many came in and have gone out? When? Where?

Can he? Yes? Then he is the exception, for most stock rooms are run in a happy-go-lucky, hit-or-miss, "I'll-count-them-and-see" way.

CHURCHILL STAYS; STERN DROPS OUT

FLEXNER GETS HIS PLACE

Latter Had Signed Anti-Churchill Protest—Teachers Rebuked for Advising Appointments.

Mayor Kline sent to the Board of Education yesterday the long-expected communication announcing the names of those decided upon to fill ten vacancies to occur in the board. Thomas W. Churchill, concerning whose possible reappointment a vigorous controversy has continued for three weeks, was named to succeed himself.

In this feature the Mayor's announcement had been generally expected, but there was much surprise when it was found that Abraham Stern, the oldest member of the board in length of service and Chairman of one of its most important committees, was let go with a note of censure. The Mayor objected, as he explained in a statement accompanying the list of appointees, to Mr. Stern's lack of sympathy with "the progressive measures in the board," and he therefore held that reappointing him would only be to put obstacles in the path of reform measures.

The announcement that Abraham Flexner had been selected to succeed Mr. Stern caused almost as much surprise as the latter's dismissal, as Mr. Flexner was one of the signers of the letter written by President Nicholas Murray Butler and others protesting against the reappointment of Mr. Churchill on the ground that his policies were demoralizing and destructive of school efficiency.

To fill other vacancies the following were named:

Manhattan.

Dr. IRA S. WILE, reappointed.

Miss OLIVIA LEVENTRITT, reappointed.

Mrs. IRA LEO BAMBERGER, served as a member of the Board of Education from Brooklyn, but recently resigned because her residence is now in Manhattan, succeeds Louis Haupt.

Dr. ABRAHAM FLEXNER, to succeed Abraham Stern.

Brooklyn.

Gen. GEORGE WINGATE, reappointed.

WILLIAM HARKNESS, to succeed R. E. McCafferty.

JOHN J. KELER, to succeed Ernest W. Stratman.

Mrs. CHRISTINE TOWNS, to succeed Mrs. Ira L. Bamberger.

Richmond.

In explaining why he had renamed Mr. Churchill, Mayor Kline, in a letter accompanying his appointments, insisted that he had not been influenced by factional differences in the Board of Education, but had made up his mind after giving careful consideration to recommendations, letters, resolutions, and advice in other forms. The factional differences in the board, he said, were matters to be settled by experts after full discussion, and not by laymen like himself.

"I have been importuned by many citizens, both for and against various members of the Board of Education whose terms I am filling to-day," the Mayor wrote. "For instance, a great many citizens have asked me to reappoint Thomas W. Churchill, the President of the board, while a great many others have urged that he be not reappointed. I have gone into this matter very carefully, and, while I do not desire to pass a final judgment upon matters in controversy in the Board of Education, it has seemed to me that Mr. Churchill has stood with those members who have sought to institute necessary reforms. At all events, I believe he has been an active and industrious member of the Board of Education. I have also taken into consideration the fact that Mr. Churchill's term as President of the board does not expire until next February, and by not reappointing him I would deprive him of two months of the term for which he has been selected.

"To succeed Abraham Stern I am naming Abraham Flexner, one of the Secretaries of the General Educational Board, who has had a very wide experience as an expert in educational matters. Mr. Flexner, before taking his present position, was connected for a great many years with the Rockefeller Foundation for the advancement of the teaching profession, and is one of the recognized experts on educational subjects in the United States.

"The two new members from Brooklyn are William Harkness, who served in the Board of Education for fourteen years, and John J. Keller, a manufacturer, of 114 Fifth Avenue, Manhattan, but who resides at 44 Woodruff Avenue, Brooklyn. These men I know to be fully qualified for membership in the board."

In his letter Mayor Kline sharply rebuked the city teachers who sent petitions to him in support of President Churchill. He characterized the activities of the teachers as highly improper.

"I should like to say one final word with all proper emphasis," the Mayor wrote. "I have made these appointments without any reference to politics. I want to take occasion to say that an effort has been made to use the political influence of the teaching body to influence me in the selection of members of the board. This attempt is in the highest degree improper, and I hope it will never be repeated again. I have received several hundred letters and petitions signed by teachers and circulated by teachers asking me to appoint this person or that person to the board. I have been astonished at the tone adopted by the teachers in these communications. They seem to assume that they have a natural right to advise or even to dictate to the Mayor of the city whom he shall appoint on the board. I have been very deeply incensed by this display of impropriety and lack of a proper sense of discipline in the teachers, and I have paid no attention to any of the letters sent to me.

"They have not had the slightest influence with me, but the fact that the teachers indulge in this sort of thing indicates that politics of a very objectionable kind have been allowed to creep into the board, and I wish now to call the attention of the board to this fact, and I hope that they will be able to establish in the board a sense of propriety and discipline which in the future will make impossible a repetition of this attempted dictation to the Mayor by the teachers. By what right the teachers of the city are any more entitled to advise the Mayor as to who should be appointed members of the Board of Education than the members of the Police or Fire Departments are to advise as to the selection of a Police or Fire Commissioner I do not know. It seems to me that the very fact that the teachers have engaged in this electioneering to the extent they have indicates that the board, or somebody in authority, has been very lax in this respect. Of all things we want to keep politics out of the board, and especially must we keep the teachers from meddling with the appointments of the members of the board."

President Churchill, after receiving the congratulations of his associates in the board, gave out a statement in defense of his administration which he had submitted to Mayor Kline on Nov. 20. In this statement Mr. Churchill reviewed the board's efforts to revise the course of study in order to gain elasticity and adaptability to local needs and to reduce part-time classes. He promised that in the near future the part-time problem would become a negligible one.

Among the progressive policies he said had been inaugurated. President Churchill mentioned the organizing of a division of reference and research, an employment bureau for graduates, a plan to end disputes and bickerings in the teaching force, a new system of enforcement of the compulsory education law, an investigation of vocational guidance, and an extension of the formerly static system of probationary schools for unruly children.

President Churchill met specifically the charge made by President Butler of Columbia University that the schools had deteriorated by a general denial, supported by many references to their enterprises. He urged that it was the duty of the board to study constantly the views of parents as to their children's needs, and to meet these views so far as practicable. He admitted there was need for specialists, but insisted that the teacher's point of view must be respected as well as that of the specialist, and that the teacher should be encouraged always to keep the spirit of enthusiasm in her work and not to allow it to degenerate into merely routine service.

WOULD TAKE UP CRITICISMS.

Mr. Man Wants to Investigate Reflections on Board of Education.

Commissioner Alrick H. Man introduced a resolution at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Education calling for the appointment of a special committee, composed of the members of the Committee on By-laws and Legislation and Gen. Wingate and Commissioner Robert L. Harrison, who are not members of it, to investigate and report upon a letter that had been published reflecting upon the good faith of the board.

"I think it would be unwise," said Commissioner John Martin, "for the board to take such action. It would be a departure from all precedent and would only reopen a conflict which has been closed by the Mayor's official act to-day. It would display a sensitiveness and irritability hardly in accordance with our dignity and standing. This board has clearly approved of the manner in which it has conducted itself. Another lot of men hold another opinion. We ought not to be investigating or worrying about that. The other side has gone pretty high in the expression of its feelings and opinions. But the election dispute is now over and the curtain may be rung down on the mud-slinging, if you choose to call it by that name. As such a resolution would sound a little ridiculous. I move to lay it over for consideration. In a fortnight all of us will be again in the same good humor as before the election conflict, and we will wonder in the words of Emerson 'Why so hot, little man?'"

Dr. Ira S. Wile said that the board had done its duty, and should not notice the villification. The old French proverb, "He who excuses accuses himself," he said, might hold in this case. The records would speak for themselves.

Commissioner Martin's motion to carry the matter over to the next meeting was carried by a vote of 14 to 13. President Churchill did not vote.

HOW ROTOGRAVURE MAKES A PICTURE

Photogravure Process Adapted to a Cylinder for Printing at a Rapid Rate.

SHOWN IN CHRISTMAS TIMES

All Times Pictorial Sections Will Soon Be Made by This New Method.

Since the announcement was made that the special section of the Christmas Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES devoted to the Girl of To-day would be printed by the rotogravure method there has been some demand for an explanation of this new printing process in terms that would be as nearly untechnical as possible. The Christmas edition will be published on Sunday, Dec. 7.

Photoengraving, the process that is ordinarily used in reproducing photographs in newspapers, reproduces a picture on the same principle that type prints. The high portions of the engraving receive the ink, and with it make an impression upon the paper. In photogravure it is not the high points or lines that print but the depressions. It is a reversal of the other process, and the ink is sucked in by the paper passing over it. Ordinary photogravure is a slow and expensive process, and requires a flat press. In order to meet the demands of a modern newspaper, some process that would be fast, adaptable to a rotary press, and whose cost must be within reason had to be found. This has been discovered in rotogravure.

Everybody is familiar with the kind of copper plate from which a visiting card is made, and knows that the name appears with the letters hollowed out instead of being raised, as with type. Usually this is done by etching. In photogravure the process is similar, except that the lines of the picture are not so deeply etched. If you were to print from an ordinary copper plate on which a photograph had been etched at the same speed with which a rotary press is run the result would be a blur. Now rotogravure is, in a few words, the perfection of photogravure, so that it can be run upon a rotary instead of a flat press, and thus at a great rate of speed. This having been accomplished, the process has become available for newspaper purposes.

In rotogravure a picture is etched upon a copper cylinder which, revolving in contact with a trough of ink, is entirely covered with the ink. How to get the ink quickly off the parts of the cylinder that do not contain the picture without at the same time scraping off the delicate engraving was the problem that was solved by Dr. Mertens of Germany some years ago. The invention that makes rotogravure possible is a knife made of metal of a certain temper, which is in contact with the surface of the cylinder after it has passed the ink trough, thus removing all the ink except that in the depression, which is the picture. The cylinder thus cleansed of superfluous ink continues its revolution and, encountering the paper under pressure, transfers the picture to it.

The process is being used somewhat in Germany and in England, having been introduced into the latter country recently by The London Illustrated News with great success. Since Mertens's invention was made the process has been greatly improved upon.

The rotogravure presses for THE TIMES are now being built in Germany, and it will not be very long before the press will be used in making all the pictorial sections of this newspaper. There are those whose enthusiasm over the new process has led them to predict that all printing will eventually be done by this intaglio method. For the present it is impracticable for papers with large circulation to do more than employ it for fine art work.

The rotogravure section will be only one of the three special supplements which THE TIMES will issue as a part of the Christmas Number, for besides the Girl of To-day section and the regular Pictorial Supplement, which closely follows the news of the day, there will be a special color supplement, containing, in three parts, a reproduction in the three original colors of John S. Sargent's famous frieze "The Prophets," which is one of the principal mural decorations of the Boston Public Library. The whole Sargent picture measures fifty-five inches long by ten inches wide, and is suitable for framing.

SUES SUICIDE'S ESTATE.

Girl Asks $4,000, Alleging She Was F. B. Sherburne's Fiancee.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 26.—A breach of promise suit against the estate of Frank B. Sherburne, who killed himself two years ago while he was assistant master of the Lowell High School, was entered to-day by Miss Jennie L. Carter of Wakefield, formerly a teacher in the Boston public schools. Miss Carter asks damages of $4,000.

She alleges that she was engaged to marry Sherburne when he committed suicide, and that by resigning her place in order to prepare for the wedding she deprived herself of means of earning a living.

League of Foreign Born Citizens Will Give Dinner to Mayor-Elect.

The League of Foreign Born Citizens, which was active in the municipal campaign, is arranging a subscription dinner to Mayor-elect John Purroy Mitchel and the other officials elected with him on the Fusion ticket. The Chairman of the League, Nathaniel Phillips, of 261 Broadway, received a letter yesterday from Mr. Mitchel, in which he said that he would like to accept the invitation. It was found on consultation with his Secretary that the only open date left to the Mayor-elect was Tuesday, Dec. 23. Mr. Mitchel's Secretary and the committee agreed to have the dinner take place on that date, at the Café Boulevard. Of the 1,385 members of the League, 400 of them already have subscribed $2 each for the dinner. Provision will be made for 700 guests.

Marcus M. Marks, Borough President-elect of Manhattan, and William H. Wadhams, elected to the Court of General Sessions, have accepted the invitations to attend the dinner.

CAR THAT KILLED FOUR FAST AS TRAIN

$15,000 BAIL FOR DRIVER

Three Automobiles in the Collision When Wm. L. Morris's Limousine Spread Death.

Coroner Jacob Shongut of the Bronx made an exhaustive inquiry yesterday into the circumstances of the automobile collision early yesterday morning in which four persons were killed on Pelham Parkway, near the Knickerbocker Inn. Three cars, instead of two, as at first reported, were involved in the accident, which cost the lives of Assemblyman Thomas F. Denney of the Nineteenth District, Leonard Cohn, President of the Rex Specialty Company of 2 West Thirty-third Street, and two women, identified later as Mrs. Fannie Loos of 308 West Ninety-third Street, and Helen Schaefer, a manicurist of 269 West 126th Street.

The car, owned by Cohn, in which were the four persons killed, was operated by Richard Rogers, a negro chauffeur, who had been in Mr. Cohn's employ for three years. It was going north, toward the Hunter's Island Inn, at 25 miles an hour, at the extreme right of the motor driveway. Coming south was a car owned and driven by Joseph Flaum of 126th Street and Seventh Avenue, a private hackman. Behind it came a third car, a limousine, bound cityward from Larchmont.

Flaum, who gave the clearest account of the collision, said his attention was first attracted to the third car by the repeated and imperious squawking of an electric horn behind him. There came a brown limousine, running so swiftly its wheels scarcely touched the ground, and which Flaum testified "looked like an aeroplane." He estimated its speed at from 45 to 50 miles an hour.

Flaum swore he was scared by the careening monster behind him, which veered and bobbed toward him in its rush cityward, and steered his course to the extreme westerly side of the driveway, to give it all possible chance to avoid his car, in which he had a party of paid passengers. As he did so, he said, the limousine swooped by and plunged into the side of the Cohn car.

With a tremendous crash the two automobiles locked wheels and spun around in a circle, ripping off Flaum's left rear mud guard and exploding a rear tire. Separating again, after several spins on the roadway, the two cars skidded apart, the northbound car facing south, on the west side of the roadway, and the southbound car facing north on the east side. It was this confusion of position that caused the early reports of the accident that the Cohn car, northbound, was the limousine, and the gray car, really northbound, was the one which had attempted to pass Flaum, and had caused the collision.

Assemblyman Denney, who was on the front seat of the Cohn car beside the driver, received the full force of the collision. One of the bars for raising the top of the automobile struck him full in the face, cleaving his skull and splitting his body through the chest. His body flew out of the car and landed on the roadway in such a position that the other car in skidding covered it.

The other occupants of the car—Cohn, Miss Schaefer and Mrs. Loos—were pitched nigh in the air and landed on the hard surface of the roadway nearly forty feet away. The force of their landing mangled the two women. Cohn was the only member of the party who was recognizable. Rogers, the negro chauffeur, managed to cling to his seat, and escaped serious injury, though he was knocked unconscious by the force of the collision.

Those in the other car, owned by William L. Morris, a lawyer with offices at 2 Rector Street, and living at 211 Madison Street, Brooklyn, fared better. Morris suffered only bruises and slight cuts from glass. Mrs. Estelle Nelson of 145 West Sixty-sixth Street, Manhattan, was tossed to the top of the limousine and sustained a fractured skull and other serious injuries, from which she is recovering in the Fordham Hospital.

Berthold A. Rich of 280 West 100th Street, well-known on Broadway, who tied up his resources in a trust fund, from which he sought to escape by Supreme Court proceedings later, and who was ordered in 1911 to pay $50 monthly alimony to his wife pending trial of her suit for divorce, was badly shaken up and suffered possible internal injuries. Jeremiah Mahoney of 155 East Thirty-first Street, chauffeur of the Morris car, was cut by flying glass and sustained a severe injury to his left knee.

Mahoney, who was taken to Fordham Hospital a prisoner, as soon as Coroner Shongut had completed a cursory investigation, was held by the Coroner later in $15,000 bail to answer a charge of homicide. He was then taken to the Tombs to await the inquest. He appeared badly muddled when before the Coroner yesterday at Tremont and Arthur Avenues, the Bronx, and he was warned that whatever he said would be used against him.

Morris failed to appear yesterday before Magistrate Appleton in the West Farms Police Court to press a charge of assault against Dr. Jerome McSweeney of the Fordham Hospital. When the Magistrate heard the circumstances which had led up to the arrest of the ambulance surgeon on the scene of the accident he appeared very angry.

The testimony showed that when three ambulances arrived from the Fordham Hospital, the doctors quickly determined that the women later identified as Miss Schaefer and Mrs. Loos and Cohn also were dead. Assemblyman Denney's body was pinned under the Morris car. Morris was still in the limousine body, partly detached from the chassis. It was necessary to move him to get at Mr. Denney's body to determine whether or not the Assemblyman was still alive. Morris resented being moved and interfered with McSweeney, who pushed him aside.

A quarrel followed in which the surgeon punched Morris. Morris then called on Deputy Sheriff Henry Walsh of 215 Lafayette Street, who was assisting in succoring the wounded, to arrest Dr. McSweeney. Welsh said yesterday in the Police Court that he had not seen what had preceded, and, acting on the advice of the police sergeant on the scene, had arrested Dr. McSweeney. Magistrate Appleton expressed indignation that the ambulance surgeon had been interfered with at such a juncture and said that unless Morris appeared at the hearing to-morrow he would issue a warrant for him.

Morris was represented by Attorney John D. Walker of 115 Broadway, who said his client was injured and unable to be in court.

Rogers, the negro chauffeur of the Cohn car, his face covered with plasters where he had been cut by the splintered glass, testified that he was making twenty-two miles an hour and was hugging the east side of the parkway north bound when he first saw the Flaum and Morris cars. When the Morris car veered, he said he had no place to turn but the ditch and no time to do that. Coroner Shongut held him blameless in the matter.

During the day more than 500 motor car parties stopped to view the wreckage of the two automobiles. A sergeant and four policemen from the Westchester Avenue station were on hand to check souvenir hunters. Photographs were taken for the District Attorney.

At Cohn's home, 360 West 116th Street, his mother-in-law, Mrs. John Drennen, said that Mrs. Cohn went to Pittsburgh a few days ago to make a periodical inspection of a branch of her husband's business there. She telegraphed her daughter of the tragedy and Mrs. Cohn is on her way home.

Both Cohn and Denney were active members of the Monongahela Tammany Club of the Nineteenth Assembly District. Their ride had started from the clubhouse at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Denney was identified by James J. Hines, Tammany leader of the district, and his brother-in-law, John A. Flynn, of 263 West 114th Street, where he lived. Denney was a hotel accountant and unmarried. His sister, Mrs. Rose Flynn, was prostrated by his death. Denney had in his pocket when killed several letters from Gov. Glynn.

At the Loos home no visitors were received yesterday. It was said that there are three daughters in the family, two of whom are undergoing treatment for tuberculosis at Otisville.

Miss Taylor and Alexander Stanley in Hospital Badly Hurt.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 26.—Miss Anastasia Taylor, a trained nurse of this city, and Alexander Stanley of Rahway are lying in a serious condition at Muhlenberg Hospital as a result of injuries received late this afternoon while they were attempting to cross the Lehigh Valley tracks in an automobile at Picton, a few miles from Rahway.

The machine stalled on the tracks and before the occupants had an opportunity to jump a Buffalo express, eastbound, crashed into the car, throwing Miss Taylor and Mr Stanley out. They were cut and bruised, the young woman's injuries being the more serious. The train stopped and the conductor offered to take the victims to Newark, but just then J. V. Beekman of Plainfeld came along in his car, and he brought them to the hospital here. The couple expected to be married soon.

3 KILLED, 2 HURT IN AUTO.

Train Backs Into Vehicle at Grade Crossing in Pennsylvania.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Penn., Nov. 26.—Three women were instantly killed, while a man and a woman were probably fatally injured to-day when a freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad struck an automobile at a crossing between this place and Huntingdon, Penn.

Walter Azinger of Altoona was driving the machine. The other occupants were Mrs. Azinger, Mrs. Mary Bessell, the latter's fifteen-year-old daughter Annie, and Miss Frances Secrist. The train was running backward when Azinger endeavored to cross the tracks.

Mrs. Bessell and her daughter and Miss Secrist were killed, Mrs. Anzinger was internally injured, and the driver of the car suffered a broken leg and internal injuries.

WEALTHY BOY TO ELMIRA.

Rosenwald, Who Passed Bad Check, Heir to $150,000.

Harvey Rosenwald, who, according to his attorney, M. P. Klein, is heir to $150,000 from the estate of his father, was sentenced to Elmira Reformatory yesterday by Judge Mulqueen in the Court of General Sessions on the charge of passing a bad check for $100 on James B. Regan, proprietor of the Hotel Knickerbocker. Rosenwald, who is 23 years old and gave his address as the Great Northern Hotel, pleaded guilty to the indictment.

Probation officers who have been investigating the case corroborated the lawyer's statement that Rosenwald is the son of a wealthy man in a nearby city, who died a year or two ago leaving his son $10,000 and $1,000 annual income until he should reach the age of 30, when he was to receive $150,000. The $10,000 he spent on Broadway, Mr. Klein said. This was not the first offense of the kind the young man has committeed, the probation officers reported.

DINNER COST TO-DAY HIGHEST IN 25 YEARS

Food for the Thanksgiving Meal 35 to 100 Per Cent. Above Prices of a Decade Ago.

U. S. FIGURES SHOW IT

Short Crop, Warm Weather, Cold Storage Trust and Uptrend of Prices All Blamed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Thanksgiving dinner will be the most expensive meal the average American has eaten during the last twenty-five years. It will cost from 35 to 100 per cent. more than it did ten years ago, and from 15 to 20 per cent. more than any Thanksgiving Day during the last six years, according to recently-gathered Government statistics.

Thousands of turkeys spoiled by having been shipped to market during the unseasonably warm wave which overspread the country a week ago, the drought of last Summer which shortened crop yields, particularly potatoes, a cold storage combination, and the steady soaring of prices generally during the last decade, are among the contributing causes to which economists point.

The great American hen, however, is seemingly responsible for the extraordinarily high price of eggs, according to Department of Agriculture officials, who are reluctant to place all the blame upon cold storage. Heat and drought of the last Summer they say caused the hens to stop laying sooner than usual. As to turkey, the rise in price seems to have extended all along the route to the consumer, beginning at the barn yard, where the farmer received an average of fifteen cents a pound for his birds—about half a cent more than he got last year. But turkey is not a Thanksgiving bird at all, according to the experts.

"The Lord never intended turkey to be the Thanksgiving food of the country generally," said Dr. Mary E. Pennington, the expert in food research in the Federal Bureau of Chemistry. "Christmas is the time for turkey. Goose is the Thanksgiving bird and is generally used in Europe where St. Martins Day is celebrated about this time of year. In Colonial days in New England, where the Winter season sets in early, it was different and more favorable to turkeys, but such conditions do not prevail over the United States as a whole."

All Other Prices Up.

Those turning from turkey to chicken, pork, or beef will find prices uniformly advanced. Hens show an average increase of 8 cents a pound, pork 2 to 8 cents, rib roast 2 to 10 cents, sweet potatoes are about the same price as last year, but the white potato crop is 100,000,000 bushels below that of last year. Apples, oranges, and grapes are scarce because of a short crop. Cranberries, with a normal crop, are a little higher than last year. Flour and sugar are uniformly cheaper and butter shows no comparative advance.

Agents of the Bureau of Labor, which has been making a special study of prices, have compiled statistics showing prices of certain commodities on Nov 15, in cities which from their geographical location should fairly represent conditions throughout the country.

Some of these figures, showing present prices and those of two, four, and six years ago, respectively, are as follows:

New York—Eggs, 55, 48, 47, and 39 cents; butter, 41, 39, 38, and 35 cents; hens, 22, 18, 20, and 18 cents; rib roast, 22, 18, 22 and 20 cents; sirloin, 25, 20, 18, and 15 cents; pork chops, 22, 16, 20, and 14 cents.

Chicago—Butter, 37, 40, 35, and 33 cents; hens, 18, 15, 14, and 13 cents; rib roast, 19, 16, 15, and 15 cents; sirloin, 24, 18, 18, and 18 cents; pork chops, 20, 15, 16, and 14 cents; potatoes 25, 30, 18, and 22 cents.

Boston—Eggs, 55, 60, 45, and 50 cents; butter, 40, 38, 37, and 38 cents; hens, 25, 22, 22, and 20 cents; rib roast, 25, 18, 18, and 18 cents; sirloin, 25, 25, 20, and 30 cents; pork chops, 22, 20, 20, and 16 cents; potatoes 25, 30, 25, and 25 cents.

Denver—Eggs, 40, 40, 30, and 30 cents; butter, 35, 40, 35, and 30 cents; hens, 18, 15, 18, and 14 cents; sirloin, 20, 15, 15, 15, and 15 cents; pork chops, 18, 15, 15, and 12½ cents.

St. Louis—Eggs, 42½, 40, 32½, and 28 cents; butter, 42½, 40, 37½, and 35 cents; rib roast, 22½, 15, 12½, and 12½ cents; sirloin, 30, 22½, 15 and 15 cents; potatoes, 25, 30, 25, and 25 cents.

San Francisco—Rib roast, 22, 18, 15, and 15 cents; sirloin 22, 18, 15, and 15 cents; pork chops, 25, 20, 18, and 18 cents.

THE NEEDY WON'T SUFFER.

Feasts and Entertainments Will Bring Cheer to City's Unfortunate.

Notwithstanding the pessimistic predictions of that misanthrope, the Weather Man, who threatens us with rain for Thanksgiving, the great American holiday will be observed in this city with all of its customary good cheer. King Gobbler, though, will not reign supreme at the feast as in other years, according to the statements made yesterday by the market men of Manhattan and Brooklyn.

That dread spectre, "The High Cost of Living," has dethroned the traditional bird which has always formed the piece de resistance at the family table on the last Thursday in November. The retail price for the best grade of Maryland turkey, preferred by many to the Western gobbler and to those of Tennessee, was quoted at Washington, Fulton and Wallabout markets yesterday as from 32 to 34 cents a pound. Cold storage Western turkeys sold at from 22 to 30 cents a pound, according to grade. The average price was 26 cents. Even at these prices the butchers complained that they made little profit.

The best grade of turkeys cost the retailers this year 30 cents a pound when bought by the barrel. At 32 cents a pound the dealers say they are covering their expenses merely. The supply of turkeys for New York this year, it was said yesterday, was about twenty-five tons less than in other years. Owing to this shortage in the supply the price of turkeys advanced 3 cents a pound in the last four days. Yesterday the supply of turkeys in Washington Market was exhausted by noon, but before evening a special train arrived bringing more birds. According to the retail dealers, the shortage is due to the fact that the storage warehouses are holding the birds already killed for the Christmas and New Year's trade and the farmers are keeping their stock for another month so that the turkeys will be fatter and so command higher prices.

Drop Turkey from Their Menus.

As a result of these conditions many a thrifty housewife yesterday after pricing a coveted turkey, shied away from the price demanded and shifted her final choice of Thanksgiving poultry to chickens, a goose or a brace of plump ducks. Some declined to purchase any variety of fowl and instead walked away from the market with a big rib roast of beef or a leg of lamb.

Vegetables for to-day's dinner are costly also. Long Island potatoes yesterday commanded 50 cents a peck or $3.50 a bag. Maine potatoes were quoted at $2.75 a bag and sweet potatoes brought $1.00 a hamper. Celery was held at from 18 to 22 cents a bunch and cranberries were high in proportion. Apples in Washington Market were sold for $3.50 a box and oranges for $4.50. Sixty cents a dozen was the price of the choice Florida varieties. Lemons were sold at 25 cents a dozen.

But though the "High Cost of Living" may daunt the housewife or her worried spouse, the hungry vagrants of this city or the thousands of needy families within its borders will not lack their accustomed Thanksgiving cheer. Practically all of the organized charities in New York prepared yesterday to distribute their annual November bounty.

The United Charities Association, the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, the Bowery Mission, the Salvation Army, and the institutions under the direction of the Departments of Charities and Correction, to mention a few of the philanthropic organizations of the town, have made elaborate preparations to give Thanksgiving baskets or public dinners to unfortunates needing assistance.

The Bowery Mission will, as usual, take a leading part in the work of feeding the hungry of the lodging houses. At 1 o'clock this morning it established a bread line with food enough on hand to satisfy the needs of 3,000 homeless men. From now on daily until Easter Sunday the bread line will form at the same hour, but except on Christmas morning the number of those fed will be limited to 1,000. The mission has arranged to distribute to-day 125 baskets each containing food enough for a family of ten persons.

At 7:30 o'clock to-night the annual Thanksgiving dinner will be served to 1,000 men in the hall of the Mission, and services will be conducted in the auditorium. As soon as one detachment has been fed another relay of the hungry will be admitted to seats at the tables. It is planned to serve meals until midnight.

Another dinner will be served under the auspices of St. Andrew's One-Cent Coffee Stands at 31 West Eighth Street, where some 2,000 persons will be fed. In addition to the dinner, 250 baskets will be distributed to the sick and those who are unable to leave their tenements. The menu will include roast turkey and cranberry sauce, boiled ham, roast beef, vegetables, pudding, pies, cakes and coffee. The dinner will begin at 11 o'clock this morning and will continue until 6 o'clock this evening.

Salvation Army to Give Food Away.

The Salvation Army will hand out baskets at the West Fourteenth Street headquarters this morning and at 3 o'clock this afternoon coffee and rolls will be served to all those who apply. Women's guilds and flower charities have made plans to brighten the day for the inmates of the city's hospitals, jails, and orphan asylums. At the Woman's Hospital a concert will be given for convalescent patients by the Hospital Musical Association at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Flowers will be distributed in the free wards of the big public hospitals by other organizations and candy will be given to the little ones in the asylums.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society and other Catholic benevolent organizations will observe the day by distributing aid to needy tenement families throughout the city.

Thanksgiving dinners will be provided for 200 poor families on the west side to-day by Charles H. Harris, an importer, at 142 West Twenty-fourth Street, who has provided similar feasts for the unfortunate at Thanksgiving and Christmas for the last fifteen years. Marcy L. Jacobs, confidential man for Mr. Harris, finished the distribution yesterday of 200 baskets of food, costing $5 each, consisting of turkey, vegetables, fruit, and pastry sufficient for a family of six persons. In addition, Mr. Harris will provide a $500 dinner for the 200 inmates of the Hospital for Deformities at 1,917 Madison Avenue.

Free moving pictures and music will be provided for 1,500 children of the lower west side, who will assemble this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the big hall of Public School 95, in Clarkson Street, between Varick and Hudson Streets. The entertainment will consist of twenty-seven reels and will last until 6 o'clock. The educational department of the General Film Manufacturing Company, with the co-operation of the Board of Education, will give the entertainment.

An unusual feature of the Thanksgiving Day observances will be the annual dinner given by the Rescue Society in the old Chinese Theatre at 5 Doyers Street, beginning at 6 o'clock this evening. Plans have been made to feed 2,000 men and women of all nationalities, including Chinese. The Prison Association will distribute baskets of food to families whose breadwinners are behind prison bars. Forty families were thus made happy yesterday afternoon, and other baskets will be delivered this morning.

HIGH FOOD PRICES ROUSE CONGRESS

Three Additional Resolutions on Subject Introduced, Two Calling for Investigations.

NEW TARIFF LAW ATTACKED

Republicans Call Free List a Failure—Australia Underbids Our Beef —McReynolds's Egg Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—With an investigation already begun by Attorney General McReynolds into the cold storage business, an inquiry prompted by the soaring prices of eggs, there were introduced in the House to-day, on the eve of Thanksgiving, three additional resolutions dealing with the high cost of living.

One of these resolutions was distinctly political. It was introduced by Richard W. Austin, a Republican from Tennessee, and demanded a Congressional investigation into the "palpable failure" of the new Underwood tariff law to fulfill Democratic promises to reduce the high cost of living. The reading of the resolution was greeted with hilarious applause from the Republicans. The Democrats blocked immediate consideration by offering an objection.

The Austin resolution was the skirmish gun in a general campaign to be waged on Congress by Republicans who deny that the tariff has any relation to the cost of living and who mean to make the most, politically, of the rise in the cost of eggs, meats, and other food products coincidental with the enforcement of the new tariff, which shifted many food products to the free list on the theory that such action would benefit the consumer. The resolution follows:

Food Prices and the Tariff.

Whereas, The Republican Party platform, adopted at the Baltimore Convention of July 9, 1912, charged explicitly that the "excessive prices" for the high cost of living resulted in a large measure from the protective tariff law enacted and maintained by the Republican Party; and,

Whereas, The Attorney General of the United States has announced his intention to investigate the present high cost of living and the combination of dealers in foodstuffs, and cold storage operators, notwithstanding the fact that the Underwood tariff is now enforced; and,

Whereas, Such action by the Attorney General is a virtual admission that the high cost of living in the United States did not result from the tariff laws enacted by the Republican Party; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House be authorized to appoint a special committee of ten members to investigate the reasons for the palpable failure of the Underwood-Wilson tariff law to fulfill the promises of the Democratic Party and reduce the cost of living and to extend an apology to the Republican Party and to the American people whose votes established President Wilson's so called "new freedom."

Representative Fred A. Britten of Illinois, another Republican, offered a resolution directing the Judiciary Committee to investigate the conditions under which it was possible to furnish Australian beef to the American Navy cheaper than the American product in view of the fact that there was "no competition of this character in the open market and the American public must pay the price demanded by the Beef Trust." Discussing his action, Mr. Britten said:

Cattle Free; Beef Soaring.

"Cattle are now on the free list. With the exception of the freight, it doesn't cost a cent to import cattle into the United States from any country in the world. But has the price of beef declined? Possibly the time is not far distant when the people will discover that the tariff has little if anything to do with the high cost of living and that the promises of the Democrats were merely vehicles they used to ride into power.

"The time is particularly opportune, as the Navy Department has just awarded a contract for 285,000 pounds of Australian beef, which in open competition underbid American beef by a considerable amount; and if the United States Government can purchase Australian beef lower than the American product, I think the people of the country ought to know why they are not entitled to the same advantage. The Navy Department has also just awarded a contract for 120,000 pounds of Australian canned corned beef at 15.37 cents per pound, while the lowest American price bid was 23.31 cents a pound.

"I think that the people of the United States ought to know if the American Beef Trust is responsible for the difference in cost."

Representative Gorman of Illinois introduced a resolution to enable the President to invite foreign governments to participate in an international inquiry into the high cost of living throughout the world and to appropriate $20,000 for United States participation.

The Cold Storage Inquiry.

Already several bills have been introduced which have for their object the regulation of the cold storage business, and others are being prepared. Representative McKellar of Tennessee, author of one of these bills, is preparing to urge Chairman Adamson of the Committee of Interstate and Foreign Commerce to immediately look into the subject of adequate legislation. In all, there are about twelve bills before this committee and the Judiciary Committee awaiting action, all of them bear upon the general subject of restraint of trade and the monopolization of natural products.

Attorney General McReynolds conferred to-day with Mr. McKellar, and as a result the Department of Justice will aid any Congressional investigation. Reports of the department's agents investigating an alleged combination of cold storage dealers probably will be placed at the disposal of the House. Mr. McKellar told the Attorney General that in his opinion the Chicago packers use cold storage plants to control prices.

The Attorney General will give cold storage dealers an opportunity to present their case before taking any action against them under the Sherman Anti-trust law. Many dealers have asked for a hearing. If the Attorney General should find them willing to suggest a satisfactory solution of the cold storage question, and if no evidence should be obtained that there was a criminal combination, he would be inclined to attempt to settle the matter out of court. In the meantime, however, the investigation begun by agents of the Department of Justice will be continued.

PRESIDENT'S PLANS.

No Guests at the White House—To Attend the Mass.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—President and Mrs. Wilson will pass their first Thanksgiving in the White House very quietly, without any guests. Mrs. Robert H. Sayre, who has been there since Monday, left to-day with her eldest son, the Rev. John Nevin Sayre, for Lancaster, Penn., where they will pass Thanksgiving Day with Mr. Sayre's sisters, the Misses Nevin.

As announced this afternoon, the President will follow the precedent established by former President Roosevelt and continued by Mr. Taft in attending the Thanksgiving service at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church on Tenth Street, where for the last eight years the Latin-American republics have held a joint celebration with a solemn high mass and much augmented choir. In addition to the President and Cabinet, this service will be attended by other high officials and the entire pan-American contingent now in Washington.

Thomas J. Ahearn Improving.

There was a marked improvement yesterday in the condition of Thomas J. Ahearn, State Fire Marshal, who is ill at the home of his sister, Miss Julia Ahearn, in Mitchel Avenue, Flushing. It was feared that he was suffering from paralysis, but his ailment is diagnosed by the physicians as rheumatism. He will return to Albany in a few days if his condition continues to improve.

PERJURER GETS RESPITE.

His False Report Threw Solvent Merchant Into Bankruptcy.

Because the defendant pleaded that he might be permitted to spend Thanksgiving Day with his family, Judge Hand in the United States District Court yesterday postponed passing sentence until to-morrow on Maurice B. Machlin, a public accountant, who had been convicted of perjury. Judge Hand fixed bail at $5,000, and on the filing of the bond the defendant was released temporarily.

Machlin made a sworn statement as a public accountant before the bankruptcy branch of the court that A. Selwitz, a cloak and suit maker, was insolvent. Selwitz, as a matter of fact, as his books showed, was perfectly solvent, and the effect of Machlin's statement was to throw him into involuntary bankruptcy.

When the true state of affairs was ascertained, United States District Attorney Marshall instructed Assistant District Attorney Spence to prosecute the case.

Schildknecht Pleads Guilty.

John C. Schildknecht, the twenty-three-year-old cashier of the Washburn-Crosby Flour Company, who, on Aug. 29, disappeared, leaving a shortage of $55,000, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Mahoney in the Court of General Sessions to two indictments, one for grand larceny and one for forgery in the third degree. He will be sentenced on Wednesday. He told the District Attorney's office that most of the money he stole went to members of a gang in Manhattan.

WHITE HOUSE GUESTS DANCE TURKEY TROT

GAVE DIPLOMATS GOOD TIME

Jolly Party Organized by President's Relations—Margaret Wilson Caught Bride's Bouquet.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—A story of how "The Cousins Club," as many relatives of the President and Mrs. Wilson are beginning to call themselves, organized into a little reception committee and did their best to make the diplomats "feel at home" at the wedding at the White House yesterday afternoon and last night, was told to-day at the Raleigh Hotel by Mrs. George Howe of New York, one of the cousins.

Mrs. Howe is the wife of George Howe, who lived for a long while with the President before he went into the White House, and whose education was superintended by the President. She is on the stage, her professional name being Margaret Vale.

"I had hoped to write some newspaper and magazine accounts of the wedding," said Mrs. Howe to a reporter for The Washington Star, "but Aunt Ellie, as we call Mrs. Wilson, said the President would not like it, as he had the same feeling about allowing me to do that as he had against appointing his relatives to public office.

"He did not object to my going on the stage, however, and when I wrote to ask if it would embarrass him he said each person had the right to develop his or her own individuality, and he wished me success.

"I was principally impressed at the wedding by the ease which every one seemed to feel, notwithstanding the 'grandness' of the occasion. There was nothing solemn about it except the wedding procession and the forming of the line for the reception in the Blue Room.

"We kept the fun up until 9 o'clock last night. It was just like a great big family party in the South. I was somewhat surprised that the dignified Marine Band should play turkey trotting music for us to dance with in the East Room, but they did, and Lieut. Santelmann and his musicians seemed to enjoy it as much as we did. They laughed and played on and on.

"You know, 'Nell,' as we call Eleanor Wilson, is just crazy about dancing, and she is a very fine dancer, too, one of the best I ever saw. When it seemed as though the music had stopped for good she waved her hand appealingly to Lieut. Santelmann and he laughed and led the band again for us. We all danced, including the bridesmaids, who were showing every one the dull gold 'chased bracelets' the bride had given them.

"A great many of the diplomats danced with Margaret Wilson, several of them Ambassadors, and she was greatly teased by all of us when she was lucky enough to catch the bride's bouquet. You know, it is a superstition that the girl who catches the bride's bouquet at a wedding will be the next one to be married among those present.

"There was a lot of simple fun like that, and mischief in which all the young folks joined, the older people sitting around and chatting just as would be done at a party at home.

"The President didn't dance, but he stood in one of the doorways of the East Room for a long while watching the fun and laughing and joking with every one.

"Most of us had supper and dinner and lunch combined at the wedding breakfast. That kept up a long time. There wasn't wine, but we had fruit punch instead, and on the bride's table in the breakfast room there were the loveliest souvenirs, little candy wedding bells with the initials 'W' and 'S' on them. All the cakes and candies had their initials on them. The souvenirs in the state dining room, where most of the guests were served with coffee, punch, salad, or what-not, were, of course, the little boxes of wedding cake.

"At this 'breakfast' in the main dining room we didn't stand on any ceremony. The cousins of the family and other relatives, especially the women, went around among the diplomats trying to make them feel 'at home,' just as we would do when South, offering them more cake or ice cream or punch, and seeing that they got it. Of course the diplomats have been going to the White House longer than we have, but we wanted to see that they had a good time on this occasion. I don't know what the diplomats thought of our informality, but I hope they liked it.

"It was certainly a pretty party, and one that all of us will always remember, I am sure."

SAYRE HONEYMOON ABROAD.

Pair Will Sail for Europe Saturday on the George Washington.

It became known definitely yesterday that Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre would leave New York on Saturday at 10 o'clock on the North German Lloyd liner George Washington for a honeymoon trip to Europe, part of which will be spent at Mount Rydal, Westmoreland, in one of the cottages on the Wordsworth estate next to the one in which the poet lived. This has been a favorite resort with President Wilson and his family for years and the family had planned to go there in the Summer of 1912 when Mr. Wilson was nominated for President.

After leaving the George Washington at Plymouth on Dec 6 the young couple will spend a few days in Devonshire, where the climate is very mild in Winter. They will be accompanied by Mr. Sayre's brother, John.

It was learned yesterday that one of the wedding gifts received by Miss Jessie Wilson was a beautiful American emerald of about three carats weight, presented by Lovat Fraser of this city, through his friend Dr. W. T. Grenfell. The emerald was discovered on North Carolina property owned by Mr. Fraser, and was cut by American lapidaries. It was enclosed in a heart-shaped silver box, inscribed with the monogram "J. W. W." the box reposing in a Siberian malachite jewel case.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Nov. 26.—Miss Blanche Nevin, a sculptor of Lancaster and aunt of Francis B. Sayre, to-night would neither deny nor affirm a rumor that the Sayres were coming to her country place, near Churchtown, Lancaster County. Miss Nevin has been residing in Lancaster for several weeks, and Churchtown people say that the country place has all the appearance of being closed, and there is no evidence that it is to be reopened.

SENATOR CARROLL FREED.

Jury Finds Brooklyn Democratic Leaders Didn't Intimidate.

Senator Daniel J. Carroll, Democratic leader of the Fourteenth Assembly District, Brooklyn; his chief political lieutenant, Luke O'Reilly, the lawyer, and three others, who have been on trial for several days before Justice Kelby in the Brooklyn Supreme Court on charges of conspiracy and intimidation of election officials at the primaries in March, 1912, were acquitted late yesterday afternoon. The jury deliberated seven hours before it agreed on a verdict, and it took several ballots.

After being out forty-five minutes the jurors filed back into court and asked for a stenographic copy of the testimony of Thomas P. Owens, one of the defendants, who turned informer against the others. Justice Kelby had all of Owens's testimony read by the stenographer. This took two hours and ten minutes.

When the verdict was announced Carroll's friends made a demonstration. Many surged toward his chair and grasped his hand. Outside the court they cheered him.

Owens was ignored by the other defendants, and little attention was paid to him after he was acquitted with the others. Justice Kelby had charged that his testimony must be corroborated.

1200 Members in Columbia Institute

Columbia University's Institute of Arts and Sciences, which was organized this year, has more than 1,200 members now, according to a report made by Milton J. Davies, the Director, yesterday. In the month from Oct. 13 to Nov. 12, fifty-three lectures, recitals, meetings, and conferences were held, with a total attendance of 13,821, and an average attendance of 260.

RAILROAD WIRELESS WORKING SMOOTHLY.

Lackawanna Superintendent Says It Has Now Passed the Experimental Stage.

SOME PROBLEMS TO MEET

Stations Every Fifty Miles Will Be Put Up Between Buffalo and Hoboken.

L. B. Foley, Superintendent of Telegraph of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, who has had charge of the wireless telegraph tests on the Lackawanna Limited, the fast train between Hoboken and Buffalo, said yesterday that he considered the handling of wireless messages to and from moving trains has passed the experimental stage. Mr. Foley returned from his third testing trip yesterday enthusiastic over the results.

Only two difficulties need to be overcome, he said, to bring the wireless service up to the efficiency of the railroad wire telegraph system. These are the sending and receiving of messages between the train and a station when the train is going at a high rate of speed on a sharp curve or through a tunnel. The speed of the train on a straight away run has not affected the messages, but sometimes, said Mr. Foley, when the train suddenly shoots around a curve or enters a tunnel while a message is being received or sent the continuity of the message is broken as when a disconnection occurs in the middle of a telephone conversation.

The message is picked up again as soon as the train has rounded the curve or left the tunnel, but, although the distance in curves and tunnels is short compared with the total distance from Hoboken to Buffalo, for example, Mr. Foley wants the wireless service so nearly perfect before it is formally opened for commercial and railroad uses that at no time will the train be out of communication with a city where a wireless station has been erected. This continuous communication can be obtained, he thinks, by a slight modification of the aerial adjustment of the instrument on the train.

At present one section of the Lackawanna Limited is equipped with the wireless apparatus. On alternate days it leaves Hoboken at 10:15 A. M. as train No. 3, and Buffalo at 9:30 A. M. as train No. 6. Wireless stations have been erected at Scranton and Binghamton, and it is with these that the train exchanges messages. As soon as Mr. Foley has finished his testing and the wireless is put in regular service, the Lackawanna Railroad will build stations at other cities and equip other trains. The plan is to have the wireless stations about fifty miles apart from one end of the line to the other.

Mr. Foley will leave Hoboken on his fourth trip this morning.

Pupils Aid Flushing Hospital.

Ten barrels of potatoes were given by the pupils of the Flushing Public Schools yesterday to the Flushing Hospital. Each one of the pupils took at least one potato and a number of them took a peck. In addition to those donations there were other vegetables, jellies, foodstuffs, and cereals.

DIVORCEE SUED FOR $116.

Gold-Mounted Garters Among Items Charged Against Mrs. E. C. Ferguson

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Theodore B. Starr, Inc., of Fifth Avenue, New York, brought suit to-day against Mrs. Emily Carstairs Ferguson, the divorced wife of Walter Ferguson, yacht builder, of Bridgeport, Conn., to recover a bill of $116.76 for articles purchased by the defendant and never paid for.

Starr contends that Mrs. Ferguson's account ran from Dec. 22, 1909, to April 19, 1910, and that during that time Mrs. Ferguson purchased a pair of gold-mounted garters at $21, a pair of gold-mounted suspenders at $40, and a gold veil pin at $15. There were also purchased a quantity of fancy stationery and paper cutters.

In the divorce proceedings George D. Graham, a half-breed Indian guide, who accompanied Mrs. Ferguson on several trips through the Maine woods, was named as co-respondent. It was brought out in the testimony that she presented Graham with a pair of gold-mounted suspenders.

GIRL SUICIDE IDENTIFIED.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—The actress who committed suicide in a hotel here Monday night was to-day identified as Elizabeth Poritz of 4,404 Thirteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. The identification was made by Oscar Friedman, a brother-in-law. The last time her relatives saw her, Friedman said, she had about $8,000 worth of jewels. She wore about $2,000 worth when she ended her life.

The young woman, who was about 22, registered at the hotel as Betty Daley. She was also known as Maida Dupree. Before taking poison she left a note to George Le Maire, an actor. The latter said yesterday that the girl had been a failure as an actress.

Friedman said the girl ran away from home when 13 to go on the stage. Several years ago she was married to a wealthy furniture manufacturer of Chicago but returned to the stage. This caused her husband to obtain a divorce.

"She was a successful actress," Friedman said, "and she made good money. She had money in two New York banks, and she had no reason to kill herself."

SEVERANCE ESTATE WORTH $14,508,984

AIDS FATHER'S CHARITIES

Louis H. Severance, one of the organizers of the Standard Oil Company and a former associate of John D. Rockefeller, left an estate of $14,508,984, according to an appraisal filed yesterday in the Surrogates' Court. Mr. Severance, who had apartments in this city at the Waldorf-Astoria, died on June 25 in Cleveland, Ohio, at the home of Dr. Dudley P. Allen, his son-in-law. As Mr. Severance left no will, his estate was divided between John L. Severance, his son, and Elizabeth S. Allen, his daughter.

The bulk of Mr. Severance's estate was in stocks, the largest block being one of 5,070 shares of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey valued at $1,035 a share. The stocks were appraised at $14,774,918 and the bonds at $643,458. Mr. Severance left bank accounts of $267,529 and held notes for $151,110. His office furniture was appraised at $346 and his personal effects at $2,452. The 5,070 shares of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey represented the 5,079 shares of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the proportionate shares of stock in the subsidiary companies which were distributed at the time of the dissolution of the so-called "Standard Oil Trust."

Mr. Severance was noted throughout his life for his many gifts to colleges and missionary schools. The following gifts, promised Mr. Severance and noted down by him in a memorandum, were paid by John L. Severance, his son and executor, after his father's death: $15,250 to the Cleveland Presbyterian Union for the purpose of erecting Presbyterian churches in Cleveland; $7,500 to Dr. Ibuka of Meiji Gakuim, Japan, for a new land purchase for a boys' school in Tokio; $8,000 to Dr. Oscar F. Hills for a hospital in Chefoo, China; $5,000 to the Laymen's Missionary Campaign; $5,000 to Hastings College at Hastings, Neb., contingent upon its obtaining $100,000 and keeping out fraternities; $5,000 to Coe College at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, contingent upon its obtaining $650,000; $4,900 for a girls' school dormitory at Cebu in the Philippines; $10,000 to F. W. Bible for the Union Girls' School in Hangchow, China; $3,050 to Dr. H. M. McCandleus for a hospital at Hainan, China; $5,000 to the Winona Assembly and Dr. Sol S. Dickey provided he obtained $100,000; $3,000 to the Y. M. C. A. of Titusville, Penn.; $1,000 to the German Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio; $10,000 to John R. Mott for the Shanghai, China, Y. M. C. A.; $45,000 to the True Light Seminary in Canton, China; $5,000 to the University of Nanking, China, for land and $25,000 for an endowment; $10,000 to Wooster University in Ohio for a pension fund; $50,000 to Wooster University for an athletic field; $2,225 to the Woman's School and Seminary in Nanking; $1,670.76 to the Girls' School at Kolhapur, India, and $15,000 to the Theological Seminary at Chieng Mai in Siam.

REPUBLICANS PRAISE KLINE

Party Leaders Pay Tribute to His Work as Mayor at a Dinner to Him.

Mayor Kline, as the guest of honor at a dinner at the Republican Club, in West Fortieth Street, last night, heard prominent members of the party praise his work since he has been in office. J. Van Vechten Olcott, President of the club, presided. Calvin B. Brown of San Francisco, representing the Panama Exposition, was the first speaker. Abraham Gruber told the guests that the Republican Party should honor the Mayor by nominating him for a State office next year.

"A dinner by Republicans to a Republican Mayor in a Republican club in the City of New York is an extraordinary occasion," said Mr. Gruber, "and shows that virtue will triumph at least once in a century."

William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, said that the Mayor represented the best spirit of Republicanism.

"Mayor Kline has that great quality, the fundamental quality of intelligence, which, in a democratic form of government in any country, makes the best public officers," said Mr. Barnes.

Other speakers were Representative William M. Calder of Brooklyn and Frederick C. Tanner, Republican leader of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District. The Mayor thanked his friends for the good things they said about him, and he added:

"Since I have been in office I have noticed that our citizens as a rule who are willing to have their criticisms recorded do not show correspondingly keen desire to express their approval when something has been done which pleases them. It is very helpful to an official who is trying to do his duty to receive the encouragement of his friends."

8,000 AT "BIG SIX" BALL.

Printers' Union Celebrates Anniversary of its Founding.

Typographical Union No. 6, known among printers in the country as "Big Six," held its sixty-fourth reception and charity ball last night in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, at Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. When the grand march started at 11:30 o'clock more than 5,000 persons were on the floor of the armory, while the galleries crowded the balconies and reception rooms. The decorations were even more elaborate than those of last year. At the eastern end of the building electric lights spelled out the words "Big Six," and massed on the walls and ceiling were countless American and foreign flags.

"Big Six," whose membership of 7,000 makes it one of the largest labor units in the world, turned out in force. A few minutes after the "Big Six" Band, recently organized by President Marsden G. Scott, played the opening march at 9 o'clock, the dancers spread out under the flags, and from then until early this morning they filled the big armory building.

Last night marked also the sixty-fourth anniversary of the founding of "Big Six." The local union started with only twenty-eight printers. On Nov. 24, 1849, sixty-four years ago last Monday, twenty-eight journeymen printers met one night at a small hotel in lower Fulton Street to protest against irregularities in their working hours and to fight for a uniform system of wages.

At that time all of the local and domestic news was in type before midnight. Because foreign news and records of events happening along the western coast of America were obtained only by slow-moving ocean vessels which docked frequently late at night, oftentimes the printers were called from their beds to set up the stories for the morning editions.

The proceeds from last night's affair will be devoted to furnishing beds in the various hospitals for their sick and disabled members. Labor Commissioner James M. Lynch attended the ball.

NEW YORK TO LEAD STATES AT THE FAIR

OFF TO MEDITERRANEAN

Where Invitations Will Be Extended to Many Countries—Buildings Nearing Completion.

Colvin B. Brown, one of the three United States Commissioners to the nations on the Mediterranean, in behalf of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, said yesterday that the participation of New York in the San Francisco Fair on such a magnificent scale as had been announced, had assured the success of the exposition from the standpoint of State participation. Mr. Brown arrived at the Waldorf yesterday from San Francisco. With the other two Commissioners, William P. Andrews and Thomas Rees, he will sail on the George Washington on Saturday.

"We shall visit Spain, Portugal, Greece, Turkey, the Balkan countries, Egypt, Italy, Morocco and Algiers," said Mr. Brown yesterday, and we expect to be gone about four months. To France, Italy and Spain our mission is simply to pay calls of courtesy, as those nations have already announced that they would participate, Italy having appropriated $400,000 for that purpose.

"Up to date thirty-one foreign nations have sent their acceptances to the invitation to take part, and twenty-seven American States have decided to put up buildings.

"I think we have an excellent chance of getting Turkey to participate, and we are going to make a try for Egypt, which, I believe, has never put up a building at an American exposition. We shall work with the American embassy or legation in each of the capitals we visit, and shall be directed by them in our plans. The President of the United States has issued an official invitation to every nation to participate, and this mission of ours is for the purpose of following up that invitation.

"It may be interesting to mention that never in the history of expositions has a world's fair been so near completion in point of construction so far in advance of the date of opening as is the case with the Panama-Pacific. The largest building, Machinery Hall, covering eight acres, is now 95 per cent. completed. This is the official report of the Director. It will be ready for occupancy on Jan. 1. All the buildings are under way, and not only the percentage of completion but our contracts with the builders guarantee that every thirty days after next New Year's, a building will be finished and ready for occupancy. Every building will positively be ready nine months before the date set for the opening. It has been so long since the grounds were completed that that is now an old story.

"New York State's share in this exposition is of an importance commensurate with the position of New York among the States. Some of your best-known architects have had a great deal to do with its design. Then the fact that the State appropriation reached the magnificent sum of $700,000 has had an effect upon increasing the extent of participation by other States. Illinois and Pennsylvania come next, with $300,000 each. New York has the choicest site at the exposition, and the way she is taking part has tremendously pleased the people of California. Those who know take the position that the extent to which this State is going into the exposition has made State participation such a successful feature. The New York building will be under construction within thirty days.

"We are confident that the foreign participation will be the largest of any exposition so far, and we still have strong hopes that those European nations who have so far declined to participate will change their minds."

Mr. Brown and the other Commissioners will meet in Washington to-day to get their commissions from President Wilson.

Davis Tablet on Federal Building.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 26.—A bronze tablet to Jefferson Davis, whose name was chiseled off Cabin John Bridge in Washington by Federal authority but later restored, was to-day placed in the wall of the Federal Building here, with the consent of the National Government, to mark the location of Davis's offices as President of the Confederate States of America.

MORE TALKS TO SHOP GIRLS

Invited to Enter the Union, but Warned Against Striking.

"I was told by one of the employers in a shop not a mile from here that he would discharge the first girl in his place who joined a union," said Miss Mary R. Sanford at an outdoor meeting held on behalf of the Retail Clerks' Union near Macy's department store last evening.

"That won't keep them from joining," said a woman in the crowd.

"Of course, I will not use any names," said Miss Sanford, "but it is a shame. I have seen a girl come out of a store at 1:45 o'clock in the morning, and she had been working since 8 o'clock in the morning of the day before, and would have to go back to work at 8 o'clock in the morning. Little girls, 16 and 18 years old, work 72½ hours the week before Christmas and get only $5 a week. They get no money for extra time, and two dry sandwiches and a glass of milk or perhaps 35 cents for supper. I am not talking about Macy's now, for they do not keep open in the evenings."

Mrs. Frank Cothren of Brooklyn said she had been invited by a member of the firm of Macy's to hold her meeting inside the store, where the women would be more comfortable.

"I asked him if he was in favor of the girls joining a union, and he said he was not, and so we prefer to hold our meeting outside," she said.

"We are not asking you to strike," said Miss Dorothy Miller, speaking from portable steps put near the edge of the sidewalk. "That is the last thing we want you to do. What we want to do is not to take away the money you are getting, but to get you what you deserve. At one of the stores where we held a meeting the managers came out and looked to see who was listening to what we had to say. And they have said that in one of the big department stores 200 girls who joined the union were discharged. That is a lie.

"You can't get anything if you work alone, but you can get it if you stand together. We want you to act and act quickly. Come and join our union. Send your names to 140 East Nineteenth Street. That is our mail headquarters, but not where we have our meetings. Only our members know where that is."

Miss Helen Schloss, Miss Helen Castle, and Miss Elizabeth Dutcher were the other speakers at the meeting. Miss Dutcher said last night that the membership of the union was increasing, and that seven or eight of the largest department stores were represented by girl employes who had joined the organization.

The married men employed at Macy's received a turkey last night as they departed. The firm has made a practice of giving a present of this kind at Thanksgiving for the last twenty years.

BRANDEIS'S PART IN RATE HEARING

AND AID IN ANALYZING THEM

His Employment Not Disadvantageous to Any Special Interest, Says Chairman Clark.

E. E. Clark, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in a letter received yesterday by a Wall Street man who has interested himself in the rate advance case from the standpoint of a minority holder of railway stocks, authorized the publication of correspondence between them bearing on the status of Louis D. Brandeis, about which there has been considerable mystification in the financial district.

The first announcement of Mr. Brandeis's connection with the case gave the impression that he was to represent the interests of the public, especially the shippers, who were not represented by other counsel. Commissioner Harlan was quoted as saying:

"Doubtless certain protestants will have their own attorneys, but Mr. Brandeis will be the general channel through whom the views of others opposing the proposed advance may be presented of record."

Mr. Clark's correspondent raised the point that if Mr. Brandeis was to represent shippers having no other counsel, the minority stockholders in the railroads should also have counsel apart from those representing the railway managements. This Mr. Clark thought unnecessary, as Mr. Brandeis's function, as he defined it, was "as special counsel for the commission and for the purpose of assisting the commission in eliciting all of the pertinent facts in connection with the proposed general increases in rates on Eastern railroads."

Mr. Clark's correspondent first took the matter up with J. P. Tumulty, the President's secretary, asking him to bring it to Mr. Wilson's attention.

"As a stockholder in six different railroad companies," he said, "in no one of which my interest is so large as to afford personal counsel, I would like to find out how I am to be protected. I think the matter of the appointment of Mr. Brandeis and the reason for which it was made, as stated by Commissioner Harlan, is apparently so great an injustice to the small stockholders of the railroad companies that I feel if the matter were brought to the attention of the President he would likely not approve the selection and the purpose of it."

A few days later Chairman Clark wrote saying that the letter had been referred from the White House to the commission.

"This commission," said Mr. Clark, "is an administrative tribunal with quasi-judicial powers, charged with the administration of an act the fundamental principle of which is that rates shall be just and reasonable and non-discriminatory. We do not lose sight of the fact that there are two ends to the beam of the scales of justice, or that it is our duty to bear in mind justice to both carriers and patrons of carriers.

"We have before us a proposal by the railroads to generally increase all of their charges in a large section of the country. The carriers beyond doubt will be represented by able counsel. The commission felt that under the circumstances it was both proper and desirable to select competent special counsel for the commission. The commission is necessarily to a large extent custodian of the interests and rights of the public.

"Mr. Brandeis is not employed as an advocate for any special interests, but is employed to assist the commission in analysis of the big general question which underlies this proposal by the railroads. We see no reason why any one should assume that his employment can disadvantageously affect any interest."

Mr. Clark's correspondent explained that what he wrote Mr. Tumulty to find out was "that if Mr. Brandeis was retained by the commission to represent the objecting shippers, what arrangement the commission has made to have representation for the small stockholders who favored the advance and who did not have their own counsel at the hearing."

"Has the commission engaged Mr. Brandeis," he asked, "for the purpose stated by Mr. Harlan, or will Mr. Brandeis represent the stockholders, too, large and small, who have no counsel of their own? I did not assert that Mr. Brandeis was employed to represent special interests. I wrot to ascertain who would represent the interest of a stockholder who did not have his own attorney. Will Mr. Brandeis represent me and my fellow-stockholders, or has the commission engaged some one else to do so?"

Chairman Clark replied that "inasmuch as the officers and attorneys of the railroads are the chosen representatives of the stockholders of the property, and inasmuch as those officers and attorneys are taking a very active part in support of the proposed increase in rates, it has not seemed to us, and it does not now seem to us, that there is either necessity or occasion for the commission to provide additional counsel to look after the interests so represented and served."

"Since the shippers' organizations the country over," Mr. Clark's correspondent persisted, "will be represented by their chosen counsel, and since the large unorganized public, who may favor the advances in rates (outside of the small stockholders unrepresented) will have no counsel of their own, will you kindly explain to me why the commission retains counsel to represent the opponents of the advances and leaves the others unprotected. As you are probably aware, the majority stockholders and the small stockholders do not always agree as to their interests."

"If, as you say, the commission is a quasi-judicial body and represents all the people, why was Mr. Louis Brandeis engaged by you to represent the objecting shippers against the interest of other participants in the application for rate increases?"

To this Mr. Clark replied that if majority and minority stockholders did not always agree, and any of the stockholders were opposed to an increase in rates, they would be heard by the commission. He added that either kind of stockholders must be in favor of or opposed to the proposed increases or be wholly indifferent.

"Those who favor the proposed increases," he said, "and those who oppose them undoubtedly will be fully represented. Those who are indifferent presumably do not care to be represented."

His correspondent then asked for an official statement of the purpose of Mr. Brandeis's retainer and drew forth the explanation quoted above. After receiving it he asked permission to make it public "to correct the erroneous impression which has become public as to the nature of Mr. Brandeis's employment by the commission."

"I am glad to know," he said, "that Mr. Brandeis has been retained to get all the pertinent facts, both favorable and unfavorable, and that the reports that he was engaged to become the channel through whom only the opponents of the advances would be represented are not true."

"The statement made in my letter," replied Chairman Clark, "as to the character of and the reasons for the employment of Mr. Brandeis by the commission is correct, and as there is no secret whatever in this employment you are at liberty to make any use of the letter which you may think proper."

FIREMEN'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Floors Fall Behind Them as Chief Gives Order for Retreat.

In fighting a fire that swept through the factory building at 435-437 West Broadway before daybreak yesterday morning, Deputy Chief Devanny's sixth sense told him that trouble was coming, and he ordered Capt. Flanagan and the six firemen working with him to quit the building at once.

He was leading the way out and had brought the men to the ground floor when the fourth and fifth floors of the building fell. The fire left nothing of the building standing save the four walls, and the damage was estimated at $75,000.

FENDER FOR MOTOR TRUCKS

New York Railways Co. Perfects a Device to Protect Persons on Foot.

Realizing that with the increase in the number of heavy motor trucks in the streets of New York it has become necessary to equip them with some device to protect persons on foot, the New York Railways Company has been testing such appliances and has found one which it thinks will meet the requirements of street traffic. Theodore P. Shonts, President of the New York Railways Company, said yesterday:

"The New York Railways Company has installed a number of electric vehicles in its trucking department in place of horse-drawn vehicles. One of the trucks has been equipped with a combination fender and wheel guard, so arranged that if the projecting fender strike a person, who may be in an erect position, the person will fall back into a scoop or cage-like device, which is cushioned to break the fall, and which is also devised to prevent the person from getting underneath the car.

"If the person falls forward when struck, or is lying prostrate, there is a trip attached to the front of this fender which operates the wheel guard, and this device picks up the person so that the wheels do not touch him. When a person comes in contact with this tripping device the power is shut off automatically and the brakes on the automobile are thrown into an emergency position automatically.

"There is also a projection in front of the rear wheels of the truck, which will prevent a person from falling underneath the rear pair of wheels. Experience has shown that in a great many cases a chauffeur, to avoid striking a person with the front pair of wheels, will swing the front of the car so that the centre of the car body hits the person and so he is knocked down and run over by the rear wheels."

Mr. Shonts said the New York Railways Company would give a practical demonstration of the value of this device in the streets of New York.

$65,000 TO DIET KITCHEN.

Mr. and Mrs. Tuck Give 500 Shares of Great Northern Stock.

The New York Diet Kitchen Association of 1 West Thirty-fourth Street, which dispenses pure milk to infants and invalids, has received a gift of 500 shares of Great Northern stock, valued at $63,000, from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuck as a donation to its endowment fund. Announcement was made yesterday by Miss M. L. Daniels, the Superintendent.

With a deficit at the end of the fiscal year of 1913 of more than $13,000, the association is now breathing easier about the future of its work, which henceforth will consist largely in the education of mothers in the care of themselves and their children.

The annual income derived from the Tuck donation will be used in maintaining the Tuck Kitchen, at 35 West 120th Street, one of the eight stations maintained by the association. Opened in July, 1912, the station now has 300 babies on register. It is the only milk station in the city devoted to negro babies and the only station in that section of the city. Its work will be extended. A nurse will be stationed there permanently to instruct mothers in the care of their children. Heretofore a nurse has been dividing her time between the Tuck Kitchen and two other stations of the association.

STRUCK SAVING A DOLL.

Two Little Girls Going Back for It Are Hit by Auto.

Two little girls running back to pick up a doll they had dropped in the roadway at Amsterdam Avenue and Sixty-third Street yesterday afternoon were struck by an automobile and knocked down. The children—Helen Stern, 5, of 93 Amsterdam Avenue, and May Heiner, 4, of 150 West Sixty-fourth Street—were only slightly injured. Helen was taken to the Roosevelt Hospital suffering from contusions and May was taken to her home suffering from shock.

The driver of the car, William Colline of 311 West 119th Street, who is employed by A. E. Frazen of 500 West Seventy-second Street, stopped his car, which was going at a moderate speed, as quickly as possible and took Helen, who appeared to be injured, to the hospital.

Witnesses told Patrolman Humber of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station that the accident was unavoidable.

PLANT DICTAGRAPHS TO SAVE CHINAMEN

TRAP WOMEN WITNESSES

Alleged Conspirator Says in Opium Den Girls Were Told to Charge Tong Members with Murder.

A story of dictagraphs planted in opium dens to get evidence which would save two Chinamen now in the death house at Sing Sing from going to the electric chair was told yesterday in an application filed in the District Attorney's office for a new trial for Eng Hing and Lee Dock, convicted last March of the murder of Lee Kay, an On Leong Tong member. A motion for a new trial will be made in Part I. of General Sessions on Dec. 8.

The two men, who are the first Chinamen ever convicted of murder in the first degree in this State, were convicted through the testimony of Flossie Wong and Grace Mack, two white women who associate with Chinamen. They testified before Judge Crain that they were present at the time of the shooting and saw Eng Hing and Lee Dock fire the shots which killed the On Leong man. This testimony, it is asserted by Olcott, Gruber, Bonynge & McManus, of 170 Broadway, and Charles W. Gould of 5 Beekman Street, counsel for the defendants, has been proved by the use of dictagraphs to be the result of a conspiracy.

The presiding genius in the plan to trap the two women and prove that the Chinamen were victims of a conspiracy was Terence J. McManus, of the defendant's counsel. It was he who brought in the dictagraph, an apparatus frequently employed by prosecutors, but probably never used by the defense before. McManus asserts in his affidavit that he obtained the dictagraphs from the General Acoustic Company and with the assistance of Thomas D. Cassidy, a private detective, caused them to be installed in several "hop joints," in different parts of the city. The others who assisted in the undertaking were Edward F. Dalton, employed by the General Acoustic Company; W. Forbes Murray, Hooper Harris, William F. Snow and John F. Kearney, stenographers; Hazel Trueman, of Springfield, Mass., who several years ago lived in Pell Street, and Edward M. Carrette, a former police official and an acquaintance of Frank Treglia, who in Chinatown is known as "Rubber."

This "Rubber," according to affidavits accompanying the application for a new trial, played an important part in the conspiracy, and there was reason to believe that if he could be made to talk the true facts would be unearthed. A plan was arranged, therefore, whereby Carrette was to take a "slumming party" to Chinatown, where Treglia would be engaged to show the party the sights. The party was to be taken to a furnished apartment where a dictagraph would be installed, and an effort would be made to get from Treglia a voluntary statement of the facts of the supposed conspiracy. Later an apartment at 517 West 134th Street was engaged for this purpose.

There, on April 18, by means of the dictagraph, a stenographic report was made of the conversation between Treglia and Carrette. According to this report, Treglia said the two women, Flossie Wong and Grace Mack, were instructed to accuse the convicted men of the murder. Here is an extract from the report. Treglia is referred to as "Rubber":

Carrette—Every Chinaman that has been up has got away; the Chinamen witnesses are no good. I have worked down there, you know how I have worked down there, and we can get on the roofs and everything, and we are beaten.

A Woman—But you beat them?

Rubber—We beat them, with the advantage to a jury that they never could pick one Chinaman from another; you can fix a—

Carrette—You must fix things up by fixing witnesses.

Rubber—It is the cop's witness, and we had a million witnesses.

Carrette—I guess you get the witnesses and fix them up so they would testify.

Rubber—Any good witnesses; but you know, a dangerous witness you will—

Carrette—I want to tell you something, Jack. Rubber is the first man ever sent a Chinaman to the electric chair, aren't you?

Rubber—Yes.

A Woman—How can he send them to the electric chair if he don't testify?

Rubber—I have got a way; I develop the whole thing.

The other dictagraph conversation was recorded at 19 Mott Street from a dictagraph placed in 17 Mott Street. W. F. Snow makes an affidavit that he heard this conversation in a woman's voice:

"Say, Flossie, I wonder how they knew about that room. What did that girl say to you in Philadelphia? She sent for me to come around to a restaurant. She said she had a note from a friend of mine in New York. When I saw her she asked me if I was Flossie Wong, and I said I was. She handed me a note from Little Chink asking me to get her some hop, and she said she would do me a favor. She told me how Rubber—and was shooting off his mouth how smart he was and how you and me and Jim Gum and him were downstairs, and he told us how to testify. Somebody must have talked, and you say you didn't, so who did. It must have been that—Rubber.

"Gee, if they found that out they will easily find out that I was in the pictures—are liable to get in trouble. Gee, I wish we hadn't let Rubber in that room that day, for I knew well he couldn't keep his mouth shut, and, besides, my chink didn't want me to go and be a witness, for the last words he said were I would get in trouble.

"Oh, don't lose your nerve. Nobody's got anything on us. What the hell, we have the District Attorney back of us, ain't we?"

The record of a conversation which took place in Schaefer's restaurant, Philadelphia, on June 7, is also contained in the affidavit. There Flossie Wong is reported to have said to Mrs. Trueman: "Well, you know those two chinks ain't dead yet, and I'll have to be careful, and if 'Rubber' don't stop talking he will put us all in jail."

Christmas Number of The New York Times

Sunday, Dec. 7, 1913

There will be two remarkable illustrated supplements in The Times's Christmas Edition. One will be a reproduction of John S. Sargent's famous mural paintings, "The Prophets," in the original colors. The other will contain 29 extraordinary photographs of young women — typical American girls, selected by a committee of artists from hundreds of photographs submitted by Times readers.

The color section will be printed by the same process used when The Times issued Abbey's "Holy Grail" and the Morgan pictures. The Girl of To-day Section will be the first eight-page newspaper supplement printed in America by the wonderful rotogravure process. That process will soon be used in all the regular picture sections of The Times.

"THE PROPHETS"

John S. Sargent's Famous Mural Paintings in the Original Colors

This frieze is one of the features of the Boston Public Library. It will be reproduced in the original colors on heavy paper. The complete frieze, as reproduced from a Copley Print copyright by Curtis & Cameron of Boston, is in three parts, 55 inches long and 10 inches wide. It will be suitable for framing, as there is no printing on the back. The picture is equal to anything ever offered in Christmas publications costing fifty cents and a dollar.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY

To reproduce these photographs the new German rotogravure process will be used for the first time in an eight-page section of an American newspaper. The photographs were selected by seven well-known artists from hundreds submitted after The Times asked its readers for pictures of young women whom they considered typical of the American girl. So many attractive pictures were found by the judges that it was decided not to limit the choices to the twenty-nine, as originally planned. The artists selected ninety altogether. The remaining sixty-one will be reproduced in a second rotogravure section on Dec. 14—one week later than the Christmas Number. Soon afterward the rotogravure process will be used in all the regular pictorial sections of The Times.

The conditions are the same whenever The Times issues an unusual illustrated number. As preference is given to regular readers by newsdealers, the way to get all the Special Editions is to order The Times delivered to you every day.

ARMY AND NAVY READY FOR FOOTBALL GAME—TOY DOGS ON BENCH—ATHLETICS—BASEBALL

FAMOUS NAVY MEN TO CHEER MIDDIES

NAVY ELEVEN HERE TO-DAY

Both Teams Will Practice at Polo Grounds Friday — Seat Holders Advised to Go to Game Early.

A distinguished gathering of navy officials and their guests will occupy the south side boxes, upper and lower tiers, at the West Point-Annapolis game at the Polo Grounds Saturday afternoon. President Wilson and his family have been allotted three boxes on the lower tier. These are boxes 189, 191 and 192. The President's party will take these seats during the second period of the game. They will occupy boxes on the Army side during the first half.

Next to President Wilson's boxes will be Secretary of the Navy Daniels and his party, in two boxes, while adjoining the Secretary's boxes will be reservations for Superintendent of the Naval Academy and his party. Among the naval officers who have reserved boxes are: Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, Admiral George Dewey, Rear Admiral R. E. Peary, Rear Admiral Wainwright, Rear Admiral R. B. Bradford, Rear Admiral F. A. Clarke, Rear Admiral C. E. Vreeland, Rear Admiral A. C. Dillingham, Rear Admiral J. A. Rogers and Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder.

Among the other guests who have been given boxes on the Navy side are Secretary of State Bryan, Senator James A. O'Gorman of New York, Thomas Edison, President John G. Hibben of Princeton University, Commodore C. Ledyard Blair of the New York Yacht Club, Col. Robert M. Thompson, Gov. Goldsborough of Maryland, H. L. Satterlee, New York; Senator Ollie James of Kentucky, Surgeon Gen. P. M. Rixey, and numerous others.

Ticket holders are advised by the New York Baseball Club to go to the Polo Grounds early as it will take some time to seat the big gathering. One hundred Columbia students will act as ushers. Already reservations have been made for 41,000, and additional boxes may be sold if the demand is large enough. The New York Club still has boxes for sale at the offices in the Fifth Avenue Building.

The game will be the biggest athletic event of its kind ever held here, particularly the social side of the event. It will surpass even the International Polo matches at Meadowbrook in picturesqueness. New Yorkers were late in awakening to the importance of a big football game, and as a result most of the seats will go to people outside of New York. The tickets were given out by the New York club, first come, first serve, and it was the farseeing out-of-towners who got their applications in early.

The Navy team will come to New York to-night and will have a light practice at the Polo Grounds to-morrow morning to get acquainted with the new and strange conditions of the gridiron. The Army team will practice to-morrow afternoon. There has been little betting on the event as yet, because of the uncertainty about the actual strength of the Army eleven. When Charley Daly was made head coach at the Point there was general belief that he would develop a winner. The team showed up poorly in two or three games, especially in the Notre Dame contest. The Navy has been strong all season, but against weak opponents in many of their games. The Navy, with three successive victories to its credit, will undoubtedly be a slight favorite.

The game will probably not show very much open, running football, if the teams follow out the tactics they have shown in other games this season. West Point, however, has a forward pass formation which has been highly developed for use in this game. Football at Annapolis for late years showed the influence of Yale coaching methods, while Harvard methods have influenced the Army coaching. There have been no touchdowns scored in the past three years, the Navy winning each time with field goals from drop kicks or from kicks from placement. Football men look to see this year's game a kicking battle.

ARMY TEAM SHOWS SPEED.

All Its Plays Tried Out Satisfactorily—Cadets Here To-morrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 26.—The speed exhibited by the Army team in its signal drill to-day sent the soldiers' prospects up another notch. The squad worked for an hour, going through a rehearsal of the plays as they will be hurled against the Navy on Saturday in New York. The regulars were in the limelight throughout the period excepting Jones, right guard, who rested, his place going first to O'Hare and later to Herrick. But Jones has had plenty of work and the coaches are taking no chances on his becoming stale.

The drill to-day used up the entire assortment of plays in the Army's repertoire and all worked smoothly and satisfactorily to the coaches. Jouett was used again behind the regular line, although Hodgson was in at the finish of the workout. Hoge, Hobbs, Benedict, and Milburn were also tried out in the back field, which seems to be as yet unsettled. Hoge, Hodgson, and Benedict are the most likely starters and this combination averages 165 pounds. The line as it appeared in signal drill to-day, and including Jones, will average close to 186 pounds. Benedict worked well in the goal from placement trials to-day. Leo Leary of Harvard was here helping Hammond with the end men. "Hurry Up" Yost remained over until to-night to see that his batch of new "thrillers" got the final polish.

The squad will start for New York Friday morning and will stop at the Hotel Astor. They will practice on the Polo Grounds Friday afternoon. Two bigg rallies were held to-night, one with a brass band accompaniment.

NAVY TALKS ONLY FOOTBALL.

Team Will Come to New York Today for Army Battle.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 26.—The only thing talked about at the Naval Academy to-night is the football game on Saturday on the Polo Grounds between the teams of the two service schools. This afternoon the midshipmen cheerfully gave up the pleasures of their weekly half holiday and rushed to the stands as soon as military drill was dismissed, remaining until dark to encourage the team with their songs and yells.

Most of the time this afternoon was devoted to the perfection of the Navy's offense plays, and the scrub team was used for brief periods to test them out. The team moved with speed and smoothness. There will be a brief signal drill to-morrow morning, but the coaches have decided that it will be secret.

There will be thirty-five players and substitutes and about twenty coaches and others in the party which will leave for New York at 3:40 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, traveling over the Pennsylvania Railroad. It is expected that New York will be reached about 10 o'clock, and the party will go to the Vanderbilt Hotel, which will be official naval headquarters until after the game. The players will go to bed immediately upon their arrival at the hotel. Lieut. Commander Roger Williams will be in general charge of the party.

The coaches will be Lieut. D. L. Howard, head coach; J. J. Reilly, field coach; Prof. P. J. Dashiell, Lieut. Commander Osterhaus, Ensigns Loftin, Hall and Shaw, Jack Cates and Herman Olcutt. Others in this party will be Lieut. A. P. Fairfield, Secretary of the Navy Athletic Association; Surgeon Ralph W. McDowell, U. S. N.; Trainer "Scotty" McMasters, Hospital Steward Snyder and the Navy goat.

CORNELL'S FINAL DRILL.

Ithacans Believe They Have an Even Chance Against Pennsylvania.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 26.—Satisfaction and contentment settled down on the Cornell camp here to-night on the eve of the game with Pennsylvania to-morrow afternoon in Philadelphia. The coaches are sure the same combination that turned the tide of the season against Lafayette ten days ago is the one that will make the best showing against the Red and Blue, and they concentrated all their efforts toward the perfection of this much. The players know that Cornell has an equal chance with Penn.

Al Sharpe gave his protégés final practice this afternoon, and it was a grueling grind. Not a moment did the Ithacan warriors have to themselves, two teams starting shortly after 3 o'clock and continuing until about 5. This workout was not only behind closed doors but in a lot patrolled by police and students. The scrub team tried out Pennsylvania plays against the Varsity. Barrett and Fritz again took up kicking, the former punting and the latter trying frequent drops.

Open play, with the occasional line attack, will be Cornell's salvation. The Ithacans have a team that averages 183 pounds, considerably more than their opponents. They are a husky lot, and every one was announced to-night as being in tip-top condition. Barrett has come around in fine shape from his injury in the Lafayette game.

Rees and Mahaffey will supplant Ends Shelton and Fritz if necessary. Cool is second choice for centre and Taber will substitute for Barrett. Shuler and Sprague are second choice for the halves. Maunick looms up as the extra guard. Should Full Back Lahr be put out, Shelton will be brought from his end into that berth.

MINDS TO PLAY FOR PENN.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26.—Chester Minds, the University of Pennsylvania full back, whose kicking and forward passing were features of earlier football contests, will start the game against Cornell to-morrow at his regular position. This definite announcement, which caused joy to Pennsylvania adherents was made by the coaches to-day at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, where the team had its final practice. Merrill will start at the quarter back position, while Capt. Young and Marshall will be the half backs.

Fear had been expressed that Minds would not be able to play to-morrow because of an injury to his shoulder. He displayed his former speed in to-day's practice, however, and appeared to have almost entirely recovered.

The squad went through a fast signal drill and the form shown by the 'Varsity pleased the coaches. Players and coaches alike expressed confidence in the result of the final game of their schedule.

HARVARD-YALE GAME LATER

Yale Suggests Date Be Changed to Thanksgiving Day.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 26.—A proposal to have the annual Harvard-Yale football game played on Thanksgiving Day instead of on the Saturday preceding the holiday has been communicated unofficially to the Harvard football management. The proposition comes from Yale officials, and is said to have found favor at New Haven.

Crimson authorities to-night refused to discuss the matter, but Manager George F. Plimpton of the football team indicated that a statement might be issued later. The Harvard authorities are not in favor of the change, it is understood, but willingness has been expressed by some of them to assist Yale and Princeton to lighten the end of their football schedule.

Princeton plays Harvard and Yale on consecutive Saturdays, and Yale has only a week between the Princeton and Harvard games, while the Crimson has a comparatively easy game between its two big contests.

A conference of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton managers may be held to consider this problem.

Mt. St. Mary's vs. Fordham To-day.

A snappy signal drill marked the final practice period of the season for the Fordham football squad yesterday. The new plays devised for the game this afternoon at Fordham Field with the Mount St. Mary's College eleven worked smoothly and were run off with precision, the players displaying more dash than before any other game this Fall.

The Southern collegians arrived in town yesterday. They have a good record on the gridiron and have been undefeated. Great efforts will surely be made by them to secure a victory in this their first appearance in New York.

The Fordham Varsity eleven which faces Mount St. Mary's to-day will present a changed line-up. Jackson, who has not played in any game this season, will play left end; Hice, formerly substitute half back, takes O'Brien's place at left guard, and Charley McDonough will start at right half back, displacing McAviney. Bud Wymard and Robin have shown considerable skill in the kicking game, due in large part to the tutelage of George Walsh. Fordham's star drop kicker of the 1909 eleven. The new ends, Conklin and Jackson, received special attention from "Jim" McCarthy, coach at Stuyvesant High School, during the past week, and cover Robin's punt in great style. The line-up for the final game to-day announced by Head Coach Tom Thorpe is: Conklin and Jackson, ends; Kano and Quinn, tackles; Capt. Mulvey and Rice, guards; Wymard, centre; O'Connell, quarter back; McDonough and Robin, half backs, and Granfield, full back.

GILDED ROOM FOR TOY SPANIEL SHOW

Eleventh Annual Exhibition at Waldorf-Astoria Attracts Society Women.

Society women and lovers of toy dogs were out in force yesterday in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf Astoria, which had been set apart for the eleventh annual show of the Toy Spaniel Club of America. Nearly 100 English toy spaniels and 265 other breeds of toy dogs competed for the blue rosettes, which proclaim the fortunate winners as the champions of their respective breeds. The Astor Gallery was used for benching the fancy animals, while the judging was done in the east room, where two rings were staked off.

While the serious business of the show was transacted in the east room, the most interesting features of the canine display was witnessed in the Astor Gallery, where more than $100,000 worth of dogs were housed with care and attention enjoyed only by children of the rich. There were white aproned maids whose sole occupation was to brush and comb their valuable charges and hand them to their mistresses, who carried them into the ring to pass under review of the judges. Pink, orange and blue pillows of silk and satin were placed at the bottom of many of the cages, for kennels are not allowed in the Waldorf Astoria, and, besides, it would be too vulgar for the delicately nurtured, high-priced dogs on their annual show day. The hangings were of a color and material to match and in many cases miniatures of their owners' boudoirs.

In spite of these extravagant evidences of the monetary value of the dogs and the real attachment between the owner and animal, it was a real dog show in which champions of Europe and the best breeds in America competed for premier awards, and the home-bred dog more than held its own when under the severe scrutiny of the judges.

The work of the latter was watched by big galleries, and among the prominent society women seen were:

Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, Miss H. G. Parlett, Mrs. George H. Pell, Mrs. James Doig, Miss A. L. Reynolds, Miss Mary Henderson, Mrs. H. S. Morris, Miss E. C. Dobson, Mrs. A. O. Van Heusen, Mrs. William Sheppard, Mrs. E. H. Hall, Mrs. W. S. Mackay, Miss Edith Carey, Mrs. N. Crawford, Stephen C. Baldwin, Mrs. Nicholas Browne, Jr., Miss Ella Borland, Miss D. Champion, Col. Thomas Hayes, Mrs. M. C. Bowers, Mrs. M. J. Bostwick, Miss Rose L. Frunk, Mrs. M. Freeth, Mrs. Mary Willets, Mrs. Daniel P. Foster, Miss Laura M. Fisher, Mrs. Sidney A. Bean, Mrs. Benedict, Miss J. D. Berry, Mrs. C. D. Atwood, Carles Blum, Mrs. Isabell Claire Blum, Mrs. Carl Baumann, Miss Elsie Blum, Miss Anna M. Clyde, Mrs. Frederick Edwards, Mrs. L. E. Donnier, Mrs. William Wood, Mrs. Harry McCutcheon, Miss Ida Jacobsen, Mrs. Miriam M. Mackay, Mrs. H. H. Moss, Mrs. P. Menges, Mrs. J. C. Maden, Mrs. John J. Matherson, Miss Mildred Holmes, Mrs. M. E. Harby, Miss Eleanor M. Mellon, Mrs. Sarah H. Leonard, Mrs. Hazen Morse, Miss Anna Hungerford, Miss D. M. Harders, Miss Dorothy Ludow, Mrs. Henry Hill, Mrs. Emma Lyllte, Jr., Mrs. Irene La Tour, Mrs. H. Howard Holcomb, Miss Christina Whitney, Miss Virginia Noakes, Mrs. Fred Nolte, Miss E. B. Underwood, Mrs. Frank S. Ogilvie, Mrs. Frederick Philips, Mrs. Wilbur F. Parker, Mrs. J. G. Voorhis, Mrs. Albert Widmann, L. B. Rosencrantz, Mrs. Carolyn Rothstein, Mrs. A. L. Reynolds, Mrs. Hartley Williamson, Mrs. L. L. Turner, Mrs. Mary Winthrop Turner, Mrs. Orville H. Tobey, Mrs. W. E. Watkins, Jr., Malcolm Strauss, and Miss Edith D. Stone.

Toy spaniels predominated throughout the day's judging. Green Acres' Kennels, owned by Mrs. A. O. Van Heusen, with Champion Ariadne, won in the King Charles classes. The winner is one of the best of its breed in this country. It has a wonderful head, is an expert in expression and cars. Mrs. Van Heusen also won in dogs with Champion Sporting Chance, and many ringside experts thought the pair should have been placed first for the cup, but the judge gave Mrs. James Doig's Prince Charles pair the trophy.

Mrs. Albert Widmann's Rocky Top Lady Effra had little to spare in securing the best in Blenheims, as Green Acre Kennels' Champion Rosemary Lillian was in splendid coat, but lacked somewhat in the head. In the Tri-color or Prince Charles dogs Mrs. Doig won quite easily in dogs with Breakwater Wonder, and in bitches with Fairy Footsteps. The pair are very well marked for this variety and broken in color, while the entries excelled in head.

The Pekingese were the attraction of the show. Mrs. A. Goodson, who made the awards, is the owner of the Ai Lee Kennels and judged very well, keeping to type and emphasizing soundness and substance. The breed was noteworthy by the victory of Mrs. Arthur L. Holland with a string of home-bred puppies, Gow Dai of Hydegree, Chuty of Hydegree, Yee Gai of Hydegree and Yat Tai of Hydegree. The latter is an exceptionally good dog, which annexed nearly a dozen of the leading specials. Possibly the best of the new Pekingese comers is Benjamin of Sandy, a good red dog, very low and massive, and showing the extreme Chinese type. The best in dogs was Hi Mine of Arden, shown by Mrs. A. M. Hunter, which beat the more noted champion Sun of Lleurud, scoring in coat, shortness of back and character.

The senation, however, came in the bitches class, in which the entries of Mrs. M. E. Knight made their first appearance in Pekingese circles. Tye See of Egham won right through, beating such noted dogs as Kala Bands of Arden, Southerland Ave Chi Ki, and Fairfax Teen Mah, last year's champion, and eventually won the challenge cup for the best of the breed.

The Scotch terriers seemed somewhat out of place at a toy dog show. The result proved an easy victory for the Hadsell pair, Champion Foxhills Symbol, which won at the last Westminster Kennel Club show, and Champion Watlands White Rose, the latter probably the best ever seen in this country.

The West Highland terriers brought about practically a duel between Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon and Glenmere Kennels, owned by Robert Goelet, the latter winning with Marster of Glenmere and Hussy of Glenmere, a very fine pair, which excelled in texture of coat and condition.

The quaint little barge dogs, the Schipperkes, furnished a little excitement inasmuch as the famous pair of champions, Champion Blacko and Katrine, exhibited by Col. Thomas Denne, were beaten by Hazlehead Charon and Champion Marionne. There was very little between them.

Seldom has a better lot of Pomeranians been brought together. There was plenty of quality and breeding, but the electric light made it a difficult matter to judge the chocolate and black colors, although it did not affect the sables. Miss Marion Kennedy showed a grand black in Champion Parneuk Blackthorn, which scored a notable victory over Swiss Mountain Kennels' Banner Admiral II., an orange sable, which, like the winner, was in splendid coat and condition. Miss Margaret Smith, the daughter of R. A. C. Smith, exhibited a rare orange in Bejamin Bunny, which displayed unusual quality. Pomerania Wasp lost after a close contest to Affley Mite, while in several of the other classes the classes were well represented.

Carlisle to Play Brown To-day.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 26.—Both the Carlisle and the Brown football warriors rested to-day in preparation for their annual Thanksgiving Day clash to-morrow. Coach Glen Warner brought his men here to-night from Mansfield, Mass., where they have been preparing for the game the past few days.

The Indians' coach said that while he did not think there was any question about his team winning to-morrow, he did not look for such a one-sided contest as might be expected from the comparative scores. He pointed out that his eleven was suffering from a reaction after the Dartmouth and Syracuse games. Bush, the regular right guard, will be out of the game with a bad eye, and his place will be taken by Hedge. Welmas, left tackle, has an injured ankle, he said, but will play.

The Brown team had a light signal drill, chiefly for the benefit of the second string men, who will take the places of several of the regulars injured in the Yale and Harvard games and in the hard scrimmage yesterday.

HIGHER PRICES AT SALE.

Max Woll Buys Barongale to Race In Germany.

The Old Glory horse sale at Madison Square Garden yesterday struck its normal gait for recent years from a bidding standpoint. Prices reached the high-water mark, going into the thousands in some instances. This was due largely to the presence of several prominent European buyers, who topped the list when Max Woll secured Barongale, a bay stallion, 13 years old, with a mark of 2:11¼, for $3,200. It is a California horse of good breeding and was the champion colt when 3 and 4 years old, with marks of 2:15¼ and 2:11¼, respectively. The new owner of the stallion is well known in international harness-racing circles, having an extensive stable at Berlin, where he is said to be the most successful owner in Germany. Barongale will be used both for racing and in the stud.

Second highest prices were obtained when Solola, a black mare, was knocked down to an agent of C. J. K. Billings for $2,300. The sale caused great comment among the followers of the sport when it was learned that the well-known turfman had secured the mare. It was bought under the name of Curls Rock Farm, which is the new breeding establishment of Mr. Billings, located at Cotman, Va. The mare will be bred to The Harvester at the Billings nursery. The best prices obtained yesterday were:

GUARDSMEN SHOW FORM IN ARMORY

Thirteenth's Athletes Compete in Many Events—Ross Makes Record.

Thirteenth Regiment artillerymen held their forty-first track and field sports last night in the Brooklyn armory, with some capital sport resulting. Several thousand were followers of the athletic fortunes of probably the strongest regiment in athletic competition and witnessed the doings of the guardsmen, which were replete with keen competition.

What developed into a peculiar condition of affairs was the result of the race for the novice team point trophy. Companies Three and Four tied for the prize, and neither being willing to decide the award in any other manner agreed to have the respective Captains, George Johnson and Robert Aikman, race 220 yards for the trophy. Capt. Aikman won, leading all the way, by 20 yards. Neither man had ever before taken part in a foot race, and each was pretty much "all in" at the end, with the winner's time about 40 seconds.

O. Briggs of the Second Company, a competitor in the 220-yard obstacle race, fell from the fifteen-foot high net and struck the floor on his head. He was rendered unconscious and remained in that condition for nearly half an hour before the doctors could bring the injured lad to nearly normal condition. When he awoke from his coma, he expressed a desire to aaid his company in the winning of the intercompany relay, in which his team was third. The physicians, however, demurred from any such action on his part and made him rest for the night.

During the progress of the one-mile bicycle handicap Eddie Goodwin of the First Company, the scratch man, and one of the best of the flat-floor riders, fell on the second last turn when in a winning position. Goodwin had gradually cut down the long starts allotted a half dozen opponents, and with only one between himself and victory at the bell announcing the last lap the indoor king put forth every effort to reach and pass A. E. Rhoades, who was in receipt of 120 yards start.

The latter, while in front, rounding the turn coming out of the homestretch, swung a trifle wide and enabled Goodwin to get inside, but too close to the pole. In the middle of the semicircle marking the turn Goodwin, in an endeavor to gain the lead and not collide with Rhoades, clipped the curb boards and tumbled off his wheel with a resounding crash. Fortunately he failed to interfere with Rhoades, and the others were far enough back not to run into the fallen rider's wheel. Goodwin was not injured. Later he won the three-mile scratch event from O. Lake of the Empire City Wheelmen.

What developed into a really gruelling contest was the military hike for teams from each company of the artillery. The conditions of the contest warranted the carrying of equipment weighing 45 pounds by each man over streets in the vicinity of the armory for a distance of two and three-quarter miles. The quartet of competitors from the Third Company stood the test best, and managed to complete the route in the excellent time of 29 minutes and 55 seconds, with the Fifth Company team probably 300 yards in the rear.

The West Highland terriers brought about practically a duel between Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon and Glenmere Kennels, owned by Robert Goelet, the latter winning with Marster of Glenmere and Hussy of Glenmere, a very fine pair, which excelled in texture of coat and condition.

The quaint little barge dogs, the Schipperkes, furnished a little excitement inasmuch as the famous pair of champions, Champion Blacko and Katrine, exhibited by Col. Thomas Denne, were beaten by Hazlehead Charon and Champion Marionne. There was very little between them.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 26.—Lafayette held the last football practice for the year to-day. The little squad, which is now reduced to two teams, gathered early because of the usual Wednesday half holiday, and ran through their signals, tackled the dummy, kicked the ball, and did other stunts. It is assured that Dick Diamond will not be able to line up against Dickinson to-morrow. It is almost as definite that Brown will not be able to get CURRENCY LEGISLATION UNDER PRESSURE.

The Democrats of the Senate have imposed upon that body an ordinance of self-denial and of industry. To sit from 10 to 6, daily, and from 8 until 11 in the evening until the Currency bill is passed, with no Christmas recess save perhaps on the holiday itself, will undoubtedly be considered a hardship by many Senators, though the country will applaud this new spirit of application. The legislative machine is to be driven under forced draught "until the Currency bill is passed." Probably that is a good way to get a Currency bill passed. It is certainly not the way to get a good bill passed. There are now three measures in form for consideration. There is the bill as it passed the House, which now has no friends; there is what is called the Administration bill, reported by Mr. OWEN'S half of the Committee and favored by that Senator, and the bill prepared by Mr. HITCHCOCK and the Republican members of the Senate Committee. Mr. HITCHCOCK supported his bill in an able speech on Tuesday, a speech that shows how much he has profited by the Committee hearings. His bill is the best of the three: for one reason, because it strikes out the concession to Bryanism in respect to "lawful money" and provides for note redemption in gold. But the spirit of the Democratic conference was that the Owen-Administration bill should be supported. And it is for the passage of this bill that the pressure of long daily sessions is to be applied.

The substitution of pressure for candid discussion, for the light of reason, and for deliberate conviction, is not a well-chosen device in currency legislation. In the days of our civil strife half a century ago an Illinois Colonel and an Iowa Colonel fell to discussing the merits of their respective regiments. The Illinois Colonel took his final stand upon the assertion that there were more men of sincere piety in his regiment than in any Iowa regiment. Whereupon the Iowa Colonel rushed to his quarters and ordered out Company I for baptism. Statistical results may be attained in that manner, but the best authorities agree that that is not the way to save souls. The best authorities upon banking and currency will agree, we are sure, that sound money legislation cannot with certainty be had by the process of putting on the screws in the manner decreed by the Democratic conference.

Nevertheless, there is abundant room for hope that the discussion of these daily sessions may give a favorable turn to Senatorial views and convictions. It is perhaps as well that the Senate should give its attention diligently to this subject. Certainly it would be a great public misfortune if, after all the light that has come of hearings and debates, after all the knowledge that has been gained, not only at Washington, but throughout the country, legislation should now fail. No doubt it is better that legislation should fail than that bad legislation should be had. But we are confident that no really bad bill can be put through. The number of amendments required to eliminate the remaining badness is really very small. Even the Administration bill, with a few changes, although they are important, would be acceptable to bankers and to the country. Now that the Senate is to settle down to the work with serious determination there is ground to believe that the final result may be better and sounder than any one of the three bills now under consideration.

CONFUSION IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The correspondent for whom Representative MANN vouches as an American of good repute, unconnected with the Government in the Philippines, adds his testimony as to the confusion introduced in the Islands by the first steps toward realizing the President's new methods. The service is generally demoralized by the abrupt dismissal of so many of the experienced and capable officials, by the natural uncertainty as to how far the process is to go, and by the stimulation of the ambitions of the native politicians.

In this latter direction the effect is likely to be particularly embarrassing. Since the natives have received a majority of the places on the Commission their power over legislation is greatly increased. As there is no veto power in the hands of the Governor, and as native legislation can be resisted only by the formal disapproval of the Congress at Washington, the control of the Legislature is a valuable prize for the politicians. Already, according to Mr. MANN'S informant, factions are forming under the lead of Mr. QUEZON, the Delegate to Washington, and Mr. OSMENA, the Speaker of the Assembly. The former is a Tagalog and popular with his own people; the latter is a Visayan, with a strong following among the Visayans. This division along race lines is but an example of what is sure to develop under the system of premature control for the natives. It is to be recalled, however, that the change which has been made in giving the natives a majority of the Commission may be reversed, if circumstances warrant, and though the process would be awkward and likely to cause discontent which might have been avoided, it will afford an avenue of escape for the Administration.

THE POSTAL VAN ORDINANCE.

Secretary of State MITCHELL MAY has until Dec. 28 to consider the speed regulation passed by the Board of Aldermen on Tuesday, rescinding the exemption from the traffic rules accorded to the motor-car vans operated by contractors carrying the United States mails. Second Assistant Postmaster General STEWART argued that this regulation would interfere with the delivery of Christmas mail. But if Secretary MAY does not sign it until after Christmas the vans may continue to run at excessive speed and across the tides of traffic during the period of congestion that will intervene. Should he wait?

The 250 mail trucks in this city have killed fifteen people since Jan. 1. The Aldermanic committee reports that this is at the rate of one vehicle out of every eighteen destroying a human life every year. Taking all the motor vehicles in the city, one out of every 230 kills somebody every year. Here is a great disproportion in the percentage of fatalities between mail wagons and other motor vehicles. Inasmuch as seven persons have been run down and killed by the postal vans since Sept. 1, it is fair to assume that some life will be lost between now and Dec. 28 as a consequence of Secretary MAY'S delay in signing the restrictive ordinance.

Is there any one who would care to have his Christmas goods delivered a few hours or a few moments early at the expense of a human life? That is the question for Mr. MAY to consider.

A QUESTION FOR EVERY BOROUGH.

The Brooklyn Eagle is alert enough to discover that the Forty-second Street Station in Manhattan is a Brooklyn question. If the other boroughs wake up in time they can exert their influence also on a question which concerns them equally with Manhattan. In the entire greater city there is no other focus such as Forty-second Street will be. Even if any other should rival it in volume of travel, no other will rival it in its central and competitive character. For example, the busiest station on the present Interborough route is Atlantice Avenue, Brooklyn, where the Long Island and the Interborough roads come together. But at Forty-second Street several roads come together. Not only do the Interborough and Brooklyn roads come together there, but so also do several east and west routes, to both New Jersey and Queens. Whoever rides on any of those routes is interested in having there a choice of express stations.

On the other hand, the road which avoids this centre will lose an originating point of travel of much importance. In this respect there is community of interest between fare payers and fare takers. For the Brooklyn road to shirk this competition is to abandon the business to the Interborough. The reason why the outer boroughs hardly appreciate the importance of this consideration is that they do not know its value. In all Brooklyn there are only four stations where access to Manhattan can be had for a single fare. In the Bronx there are only 29 such points. On the new system Brooklyn will have 140 stations instead of 4, the Bronx will have 75, and Queens 41. All these boroughs are interested in having equality of access to the central ganglion of travel on both systems. The boroughs will suffer as well as the companies if there is failure in this point.

To elaborate this from the Brooklyn point of view, as an example for the other boroughs, it may be said that sixteen tracks are to enter Manhattan from that borough. The regions tributary to those tracks average only nine persons to the acre, against 400 to the acre in residential portions of Manhattan served by the other half of the dual subway system. For the first time there is to be equality of transit conditions between those two sections, and the equality should be perfect. It will be much blemished if the express stations on the one route are less convenient than on the other. It will be a costly mistake for the entire city if the sections of Brooklyn which have a capacity of forty-fold growth are cheated of any part of it, and it would be no small part if the inconvenience due to the lack of an Interborough express station at Broadway and Forty-second Street were to be duplicated on the new system. At present no convincing reasons are given for making another local stop at Broadway and Forty-second Street, although it thrives on the discrimination against it. An express station there is an engineering possibility with only minor objections in differences of level, and operating considerations. The Forty-second Street section is entitled to express stations as close together as in the financial district, where nobody would think of abandoning one. The place for changing trains is in the outer boroughs, where there is compensation by the speed on the long ride. When express stations are omitted for the sake of compelling riding at the convenience of the carrier rather than of the rider the system suffers. That means not that Manhattan suffers, but that the outer boroughs suffer more than they appreciate. Otherwise there would be an outcry surpassing even that of The Eagle on behalf of Brooklyn.

MAYOR KLINE'S APPOINTMENTS.

We trust that it is not disrespectful to remind Mayor KLINE of the time-honored advice of Chancellor KENT to the young Judge, that it would be well to give his decisions and reserve his reasons for them. The Mayor was in a peculiarly delicate situation as to the chief appointment he had to make to the Board of Education, that for the place of President CHURCHILL. His own tenure of office is brief. It must be but a month before he gives way to the Mayor-elect. He knew that Mr. MITCHEL desired the reappointment of Mr. CHURCHILL. There was apparently strong support for that gentleman from those who ought to be good judges of his fitness, and, though there was also opposition which we consider far more authoritative, Mr. KLINE may sincerely have felt that he was not qualified to weigh the two elements and then to take a side disagreeable to his immediate successor.

We heartily wish that he had been wise enough and strong enough to leave to Mr. MITCHEL the appointment of Mr. CHURCHILL at some future time. We regard Mr. CHURCHILL as a reactionary rather than a reformer, and the influence he exerts seems to us, on the whole, extremely unfortunate. One need but read Mayor KLINE'S own statement to realize the unfavorable conditions existing, especially as to the organized attempts of the teachers to dictate the policy of the city toward education and especially toward their own class. For this we regret to say that Mr. CHURCHILL must be held largely responsible. At Albany and at home, by legislation and otherwise, he has sought to make the teaching force, and especially the higher officers on the teaching side, dependent on the Board of Education, which he and his friends control. He has promoted and invited precisely that relation between the Board and the teachers that inevitably tends to "politics" in the schools, and Mr. KLINE'S experience with the teachers who "assume that they have a natural right to advise or even to dictate to the Mayor of the City" is the logical outcome.

The other appointments of the Mayor are as a rule good. We are sorry that he found it advisable not to reappoint Mr. ABRAHAM STERN. We have not always agreed with the views of Mr. STERN, but he is an able man, and his knowledge of the work of the Board is unexcelled by that of any other member. Mr. FLEXNER is, of course, an excellent appointee and will do good service in the Board.

MARY'S LAMB AND THANKSGIVING

The celebration of his 103d birthday on Sunday last at Lancaster, Mass., recalls to Mr. RICHARD K. POWERS the incident of the lamb—it was a twin—that followed his cousin, MARY SAWYER, to the district school in March, 1814. The sweet singer of the incident, who was Mrs. SARAH JOSEPHA BUELL HALE, was the first to suggest the establishment of a Thanksgiving Day for the whole nation.

Mrs. HALE, who, with Mr. LEWIS A. GODEY, for forty years edited Godey's Lady's Book, was the undoubted author of the cherished verses. The lines have been ascribed to many persons of many cities, but THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW was fortunate in publishing on Jan. 31, 1903, a circumstantial account of their making from the pen of the philologist, HORATIO HALE of Ontario, Canada, her relative by marriage. Dr. LOWELL MASON, the musician, had called upon Mrs. HALE to supply verses for the training of school children in vocal music—the first attempt to introduce singing into the public schools. Besides the world famous "Mary's Lamb," the verses beginning

If ever I see, on bush or tree,
Young birds in their pretty nest,

and many others relating to birds and pet animals, appeared in Mrs. HALE'S school song book. A copy of the "Songs for Our Children," published in 1830 and containing the "Mary" lyric, was still in the possession of Mrs. HALE'S family in 1903.

Mrs. HALE exercised a great influence on the social life of the nineteenth century in America. She organized the first great bazaar in 1840, which cleared over $35,000, and has been called the "great-grandmother of all the large public bazaars, centennial tea parties, and post-centennial "kirmesses" that have followed in the past seventy-odd years. Her removal to Philadelphia from New England suggested to her that Thanksgiving Day should be celebrated elsewhere. President WASHINGTON had in 1789—when she was one year old—set apart the last Thursday in November for this purpose, following the New England precedent. Thereafter no Chief Executive of the nation followed his example until Mrs. HALE took advantage of the national feeling engendered by the civil war to persuade President LINCOLN of the need of an anniversary of public thanksgiving and prayer. It is well that we should remember at this time the goodness and patriotism of this revered lady, who was a young woman when "Mary's Lamb" made its historic gambol, and whose long life blessed successive generations until the present.

FARM AND CITY.

An Iowa professor is telling farmers' institutes that the high cost of living is due to the drift to the cities. He ought to tell that to the city men whom he wishes to divert to the farms. He can't shock the farmers by telling them why their prices are high. If the drift to the cities raises the cost of their products the farmers will not be kept from the cities.

According to the professor, in 1800 90 per cent. of the population were farmers, against 33 per cent. now. But what does that prove? We have more bushels apiece now than then, for the simple reason that one man now can raise more than a dozen could then. In 1800 farmers did not plow and harvest by power machines twenty-four hours a day. They were willing to, but what was impossible for man and beast a hundred years ago is easy now by the machinery which could not exist without the drift to the cities. Man does not live by eating alone. If 90 per cent. of the population were sent back to the farms, how should we be clothed or housed, or how could we and our goods be transported on the railways? The professor's figures may be right, but his deductions will stand checking up.

The abundance of manufactures which we enjoy is due to the fact that the number of hands we require for the production of our food is constantly smaller. What is wanted on the farms is not more men but more brains. In the future as in the past the production per farmer can increase at the same time that the proportion of farm laborers decreases. It is to this release of hand work from the farms that we must look for the supply of factory hands needed to supply us with other necessaries and to increase our exports of manufactures.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Varying an Old Subterfuge.

This newspaper, like others, has a firm conviction, which it thinks justified, that when people with things to sell or announcements to make want the quality of publicity which its advertising columns can give, those people should pay for it the prices which are so cheerfully supplied on application at the business office. Closely related to this conviction is the other that any device for obtaining that publicity without going through the little formality mentioned, is a departure, to a degree large or small, from the honesty and fair dealing which ought to characterize all business operations.

Hence has THE TIMES protested against, and done what it could to stop, the once common, but now waning, habit of hiring newsdealers to insert, before delivering the paper, pages more or less like its own pages and bearing advertisements that, to the extent of the likeness, deceive readers into the belief that these advertisements carry the prestige and inspire the confidence carried and inspired by those for which THE TIMES assumes a considerable measure of responsibility. Hence is it, also, that THE TIMES protests against, and will do what it can to stop, a variant on the illicit insert plan which has just come to its attention.

One CLEMONS—who has done straightforward advertising in the past and therefore knows the proper method—has seen fit to send out by mail what looks to the uninitiate like half of a TIMES news page on one side, and on the other like a half-page TIMES advertisement. He has, indeed, removed from his photographic reproduction the title line which stands at the top of the original, but few will notice that, especially as the familiar "Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES" heads the long dispatch from Washington that fills the first column.

Now, this is not the basest of imaginable crimes; it will not at all shake the pillars of society or seriously affect the fortunes of THE TIMES. Its moral obliquity, however, is obvious, and whoever chooses can pretty safely apply to the man who does it whatever name critics are accustomed to use when talking to or about men who take the property of others without paying for it.

Invited, Hence Not Accidental.

Rarely, if ever, in the long list of what, most often inaccurately, are called automobile accidents, has there happened one more dreadful in its consequences than that which took place on the Pelham Parkway Tuesday night. As rarely has one of them illustrated more clearly the sort of automobiling that not only perils the life of those who indulge in it, but brings an almost equal danger on all who use the public highways.

This disaster, with its long score of dead and injured, was in no true sense of the word an accident; it was the natural result—the result always possible and even probable—of driving motor cars through the night at illegal and excessive speed, regardless of the conditions that make it dangerous.

The chief blame rests on the occupants of the car that, in order to pass one ahead, was turned to the left and rushed ahead without due precaution to ascertain whether or not this getting on the wrong side of the road would cause a collision with another, moving in its right of way in the other direction. That was sheer recklessness of the kind that led to the passage of the statute defining as murder homicides which, while not intentional, show "depravity of mind." Such depravity was obviously present in this case, and how much of it was that of the hired chauffeur, and how much that of those who employed and presumably controlled him, is a question more difficult to decide than important to settle. It was a well-shared responsibility.

Less open to reprehension, but still not free from blame, were the occupants of the other car in collision. They did have the right of way, but according to all accounts they were going at a rate that made sure to happen what did happen in case they encountered an automobile managed as was the one they met—a contingency which the reasonably careful automobilist keeps as constantly in mind as he does his own obligation not to endanger the lives of other users of the roads.

For a wonder, in this instance the representatives of the proverbial "innocent bystander"—the occupants of the car moving slowly on its own side of the road and ahead of which the driver of the car behind tried to get—escaped all injury. Had the collision occurred perhaps only a second sooner than it did, they too would have been involved in the catastrophic outcome, and, without any fault whatever on their part, have been added to the number of victims. That is the fate which the cautious automobilist is constantly apprehending, and the chance of it is what wears upon his nerves and tires him far more than does the driving of his car.

It Wasn't Even Difficult!

It would be, of course, a wild exaggeration to say that anybody can now do the sort of aeroplaning which until a few weeks ago was to every aviator except one so obviously the first phase of a fatal plunge to the ground that none dreamed of attempting it. They "knew" that it was impossible, and, if asked for proof, would have pointed to the long list of dead fliers whose machines had accidentally turned upside down. Then PEGOUD turned his that way, intentionally, and that "made all the difference," as the saying is.

The known impossibility was then revealed as nothing of the sort, but a thing to be done like another—to paraphrase the once famous and still not quite forgotten SAM PATCH. And it was only for days that PEGOUD had the aerial loop to himself, a unique achievement. Other Frenchmen, not content with imitating him, made yet more astonishing circles and inversions and convicted him of the fault, a grave one in that audacious company, of cautiousness and conservatism!

Now LINCOLN BEACHEY, an American, is looping loops aloft and alow, and flying head downward as gracefully as anybody—which can't be saying much. They will all—all the aviators, that is—be doing the same thing soon.

PEGOUD says that the newly acquired power is useful—that it will decrease, not increase, the number of fatalities. The prophecy is pleasant, but no diminution in the rate of adding to aviation's terrible record is yet apparent. Only too often the day when one aviator isn't killed is a day when more than one meets that fate.

LIBRARY PLANTS A FAILURE.

Soil Must Be Enriched and Appropriate Shrubs Chosen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I don't know whether it was caused by your kindness in publishing my letter recently, but the weeping forsythia is gone from in front of the new library at Forty-second Street.

Now that the authorities are showing some interest, would it not be well to remind them that so far nothing they have planted in that difficult spot has shown any sign of thriving, except, of course, the privet, which would grow anywhere. The barberry hedge last year looked worse when it was removed than when it was put in, and the box bushes died in an astonishing way. Even the grass looks unhappy. This is because the soil is very poor and in need of renewing to a depth of two feet at least.

When we want to make a handsome border in the country we excavate and put in new soil, and how much more necessary this must be in Fifth Avenue ought to be clear to any one who thinks about it. Two feet of good, yellow, fibrous loam, liberally mixed with manure, and, if necessary, leaf mold, ought to be put in before any more public money is wasted in setting out plants, to languish and dwindle before our disgusted eyes. The soil should, of course, be mixed by an expert gardener.

At the end of March the following shrubs might be planted: At each side of the steps, next the wall, six standard lilacs, ten or twelve feet high, with bare stems like trees. In front of these alternate groups of Berberis vulgaris and Spirea thunbergia, three of each in a group. In front of these a square-clipped hedge of Berberis thunbergii and an edging, next the stone, of prostrate Juniper tamariscifolia. This is glaucous and very handsome. With this planting there would be a lot of Winter colors, as Spirea thunbergii is still in full leaf, Nov. 20, and is a lovely bronze. At the end of April it is covered with white flowers. The red of the barberries would be handsome against the white marble, and the lilacs would make their effect in May, and before, as their young leaves are so pretty and so early. These standard lilacs would have to be imported, and would not be cheap, but low bushes would probably have their flowers stolen, and would not have the form necessary in such an architectural setting.

Behind the lilacs, to soften the effect of the wall, Euonymus radicans would be excellent, and I see that a row of tiny plants of this has been set out. But it is too late to plant evergreens, and the euonymus will probably disappear like so many of the plants that preceded them.

Only rather large shrubs should be planted in this important place. Surely the city can afford it. But all plantings will be useless without two feet of good new soil.

The present arrangement of grass behind a hedge can never look anything but a pen for pet sheep, though the privet might be left until the Spring, if only the soil behind it is renewed.

Speed of Mail Wagons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The intelligence and common sense displayed by William V. McManus in his letter entitled "The Fast Mail Vans," seem to me deserving of especial commendation.

One has only to think of the average speed attained by these vans when horse drawn to appreciate what the substitution of the motor for the horse has done to increase their speed efficiency. I dare say that the average speed with horses under favorable conditions was not over seven miles an hour, and under unfavorable conditions, such as snowy or icy pavements, not over five miles, with decided uncertainty at times of reaching their destination at all. In saying this I claim the benefit of close personal observation because my concern for the welfare of horses has stimulated vigilance, and I know that when the going was bad the old heavily-loaded, horse-drawn mail vans were among the first to get stalled. Now, consider what the motor means as an improvement and consider how reasonable a regulation to nine miles an hour would be!

The whole "tempest," to my mind, arises in a misconception of right of way, whereas right of way should have no bearing whatever on the question of speed.

Personal References Best.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Servants' references should be personal, not written. It may save Edith Harman Brown time to know I have lately learned that a cook formerly in my employ is using a written reference signed with my name but not written by me. I make it a rule not to give written references, as they are sometimes lent or sold, but am always willing to give a personal one to help the servant if she deserves it, to help a "housewife" if she does not.

NO "UNCLE REMUS" STOCK.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The use of the phrase "Uncle Remus stock" in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning is not justified. There has never existed nor does there now exist any "Uncle Remus stock." The original and only Uncle Remus Magazine, edited first by my father, was owned and published by the Sunny South Publishing Company of Atlanta, Ga.

The Pulitzer Publishing Company did not purchase the Uncle Remus Magazine or any stock of the Sunny South Publishing Company, nor did the Pulitzer Publishing Company acquire the right to the use of the name of "Uncle Remus" in any connection whatever. The following paragraph is from a letter to me dated Oct. 27, 1913, and signed by F. Fayram, receiver of the Sunny South Publishing Company:

> The Bondholders' Committee of Sunny South Publishing Company sold to Walter Pulitzer the names comprising the list of "Uncle Remus" for $500. It was understood that the names were to be used for circularizing. There was no question of their filling the unexpired subscription with Pulitzer Magazine, nor was any right or title to the name "Uncle Remus" involved—it was not even asked for.

When I communicated the contents of the foregoing paragraph to Walter Pulitzer he wrote at once stating he thought he had bought the Uncle Remus Magazine, but that in the circumstances he would eliminate from Pulitzer's Magazine any reference to Uncle Remus and would not permit the use of the name Uncle Remus in connection with any future publicity.

PANKHURST CONTRIBUTIONS

Will Militant Suffragists Tell How the Money Is Spent?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mrs. Pankhurst is reported as saying that her last campaign of window-smashing, arson, and destruction of mail matter cost $150,000. Now, a box of matches may be bought for 1 cent, and one match suffices to set fire to a lumber yard. For 50 cents enough acid may be obtained to destroy hundreds of letters. And a quarter of a dollar will buy a hammer heavy enough to break plate-glass windows. Furthermore, when the suffragettes are convicted in the courts they pay no fines, preferring to go to jail, and thereby, incidentally, they save a board bill for a week or two.

Of course, their printing costs something; but as their literature is only a parrotlike repetition of the same old song, the type is kept standing, and the bill cannot be large. Now and then in a street fight a suffragette loses her hat and her skirt is torn off; then, I suppose (but am not informed) new ones are paid for out of the war chest.

But all these items amount to very little compared with $150,000. What is done with the remainder? Do these desperately devoted disciples of "the greatest woman of all time" receive salaries for their days and weeks in and out of prison? Or are they paid a commission proportioned to the value of the property they destroy? I should think the liberal American donors would like a specific answer. Perhaps those of our suffragists who have so strenuously exploited their heroine are sufficiently enlightened on the subject to give the answer. Observe that I say "those of," for it is to the credit of Dr. Anna Shaw and other able advocates of the suffrage cause that they took no part in the wild work. After that question is answered, perhaps those liberal contributors will tell us how it feels to be participants in crimes against unoffending citizens of a country with which we are at peace.

A LOOKER-ON.

New York, Nov. 25, 1913.

The Responsibility of Mothers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Not having heard Mrs. Pankhurst deliver her speech last evening, and therefore not emotionally swayed by her reputed eloquence, I am able to judge of it only from cold print. The principal point noted is her irrational confusion of cause and effect in dealing with the social evil. If, as she claims, "the English Government is engaged directly in the white slave traffic," who but English mothers are responsible, in their failure to instill in their children, now the lawmakers and soldiers of that nation, high moral and true respect for women?

The men of a nation are what the mothers made them or allowed them to become, for the mothers were, or should have been, their earliest associates, and had the power to mold their mind and nature when in a plastic state. Mrs. Pankhurst might to her advantage read the eminent works on child culture by Friedrich Froebel and Emanuel Swedenborg in her study of the social evil. A wave of right-eousness, through religion and home instruction, is the only effective cure for this and other evils, and women have a larger part to play than through the superficial treatment of them in politics.

LET US GIVE THANKS.

Shall we give thanks as did the publican
Because we are not like our fellow-man?
Shall we give thanks because the broken heart
Is of some wretched fellow-man a part?
Shall we give thanks because some other soul
Is bruised and wrenched while ours is sound and whole?
Shall we give thanks because our days are bright
While others wander through a starless night?
Shall we give thanks because our fight is won
While others fight and, fighting, fall undone?
Shall we give thanks because our hearth is warm
While others, half-clad, breast the Winter storm?
Shall we give thanks because, our battles won,
We fold our hands and say our work is done?
Shall we give thanks because the cry of pain
Is driven from some other tortured brain?
Shall we give thanks because our friends are true
While friends of other men are false or few?
Shall we give thanks that fortune has been kind
To us, while grief has wrecked some other mind?
Shall we give thanks because love fills our heart
While love, and others, ever walk apart?
Let us give thanks because our hearts are strong
To meet our trials as we pass along.
Let us give thanks because our present grief
Must shortly pass; to-morrow brings relief.
Let us give thanks that eyes which ache and weep
Grow strong and dry when touched by magic sleep.
Let us give thanks that on our path we find
Such problems as make strong the active mind.
Let us give thanks that men who toiled and died
Left milestones which may serve us for a guide.
Let us give thanks for hope, which points the way
When feet are sore, and akles are dull and gray.
Let us give thanks that each one holds the key
Which, turned with skill, unlocks his destiny.
Let us give thanks that when this life is past
Death and eternity claim us at last.

ABOLISH SING SING

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The time has come for us to face resolutely the great question of prison reform. I am convinced that the State should abolish Sing Sing and that a farm industrial prison should be built in its place. The State should buy enough land to be able to raise large crops for the use of the prisons and other institutions, and sell the surplus product, if any, or distribute it to the poor.

I am told that the butter bill of the State hospitals for the insane runs up into many thousands of dollars every year. Why can't prison farms and tramp farms go into dairying, poultry raising and egg production? Why do thousands of prisoners in our State prisons remain idle a part of the day? Idleness is a deteriorating state. Why cannot they earn more than a cent and a half a day? Why must the State pay two-thirds of the prisoners' maintenance every year? The farm industrial prison would be productive, would be healthful, and would develop the honor system. Closer contact with nature and healthful work in the open air will have a much better influence upon the prisoner than the present system of confinement, which will be necessary only in some instances. I do not believe in patching up a bad proposition. I do not believe that a cell block in Sing Sing as part of a crowded group of buildings on seventeen acres will satisfy the people of this State.

We want to give prisoners, not frills and fancies, but a "square deal." We want to make them work hard the entire day. We want to give them enough to eat and a decent place to live in. We want to give them health. We want particularly to see that they will be improved morally and physically and that they will be able to help themselves when they leave prison and be a benefit instead of a detriment to the community. We want to have the State producing much more of what it now buys in the open market. Other States are doing it. New York ought to.

But the Sing Sing problem, large as it is, is only a part of the problem. We must get our prisons out of politics. We must so arrange the administration of correctional institutions that there shall not be sudden changes of management and that those in authority shall be competent and well trained executives. We must develop the labor of prisoners so that they will be earning something for their families and themselves and reduce the cost of maintenance to the State.

We have a long and difficult road still to travel before prison reform in the State of New York will mean excellent prisons. And now is the best time to settle the question of Sing Sing.

IN THE ART GALLERIES.

New York Views at Anderson Galleries—A Whistler at Silo's.

At the Anderson Galleries a group of New York views and other Americana, chiefly selections from the collection of the late J. Remsen Lane, are on view. The artistic interest is meagre, but the prints abound in entertaining reminiscence of the city's callow days and the nation's milestones of history. The Currier lithograph, printed in colors, of the "Girl of the Period," for example, what has that to say to the Girl of To-day about the change in the feminine standpoint? The "period" was 1860, and the girl stands fashionably, assuming the "Grecian bend," not of course to be compared with the "Débutante slouch" of yesterday, but equally indicative of lovely woman's tendency to stoop to folly. And the 1860 girl is twirling a cigarette between her fingers—do we any of us remember that? She wears a great deal of hair and a squirrel perches on top of it—that was a queer touch. For is there a shred of sentimentality about her, albeit Mid-Victoria must have been her patron saint.

Among the New York views is one of Broadway done in aquatint by a Swedish artist traveling in America. It was printed in the spick-and-span City of Stockholm in 1824, and one finds it quite easy to reconstruct the remarks of the Stockholm public gazing at the pigs running loose in our principal thoroughfare. For collectors, there are scarce American portraits and civil war caricatures and a very rare colored aquatint showing the burning of the frigate Philadelphia in the Harbor of Tripoli in 1804. The sale takes place Dec. 2.

The Kleinberger Galleries announce that owing to the interest shown by the public in the De Ridder collection and the fact that the proceeds of the admission fees go to charitable institutions the galleries will remain open on Thanksgiving Day from 10 A. M. until 1 P. M.

At the Silo Galleries is assembled a various collection of paintings owned by Gen. Stillman F. Kneeland and others, and including a gruesome series of extremely large canvases by W. R. Leigh and L. Chapman, representing the destruction of the Maine. Another picture by Mr. Leigh, "Raiding Moonshiners," is in the window, and detains the passer-by. In the Fifth Avenue window is a picture called "Venice at Night," signed "Whistler, 1880." This, too, is a magnet for the hurrying throngs. One knowing person was heard to declare that it could not be a Whistler because it was sans butterfly. Another still more knowing recalled pictures signed quite candidly Whistler, but left devoid of butterfly in the amount of color. The first reassured him on that score, knowing a man who had known Whistler and who said that occasionally he used a great deal of color. Both agreed that it was not at all characteristic of Whistler, and therefore could not be a copy, because copyists always tried their hand on characteristic pictures. Then some one remembered that in an etching by Whistler, one of the Venice set, by a curious coincidence, a long slender boy stood like that on a gondola. In this way expertise gains ground with the public.

At the Merwin Sales Company are some etchings and lithographs by Whistler, including early impressions from canceled plates, notably "The Toilet," a drypoint executed in 1863, unknown to Wedmore and known to Mr. Mansfield only through an impression from the canceled plate. And there is a presentation copy of the "Millbank" that should have its value enhanced by the penciling on the margin. Other artists represented in the collection, which is that of Edwin N. Lapham, are Jean Audran, Bartolozzi, Bracquemond, Burridge, Cameron, Duerer, Edelinck, Goltzius, Haden, Meryon, Nanteuil, Lepere, Pennell, also Rembrandt. The sale occurs on the evening of Dec. 3.

Beautiful stained glass of the early periods is to be seen at the Charles Galleries in the Grosvenor Thomas collection until Dec. 2. Two or three specimens are thirteenth century work, and give an impressive idea of the knowledge of the craftsmen of that time. Above all, they knew their limitations, and in keeping well within them produced some of the most glorious glass the world has seen. Certain collectors in this country, outside of the museums, have become fully awakened to the decorative value of the old work. Three windows of the present collection have been bought by Mr. Pratt for his Long Island home, whither also has gone the Elizabethan Room that attracted so much attention last Spring in these same galleries.

TO PUSH MONEY BILL AT NIGHT SESSIONS

Senate Democrats Also Agree to Forego Christmas if It Isn't Passed by That Time.

O'GORMAN GETS INTO LINE

Unanimity at Party Conference Shows Wilson's Complete Control of the Situation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—In obedience to the wishes of President Wilson, that the Currency bill be hastened to its passage as fast as possible, the conference of Democratic Senators to-day decided on a programme that was absolutely unprecedented as far as any one here could remember. They voted without a dissenting voice to have no Christmas holidays unless the unexpected happened and the bill was passed before Dec. 24. The President already has announced his intention of being out of town over the holidays and he will not return in time to hold the New Year's reception at the White House.

Carrying the plan for forcing prompt action still further, the conference decided that after Dec. 1 the Senate would meet every day at 10 A. M., sit until 6 P. M., take a two-hour recess for dinner, and have an evening session until 11 o'clock.

The Republicans are indignant at the action of the Democrats. They point out that in obedience to the wishes of the President Congress has remained in absolutely idle session since before the end of August, when the Currency bill passed the House. Since then—while the Committee on Banking and Currency has been preparing the bill for the Senate—practically no business has been transacted. They say the real purpose of the new Democratic move is a desperate attempt to pass the bill in time to justify the President in his demand that the extra session be prolonged so that the regular session may be left for trust legislation.

Shows Wilson's Firm Grip.

To-day's action of the party conference is a striking illustration of the discipline the President has instilled into the party ranks. The fact that Mr. O'Gorman of New York offered the resolution binding the Senate to continuous session unless the bill has passed before Christmas showed this interpretation in a peculiar way. Prior to the election Mr. O'Gorman was outspoken in his opposition to the House bill, and to all efforts to hasten the Senate's action. He had predicted an indefinitely long debate in the Senate.

"The bill will be passed before the Christmas holidays," was Mr. O'Gorman's only comment on the action of the conference to-day. This is the conference's resolution:

> Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that, beginning on the first day of December, 1913, the Senate should meet at 10 o'clock A. M., and should sit until 6 P. M.; recess until 8 P. M., and sit until 11 P. M. each day until the Currency bill be voted on, and that no Christmas recess be taken except for Christmas Day unless the Currency bill be passed prior thereto, the adjournment being from the 24th until the 26th of December.

The conference then adopted another resolution providing for daily meetings of the conference this week, until a complete understanding is reached regarding the Currency bill. The Democratic half of the Committee on Banking and Currency was in session all this afternoon in an effort to reach some compromise that would shorten debate and check Republican assaults on the measure. Chairman Owen said the Republican bill had some good points. An effort will be made to incorporate such of them as do not strike too near the vitals of the Democratic measure.

Talk in the conference this morning made it plain that the Democrats were prepared at the present of pointed criticism from Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska, such Democrats as may go to his support, and the full strength of the Republicans, both conservative and progressive. They pointed out that while the Administration bill, as the Owen-Glass measure is generally described, might be good in the ordinary, it would be very bad politics to have to defend a system owned by the banks and largely controlled by them as against the Republican proposal for a publicly owned system directly controlled by the Government. Mr. Hitchcock left Washington last night for his home, so that no overtures could be made to him, and it is still uncertain what effort will be made toward concili

OUTLAWS.

Misses Morris, French, Bonnan, Harmon, Saunders, Andree, Knight, Lee, Bollow, Meyer, Denken, Hall.
Fairies, Court Ladies, Hussars, Cuirassiers, Dancers, Pages, Heralds, &c.

The most impressive feature of "Hop-O-My-Thumb," the Drury Lane spectacle Manhattanized, is a garden of statues, disclosing possibly a hundred whitened figures in Watteau garb, which ultimately come to life, and go through various ballet evolutions, ranging from interesting adult manoeuvres to amusing antics by children dressed as Cupids.

And the most interesting personalities disclosed are those of the familiar and longitudinous De Wolf Hopper, who knows how to tell bad jokes as though they were good ones, and Miss Iris Hawkins, who, by way of contrast, is only a pennyworth of humanity, a mere splinter, in fact, with all the cunning tricks of her craft, and no end of assurance in getting them across the footlights.

Mr. Hopper is the King of somewhere or other whose first entrance is made during a court ball, on which occasion he is accompanied by a pack of hounds of the sort containing a man each to wag their tails and drive them life. These very funny hounds of the kind that children will be sure to like, and, if anybody attempts to kick them around, one may feel properly aggrieved.

Miss Hawkins is Hop, and it is she who sprinkles bread crumbs when the cruel woodcutter tries to lose her and her six brothers in the forest.

That forest, by the way, provides one of the very pretty pictures of the spectacle, and is by way of preparation for the subsequent appearance of the Ogre's Castle, where Hop and his brothers are saved from roasting through the young man's happy idea of stealing the Ogre's seven league boots. Before this happens, however, he has encountered the Tango Kid and the Turkey Trotter, who make strange noises and do queer steps and figure as part of the much needed comic relief in the jumble of song and dance, scenery and story.

By way of variety there is a sentimental story involving the King's daughter and Prince Hilario, who is saved by Hop from the Ogre. Then, after the various songs and jokes and spectacular features, the climax is developed in a glittering scene showing Hop and his brothers entering Fairyland.

"Hop o' My Tnumb" is, in short, the sort of entertainment one expects from its title and from previous experience. And to discuss it at great leng h would be to take too seriously what is obviously designed as the lightest sort of entertainment.

One may reasonably suggest, however, that showmen make a mistake in thinking that there is humor for the general public in professional allusion to "big and small time" Martin Beck and Marcus Loew. And such a song as the one about girls having to make a living is in bad taste in an entertainment designed largely to appeal to the juvenile element.

There are, however, occasional pretty numbers, such as "Mirabelle, the Forest Bird," sung by that very dainty person Miss Eva Fallon, and the love duo in which she and the statuesque Miss Gilette figure. And there is fun of a sort in Mr. Hopper's "Damaged Goods" with its side examination of various candidates for matrimony.

Also there is much prettiness to a scene in the King's palace, done in soft and alluring green tints, with a chorus of hoop-skirted girls.

'LUCIA' AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Mme. Hempel as the Heroine—First Appearance of Cristalli.

Lucia	Frieda Hempel
Alisa	Marie Mattfeld
Edgardo	Italo Cristalli
Lord Enrico Ashton	Pasquale Amato
Raimondo	Giullo Rossi
Ariurro	Angelo Bada
Normanno	Pietro Audisio

Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" appeared last evening in the répertory of the Metropolitan Opera House. Its appearance was not an occasion of great rejoicing, although it gave an opportunity to Mme. Frieda Hempel to exhibit the manner of song in which she is most distinguished and most successful, and this seemed to be the chief object of the performance. It is hardly to be supposed that the audience of the Metropolitan at this time takes pleasure in the music itself of opera of the palaeotechnic sort of which Lucia is at present the chief representative.

Miss Hempel as Lucia and Mr. Amato as Lord Enrico Ashton carried most of the burden of the performance, though mention should not be neglected of the flautist and the harpist of the orchestra, not named on the bill, who have such important assignments in the mad scene and the prelude to the second scene respectively. Mme. Hempel sang brilliantly and her upper tones were unusually effective. She ranks high at the present day as a representative of Lucia, and it would doubtless be difficult to know which way to turn to hear her airs in "Lucia" better sung than she sings them. And yet Mme. Hempel probably not rank among the great coloratura sopranos.

Mr. Italo Cristalli, a new tenor, made his first appearance here as Edgardo, and quite failed on this occasion to read him into clear to present himself as a leading tenor at the Metropolitan Opera House. His voice last night was sadly deficient in resonance; it had the quality known as "whiteness," and was troubled by the bleating effect that so frequently affects such voices. Worse yet, he showed an inability to stay upon the correct pitch for any considerable period. It may be that some of Mr. Cristalli's deficiencies were due to the nervousness of a first appearance in the Metropolitan Opera House, often felt to be a considerable ordeal; and that when he has gained a greater confidence, he may show a better quality, a clearer idea of the pitch, a better command of phrasing than he did last evening.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

John Bunny, a well-known moving picture actor, became a member of the Moving Picture Operators' Protective Union yesterday. He received a gold membership card from T. C. Barrows, a trustee of the union, at the studios of the Vitagraph Company, in Brooklyn.

Many members of the Indiana Society and several prominent singers attended the private hearing given Nina Barbour at the Palace Theatre yesterday afternoon. Miss Barbour is the young Indiana woman discovered in an East Side sweat shop, and who possesses a splendid contralto voice. She is to sing at the theatre next week.

The dramatic stock company at the Wadsworth Theatre in West 125st Street, is presenting a musical play this week in "Mme. Sherry." Florence Rittenhouse, the leading woman of the company, made her debut as a singer in the piece last Monday.

"Traffic in Souls," the moving picture dramatization of the Rockefeller white slave investigation, has proven such a drawing card at Weber's Theatre that Joe Weber yesterday made arrangements to remodel the old Fields cafe, where a second set of the films will be shown next week. The cafe, when made into a theatre, will seat 500 people.

Arrangements are being completed by the management of the Palace Theatre for the presentation, beginning Monday afternoon, of moving pictures of the Army and Navy football game, to be played at the Polo Grounds Saturday. These pictures will show President Wilson, several members of his Cabinet, and many members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Mme. Nuolo, prima doona soprano of La Scala, Milan, and Covent Garden, London, was among those giving box parties at the 10th performance of "America" at the New York Hippodrome yesterday afternoon. Twenty-three passengers from the steamship Huron enjoyed a theatre party at the Hippodrome also, reservations having been made for them by wireless last Monday by Capt. Chichester.

One of the largest dance halls in New York was opened last night on the roof of the Hamilton Theatre, at Broadway and 146th Street. The new dancing resort has accommodations for 1,500 people, and will be open every evening and on Sunday and holiday afternoons.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Century Opera Company will, for the first time, repeat an opera already presented, when, during the week of Jan. 5, "The Tales of Hoffmann" will be given a second week's run, replacing "Mignon," which will be given later in the season. Another change will be the presentation of "La Boheme" during the week of Dec. 29, instead of Massenet's "Manon," which will be given during the week of Jan. 27.

The programme for Paderewski's recital Saturday afternoon in Carnegie Hall has been announced as follows: Beethoven's Sonata in D Minor, Op. 31, No. 2; Daquin's "Le Coucou"; Couperin's "La Bandoline" and "Le Carillon de Cythere"; Schumann, Sonata in F Sharp Minor; Chopin, two nocturnes, Etudes, Op. 10, Nos. 12, 7, and 3; Mazurka in A Minor, and Polonaise in A Major; Stojowski's Chant d'Amour, and one of Liszt's Hungarian rhapsodies.

Josef Hofmann will give his third recital in Carnegie Hall on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 9. He has arranged a Chopin programme for the occasion.

The first entertainment of the new Music School League, formed to raise money for the Music School Settlement, will be given on the evening of Dec. 11 at Sherry's.

Myle. Julia de Kelety, a Hungarian soprano, will appear in a concert Saturday at the Central Opera House, 205 East Sixty-seventh Street. She will be assisted at the piano by Paul Yarthn.

Lasar S. Samiloff, baritone, will give a concert at Cooper Union on the evening of Dec. 27.

Herbert Waterous, the bass, who has been heard at the Metropolitan Opera House, and in light opera, has been engaged by the Century Opera Company to appear as Mephistopheles in "Faust" next week, alternating with Alfred Kaufman.

At yesterday afternoon's performance of "Thais," at the Century, the change of cast brought Beatrice La Palme into the title role. Morton Adkins was the Athanael and Gustaf Bergman again the Nicias.

His Outburst When Senate Stenographer Disturbed Lorimer Inquiry.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—Milton W. Blumenberg, formerly official stenographer of the United States Senate, died here last Friday, but the news became known generally only to-day. The body was cremated yesterday at Fresh Pond, N. Y.

In the Lorimer hearing while a shorthand man on the witness stand was reading notes transcribed, he said, from a secret voice-recording machine, Blumenberg in a sudden outburst declared that the witness was faking. The interruption was attributed to nervous breakdown due to overwork. His connection with the Senate, however, was terminated some months later, and he went into business in Chicago. Death was due in part to a general breakdown brought on by long years of hard work at Washington.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Trading Quiet and Prices a Little Lower on Eve of Holiday —Canada Takes More Gold.

Trading on the Stock Exchange became very light again yesterday, being influenced in this direction by the fact that it was the eve of a holiday. Even so the aggregate of transactions was considerably above Monday's extraordinarily small total. There was profit taking after Tuesday's rise and some further reflection in the way of short selling of bearish proclivities which in some quarters at least have been little affected by the market's recent show of resistance, but neither influence was exerted to a sufficient extent to make any large impression upon prices. Measured by the general level of quotations the market lost just about a quarter of the gain which it had made on Tuesday.

Money market events supplied one of the most interesting phases of the day's developments. No surprise was caused by the advance in call money to 5 per cent., particularly in view of the fact that Canada called upon this market for another $4,000,000, bringing the outflow within a week up to about $11,000,000. It was thought in quarters where the money market was being closely watched that there was still a good chance of the preparations for the Dec. 1 payments, which will have to be completed to-morrow, being gotten through with without the call rate going above the proverbial dividing line of 6 per cent. In sending gold to Canada New York is in effect acting as a buffer between the London market and the Canadian gold requirements. To how good purpose we are serving that end was indicated by the fact that discount rates fell in London yesterday to 2⅝ per cent., whereas it is most probable that the London open market rate would now be at least flat with the bank rate had London instead of New York been called upon to ship the $11,000,000 which have gone from here to Canada since the closing days of last week. This is a contribution to international money comfort which we well can make and without giving ourselves any uneasiness in view of the fact that we could upon the slightest necessity recoup ourselves by taking gold from Europe. The easier London discounts and the firmer call rate here found reflection in a fall in sterling exchange. The exchange rate it may be assumed with a fair degree of assurance is being kept above the gold import point only because of our own large investments in long bills.

A variety of factors are contributing to the Canadian demand for gold but probably the most potent are the large Canadian exports, particularly of grain. In other words the same general influence which accounts for the large credit trade balance which this country has been building up is contributing in large measure to Canada's ability to draw gold from other markets. Taking the money position of this country as a whole some offset to this loss of gold is supplied by the fact that this week the Government's deposits in national banks have again been increasing, rising in the latest daily treasury statement at hand to $93,800,000, the largest figure of the year.

Another weekly summary of the steel trade situation came to hand yesterday and presented no very exhilirating aspect. It told of the continuance of the recession which has now been in full swing for some weeks. The Iron Age summarizes the situation in the statement that the steel mills are now running at about two-thirds of capacity, while new orders are coming in at a rate less than one-third of capacity. Consumers seem to be counting upon still further recession in prices and are withholding orders partly for that reason. The impression is growing in manufacturing circles that the markets will, from now until the end of the year, when inventories will be taken, rely as much as possible upon stocks of merchandise already in hand, relatively small as these now seem to be. Such a process would in effect be piling up demands which the mills would be called upon to fill at a later date. In another direction a variation from recent general experience was afforded in the Union Pacific's statement for October which showed, as has been common, a substantial increase in gross earnings, but also, which has been much less common of late, a satisfactory increase in net. The Chicago & North Western also made a good report for the same month although some other October statements, including the Southern Pacific's, were unfavorable.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 3@5 per cent., with the last loan at 4 per cent. The renewal rate was 4 per cent.

Time money rates were 5@5¼ per cent. for sixty days, 4¾@5 per cent. for ninety days and four to six months.

Commercial paper was quoted at 5¼@5⅜ per cent. for the best names.

The local banks have lost $7,003,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Eliminating Fictitious Value.

When British consols sold under 75 the Clerical, Medical & General Life Assurance Society of London promptly wrote its holdings down to 70 to be on the safe side in the event of further depreciation. This action, when made public, brought out criticism from several quarters on the ground that such action on the part of insurance companies and banks would dissuade the public from purchasing consols, and might even be held accountable to some extent for the decline in the securities in recent years. The law requires auditors of the insurance companies to testify that the aggregate value of the assets is fully stated in the reports, which would make it necessary for the companies to revise the book value of the consols with each new low point touched if not further decline were anticipated at the time of the revision. A correspondent of The London Times aptly suggests that if writing down the book value of consols influences their price in that direction, then it must be assumed that writing them up to 80 would produce a corresponding advance.

Mr. Schwab Speaks Candidly.

Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, returned to New York from Pittsburgh yesterday without having undergone any change of heart regarding the business outlook. He was quoted in Pittsburgh as saying that it looked to him as though this country were running into the worst depression in its history. He said yesterday that optimistic statements given out for the purpose of covering up actual conditions were doing more harm than good. Steel conditions were bad, he said, and the public would get the facts soon enough.

Pacifics in October.

The October earnings statement of the Union Pacific showed improvement, both in gross and net, but that for the Southern Pacific showed another decrease from the earnings of the corresponding month of last year. The Union Pacific did a gross business of $10,374,000, which was $607,000 larger than for October, 1912, and its net earnings were $4,648,000, a gain of $279,000. For the first four months of the fiscal year the company's net earnings are still behind those for the first third of last year by $1,290,000, the earlier months of the current fiscal period having shown considerable losses. The Southern Pacific earned $403,000 less in October, and its net was $335,000 less than for the corresponding month of last year. For the four months the Southern Pacific lags behind the first four months of 1912 to the extent of $2,593,000 in net.

Good Buying of Copper.

Copper producers said yesterday that they detected signs of a revival of buying which promised to uncover demands for a substantial amount of the metal within the next fortnight. It was reported in trade circles that several large consumers had appeared in the market during the morning, and that the aggregate of the day's takings was probably 20,000,000 pounds. The price was 14⅝ cents for a large portion of the total, with some sales at 15 cents. Representatives of the larger selling agencies estimated, however, that the day's transactions had by no means been so heavy. They did not consider the extent of purchases so significant as the fact that consumers had appeared in the market with apparent intentions of breaking abruptly away from the attitude of complete indifference maintained throughout the month. In another way of putting it, the producer was better satisfied with the increase of inquiries than with the actual sales for the day.

Producers Grow Conservative.

The condition of business in the industries which use copper is not active enough to persuade refiners that their product will soon be in such demand that prices will recover to the 16⅞ cents level of the first week in the month. On the contrary, some important sellers are known to be willing to accept 15 cents for round lots of the metal, deliverable in thirty days, although they believe that the quotation may rise a few fractions above this figure before long. "The perpendicular drop of 2 cents a pound in a few days," said a copper man yesterday, "came as the direct result of a drastic slump in buying. For some time there was practically no demand whatever for the metal, a state of affairs that, naturally, could not continue. There is nothing in sight to indicate a heavy demand for copper, but I believe that considerable metal will be bought in the week after Thanksgiving, and that a steady call for supplies will follow. This will help prices."

Steel Men Are Gloomy.

While steel makers are saying very little for publication about their expectations it has been gathered lately from casual remarks that they are counting on good business throughout the greater part of next year. Like the bankers, they desire to see currency legislation definitely decided, not only because of the effect of such action on the country's general business, but also because of the fact that when this important matter is out of the way the Administration will be in a position to reveal more clearly its attitude toward the corporations. The financial community has been much concerned with rumors, apparently emanating from Washington, that Congress will be called upon this Winter to consider legislation vital to "big business." The steel industry is considered as the barometer of the country's industrial status. Steel men believe that developments at Washington likely to check industrial expansion will be reflected in their work first, and they would like to know what to expect as soon as possible.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Maintains a Fine Tone, but Trading Falls Off in Volume.

The outside security market was firm yesterday on a reduced volume of trading. The Oil issues were particularly well held with Standard Oil of New Jersey two points higher at 385, the latter the closing price. United Cigar Stores opened half a point lower at 88½, but later rose to 89¾, at which price it closed. Riker-Hegeman new shares sold at 7 and 8⅞, or a shade below the previous day's prices.

SEEK TO SAFEGUARD INVESTORS IN STOCKS

Stock Exchange Governors Ask for a Committee to Study Ways and Means.

DEMAND FULLER REPORTS

Reforms Along Lines of the British Companies Act Favored to Reassure the Public.

The New York Stock Exchange has put itself on record as favoring the enactment of Federal laws on the lines of the British Companies Act for the greater protection of investors, and has provided for the formation of a committee to work for reforms along that line.

Governors of the Exchange yesterday adopted resolutions calling upon the President to name a committee of five or more members to make a special study of means for remedying flagrant abuses of corporation financing. While some of the Governors have been quietly agitating for a long time more stringent requirements in the way of publicity for companies whose shares are listed on the Exchange, the recent unsavory developments following the M. Rumely, St. Louis & San Francvisco, and New Haven declines are thought to have been largely responsible for bringing the matter to a head at this time.

Under the British Companies Act the investor is safeguarded by the requirement that the fullest publicity must be given to the assets and earnings of a corporation desiring to put out a new security issue. If new stock is given as a bonus to the promoters, that fact must be stated, as well as the commissions which are paid to underwriters and bankers. Conservative brokers have long favored a similar law for this country.

The Stock Exchange has been doing missionary work among the corporations whose securities are listed on the Exchange in the interests of greater publicity, and expects many of them to inaugurate next year a system of complete quarterly reports, instead of the annual reports now in vogue. The Interstate Commerce Commission requires a detailed monthly statement from the railroads, but industrial companies are not required by Federal laws to make any reports at all. The Stock Exchange members feel that in demanding of corporations whose securities are dealt in on the floor that they issue annual reports they have been performing a function which should properly be assumed by the national Government.

The Governors yesterday adopted this resolution:.

Whereas, The questions involved in the incorporation, promotion and capitalization of corporations and the flotation of their securities vitally affect the securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, as well as the great quantity of securities not so listed; and

Whereas, It is the desire of this Exchange to co-operate as far as possible in bringing about the adoption of uniform measures for the greater protection of the investing public through more careful supervision of corporate organization with greater publicity and fuller and more frequent reports of operations than has been customary with many companies in the past. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of five or more be appointed by the President to make the above-mentioned matters the subject of special study, with the object of aiding to such solution of these questions as will tend to increase the safety and integrity of American investments, and at the same time afford every encouragement to legitimate enterprise.

Said committee shall report from time to time to the Governing Committee.

Many companies have refused to list their shares on the Stock Exchange in past years because of the requirement that annual reports of earnings must be made to the Exchange and to stockholders. The most notable instance was that of Standard Oil.

STEEL PRODUCTION CUT.

Output Two-Thirds of Capacity, New Orders Only One-Third.

A further decline in the operation of steel plants, with accompanying reductions in the hours of labor for workmen, is noted by trade publications as the feature of the week in the industry. Price recessions are reported as still in progress, although at a slow rate.

The Iron Age says:

Briefly, the situation in the steel trade is that the mills are running at about two-thirds of capacity, while new orders are coming in at the rate of less than one-third of capacity. Producers are not so much concerned about the gap between new business and output, since that represents largely uncertainty as to prices. But there is uneasiness over the disparity between capacity and present consumption, counting consumption, in view of the scantiness of stocks in recent months, as virtually the same as output.

It is a long time since steel companies have lengthened a single holiday into three, as will be done by many of them this week. The policy at most plants has been not to throw men into complete idleness, but rather to reduce the number of turns and to operate four or five days in the week. Some smaller companies have had alternate weeks of full operation and shutdown.

The recession of prices of steel products is slow, contrasting with the rapidity with which business has dropped off. The low level of two years ago is not expected, in any event, until the country is ready for buying on a like scale.

Meanwhile buyers and sellers are finding meeting ground when new business comes up, at prices from $3 to $5 a ton less than the contract basis before the decline began. Thus, structural shapes have sold at 1.25c., Pittsburgh, plates at 1.20c. to 1.25c., and bars at 1.25c. to 1.30c.

The Iron Trade Review says:

Owing to the light demand for all kinds of iron and steel products, an unusual vacation will be given to many employes, as mills generally will be closed from Wednesday evening until Monday morning. Throughout the country a general lack of interest in the market on the part of buyers continues, and orders are being placed only for immediate requirements.

MUST DETAIL "EXPENSES."

Bay State Commission's Order Affects 150 Corporations.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—Quarterly statements showing the amounts paid to attorneys, legislative agents, newspaper writers, and advertising agencies must be submitted to the Public Service Commission by all corporations under its jurisdiction. An order to this effect was adopted at an executive session of the commission to-day. More than 150 corporations are affected, including all steam and electric railways and telephone and telegraph companies.

The order, which was made effective from Oct. 1, was prompted by an investigation now being made by the commission of the payment by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad of a large sum of money appearing under the caption "other expenses," in a statement of expenditures recently filed with the commission.

Orange Knitting Company Fails.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—The Orange Knitting Company of Shelburne Falls filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy today. There schedule shows liabilities of $62,269 and assets of $56,293. The company consists of Dennis E. Farley of Erving, and Fred H. Eddy of Shelburne. Farley has individual liabilities of $140,552 and assets of $65,185. Eddy owes $45,120 and has assets of $4,350.

Reading Railway Lays Off Shopmen

READING, Penn., Nov. 26.—The Reading Railway Company to-day posted notices that the working force at all its shops in Reading and elsewhere would be reduced in size from five to ten per cent. About 200 men will be laid off in this city and a proportionate number in all the other plants. Beginning Dec. 1, the locomotive shop here will work nine hours a day, instead of ten.

NEW YORK LOSING GOLD.

Canada Gets $4,350,000 More, Mexico $180,000 and Haiti $100,000.

Banks engaged in the transfer of gold to Canada accelerated their operations yesterday because of the approaching holiday, and the record of withdrawals from the Sub-Treasury showed that $4,350,000 had been taken. Since last Thursday $10,750,000 has been shipped from local vaults to Canadian cities, a total that looms large in contrast with shipments last year and in 1911. In the last six months of 1912 the aggregate was no more than $13,900,000, and in the same period of the preceding year only $7,730,000 went across the border.

The American Exchange National Bank yesterday shipped $2,000,000 in gold to Canada, the National Park Bank $900,000, the Merchants' National $500,000, and the Bank of New York $450,000, with $500,000 more for a consignee whose name was not given out. In addition, $180,000 was withdrawn from the Sub-Treasury for transfer to Mexico and $100,000 to Haiti.

It was reported in the Street that the Bank of New York had taken the gold for shipment to Mexico. An inquiry at the bank brought the statement that the bank itself had not undertaken the transaction, and that what its customers did was nobody's business. The gold was said in some banking quarters to be intended for President Huerta's needs. Another explanation of the consignment was that it represented the payment for a shipment of silver bullion received in this city from Mexico about a month ago.

The risk to underwriters of insurance on precious metals sent to Mexico has increased to such an extent lately that some of the companies are refusing to do business. One of the largest insurance companies was asked to insure the $180,000 gold during transit to a Mexican port yesterday and declined to do so at any premium.

The movement of gold to Canada, while greater for the week than bankers had looked for, was not unexpected. The exportation of a vast bulk of Canadian grain through our ports has built up a credit balance of size in this country, which is being liquidated in part in gold. Canadian banks also have need of gold at this time for "window dressing" purposes, as the end of the banking year is drawing near.

ANNULS TAP-LINE ORDER.

Commerce Court Rules Against Interstate Board's Regulation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The Commerce Court to-day annulled the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission which forbade payment by trunk line railroads of allowances to so-called tap lines.

The court held that the commission not only was without power to forbid any allowance whatsoever to be made by any trunk lines to the petitioning proprietary industries for switching, but it also was without power to prohibit the making of joint rates by the trunk lines and of the petitioning tap lines and the payment by the former to the latter of some division thereof for its services. The court held, however, that the commission was fully empowered to regulate the amount of allowance so as to prevent rebates and unjust discriminations.

The cases probably will be carried to the Supreme Court.

TO AID BOSTON & MAINE.

Prouty a. State Boards Favor Advance in Rates.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—The conference between Charles A. Prouty, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, and the Public Service Commissioners of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, on the request of the Boston & Maine Railroad for permission to increase its freight rates, ended to-day in an agreement that something substantial should be done for the road.

"The Commissioners agreed unanimously," said Mr. Prouty, "and I am going to prepare a statement, which will be concurred in by all the Commissioners and will be made public within a week or ten days. It will indicate to what extent we will approve the rate advances."

JURY TOLD OF FRAUD IN RADIO-TELEPHONE

Government Opens Suit Against Companies Which Exploited De Forest Invention.

HALT CASE FOR FOREMAN

Who Is Excused Because of Death in His Family — Witnesses Here from Many States.

The Government outlined its case yesterday in the Federal District Court before Judge Hunt and a jury in the prosecution of James Dunlop Smith, former President of the Radio-Telephone Company and the Fiscal Agency Company, Samuel E. Darby, Lee De Forest, the electrical inventor, and Elmer E. Burlingame, agent of the Ellsworth Company, for having used the mails to defraud in the sale of wireless telephone stock. Assistant United States District Attorney Robert Stephenson set forth the facts, which the prosecution hopes to be able to prove, but he had hardly begun the examination of witnesses before a recess had to be taken on account of the arrival of news of illness in the family of the foreman of the jury, Milton Walker.

When the court reassembled at 2 o'clock Judge Hunt announced that the father-in-law of Mr. Walker had just died. It was decided to adjourn the case and to communicate with Mr. Walker to see if he could resume his place in the box on Monday. If he cannot do that, the trial will be resumed at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning and a new foreman will be selected.

The Radio-Telephone Company, Mr. Stephenson said in his address to the jury, was incorporated in New Jersey in 1907 with $2,000,000 capital. It was formed in order to exploit the patents of the De Forest Company and in return for that right it turned over to the De Forest Company one-half of its capital stock. Of the other $1,000,000 $300,000 was transferred to the Fiscal Agency Company as the selling agency and the rest was retained in the treasury.

Lee De Forest and Samuel A. Darby, two of the defendants, Mr. Stephenson explained, were then Directors of the De Forest Company and the Radio-Telephone Company, and the agreement with the Fiscal Agency Company granted that concern 50 per cent. commission on the sale of the stock up to $10 a share.

When President Roosevelt sent his battleship fleet round the world it was announced that the vessels were fitted with Radio-Telephone Company's instruments for communication between the units of the fleet. This, Mr. Stephenson said, sent the stock up to $30 a share, but in spite of that, the prosecutor will endeavor to show, the Fiscal Agency Company turned into the Radio-Telephone Company only $5 for each share it sold.

It was found, counsel went on to say, that the wireless telephone was quite useless on board the ships, and the Navy Department, after trying all sorts of experiments, dropped it altogether. Nevertheless it is charged the defendants kept on representing that the company was doing a flourishing business, and, in order to keep up the deception to the public, proceeded to pay dividends of 12 per cent. out of the proceeds of the sale of the $700,000 of treasury stock.

To carry on this system, Mr. Stephenson went on, the defendants began to organize subsidiary companies, the united capital of which amounted to $50,000,000. The first of these concerns to be set going was the Great Lakes Telephone Company, which was charged with capital of $1,000,000, and from the proceeds of the sale of its stock dividends were paid until the time of the Government raid in 1911.

Just as Mr. Stephenson began to examine the first witness, Granville T. Ivory, who was a dummy Director in one of the subsidiary companies, the news about Mr. Walker's father-in-law caused the adjournment.

With Mr. Stephenson for the Government is Assistant United States District Attorney Gordon Auchincloss. For the defense Martin W. Littleton represents Samuel E. Darby, Horace Deming appears for Lee De Forest, J. J. Vause for James D. Smith, and Clarence S. Houghton for Elmer E. Burlingame.

The courtroom was crowded with more than 100 witnesses whom the Government has summoned. They come from nearly every State in the Union, and it is expected that they will testify that after they had bought stock they received a few small dividends; that these encouraged them to invest more heavily, and then when they were in fairly deeply the dividends ceased and they found that they had lost all they had invested.

TALK OF A REVOLT IN THE THREE A'S

When the American Automobile Association holds its twelfth annual meeting in Richmond, Va., on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week there will be an effort on the part of delegates from several States not only to elect a President outside of the ranks of what they term the association's "Old Guard" but also to secure a representation on the Executive Board and in the general affairs of the organization. Among the States represented in this insurgent or progressive movement are Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois and Minnesota. The delegates feel that they have many grievances against the A. A. A. Among the charges which they expect to make on the floor of the convention are that the association, as at present constituted, is a close corporation, that the by-laws serve no purpose save to maintain that close corporation, that a small group of men control the actions of the body and use their power rather for the advantage of automobile builders and makers of road machinery and patent road materials than for that of the amateur motorist, and that The American Motorist, the official organ of the association, is improperly used to advertise road machinery.

***

In support of the allegation that the Three A's is made use of to advertise road machinery under official countenance the progressives will cite the sending out of an advertisement on American Motorist stationery, together with an official letter on club matters, signed by A. Z. Batchelder, as Chairman of the Executive Committee, advocating a certain make of road grader. It is further held by the insurgents that the organization is not truly representative, having in its membership about 42,000 motorists, or approximately only 4 per cent. of the motorists of the country. Among these active members the insurgents object to the fact that George C. Diehl, Chairman of the Good Roads Board, is active in politics, and interested financially in the manufacture of brick, and that Charles T. Terry, Chairman without compensation—of the Legislative Board, is also attorney for the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, the Association of Accessory Manufacturers, a tire chain company, and a company which makes automobile horns.

***

The by-laws of the association, to which the insurgent element makes objection, provide for a Executive Board of sixty members. Forty-five of these members may be elected by the Directors. Ten are nominated by the President and must be elected. The other five are the ex-Presidents of the A. A. A. The by-laws further provide that the forty-five members of the Executive Board elected by the Directors are to be chosen by a Nominating Committee which is appointed by the President. When the Board of Directors is not in session the Executive Board has all its powers. The President appoints the Directors, who represent the individual members of the association. The Executive Board can at any time increase the Board of Directors by appointing whomever it sees fit. It is provided in Article 18 of the by-laws that no amendment can be made to the by-laws unless it has first been passed upon favorably by a special committee appointed by the President.

***

At present New York State has eleven members on the Executive Board. It has a paid membership in the association of 3,200 members. Not counting Pennsylvania, it is necessary to take the next eight largest States in point of membership to obtain eleven other members of the board. These eight States have, approximately, 22,000 paid members. On the basis of paid membership, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts have 11,000 members. They have 26 representatives on the Executive Board. It is necessary to take the next twenty-five States on the list, having a total membership of 30,000, to obtain 26 other representatives on the board. Executive Board meetings are held in the East, and the main office of the association is in New York City.

When Mr. Terry was asked last night about his posiiton as Chairman of the association's Legislative Board he said there had never been any secret about the fact that he was also retained by the Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the accessory manufacturers and by the makers of tire chains and horns.

"I became Chairman of the Legislative Board," he said, "while William H. Hotchkiss was President of the A. A. A., and really was asked to take that position, which is an eleemosynary one for me, because I had at that time been retained by the automobile manufacturers for a number of years and was familiar with their point of view, as well as with that of the motorist. I have worked hard for the cause of good and decent automobile laws, and I am certain that no member of the association will assert that I have ever shown bias for the manufacturers or any one else in endeavoring to secure equitable motor legislation. I don't believe any one will even suggest that the known fact of my retainer from the manufacturers has influenced any of my efforts on the board."

A. G Batchelder said he never had heard of a letter sent out by him containing an advertisement of road machinery.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "I don't believe I know what such a road grader as you mention looks like. As to the proposed insurgency at Richmond, I feel sure that it will not be evident in so far at least as New Jersey, Illinois, and Minnesota are concerned. There has been a dissension of somewhat long standing in Ohio and it may be that there will be some attempt to make trouble from Connecticut, but if there is any contemplated by the other States mentioned we certainly have not heard of it. The implication that the Three A's is conducted in the interest of road machinery and patent materials is too ridiculous for discussion. We have always co-operated with the Automobile Chamber of Commerce and its Legislative Committee because it was in a position to have authoritative knowledge on the subject of automobile laws. I am willing to predict that whatever happens at Richmond, the Three A's will continue to be conducted for the benefit of motorists as it has been in the past."

ORDERS A RAIL INQUIRY.

Up-State Service Commission Wants Light on "Transverse Fissures."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 26.—A reminder of the fight started by the late Edward H. Harriman against the steel companies because of the quality of rails furnished occurs in an order issued by the up-State Public Service Commission which is being sent to the principal railroad companies under its jurisdiction.

The order relates to the fracture of rails caused by internal transverse fissures, which the commission feels is one of the most dangerous types of rail failure. The importance of the subject the commission feels is indicated by the fact that the wreck at Manchester last August was caused by the development of internal transverse fissures in a premium open-hearth rail.

The order directs that each steam railroad company within the jurisdiction of the commission furnish an individual report of each failure discovered upon the tracks of the company in which the defect known as internal transverse fissure is found, whether an accident results or not. It is further ordered that the broken pieces of rail in which such defects are discovered be held for inspection and not disposed of until consent has been received from the commission.

IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Cotton Duvetyn on Trial.

Although the local trade is selling a reasonable amount of domestic cotton duvetyn at prices which are in some instances decidedly below those asked for the imported goods, many of the converters are doubtful as to the permanent success of the cloth. It was pointed out yesterday that a number of retailers had already received complaints of its poor wearing qualities. Business in both plain and novelty cotton goods is quiet, according to selling agents. The Mexican troubles, the money situation, the uncertainty regarding several points of the new tariff and the unsettled cotton market are causing buyers to operate cautiously. Jobbers report a fair activity in spot goods.

Cutters Misrepresenting Cloths.

Several importers and manufacturers of fashionable trade-marked fabrics are complaining that some of the less scrupulous cutters-up are untruthfully saying that their garments are made of these cloths. To protect themselves against this practice one import firm has registered four prominent lines at Washington, but the registration does not seem to have had much weight with the garment makers. One especially attractive cloth has been little shown here so far by the importers in question, but, according to various store announcements the ready-to-wear departments throughout the country are handling large quantities of garments made from it. Because of the unfairness of this misrepresentation the import firm is emphatically notifying the garment makers that they must stop using the trade name of this fabric to increase their sales unless the cloth is the genuine article.

Weather Straining Finances.

No small interest is shown by the credit men in the dry goods district in the report that a large percentage of the local garment manufacturers are disposing of their accounts receivable to financial companies, who, for a certain consideration, will advance them 75 to 80 per cent. of their value in cash. Slow payment on the part of the retail stores in several parts of the country, due to the hampering of business by unseasonable weather, is given as the reason for this hypothecating. None of the manufacturers seen yesterday would admit that they were disposing of their accounts, but it was not denied that the continued warm weather was hurting collections. The financial companies seen were unwilling to admit that they had noticed any great increase in the accounts offered for sale by the manufacturers. Much unfavorable comment is made by credit men about the practice.

"Flowery" Publicity Hurt Sale.

The manager of a well-known Chicago department store frequently cautions the buyers against overestimating the quality of goods advertised. He contends that while a buyer may be honest in his description of merchandise, especially that offered at special sales, if the describing is done in superlative terms the reader of the advertisement is likely to be skeptical. To prove this contention he cites the case of a buyer who had bought a number of sweaters at a special price from a mill that desired to close out the line at the close of the season. The price at which these sweaters were bought made it possible for the store to offer them slightly under half the regular retail price, which was $3.50. The buyer had a quantity of similar goods from the same mill in stock, for which he had paid the regular price. The special lot was advertised, following terms and said to be made up of regular $3.50 values. It was not sold so quickly as expected, as many of the prospective customers when shown both the special and regular lines insisted that the higher-priced goods were the better. While the quality really was the same, the flowery advertising of the special lot had bred skepticism.

Will Foster Export Trade.

Much interest was shown here yesterday by members of the export trade in a report from Chicago that John T. Lenfesty had been designated by H. A. Wheeler, President of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, to represent that body on an extended tour of Latin America. It is planned to have Mr. Lenfesty visit every large city in South America and establish friendly relations between the various industrial organizations here and the Chamber of Commerce in this country. He will also invite these bodies to have representatives attend the second annual meeting of the chamber, which will be held in Washington in February. Mr. Lenfesty will sail from New York a week from Saturday. So far as could be learned yesterday none of the local export associations were directly interested in Mr. Lenfesty's trip. The American Manufacturers' Export Association is already represented in that field. One Director of that body, W. N. Dicklinson, is now in South America, and another Director, A. W. Ransome, will leave to-day for a six months' sojourn in the Southern republics. While there Mr. Ransome will attend to several matters directly concerning the association.

Clerks and Wrappers Shirking.

With the approach of the holiday season and the resultant increase of the work of the salespeople and bundlewrappers in the big stores comes the complaint that some of these workers are trying to lighten their labor by asking customers to take small articles without their being wrapped up and, sometimes, without a sales check being made for them. The latter practice resulted in considerable embarrassment to a local salesman yesterday. He had come from his home without his gloves, and had dropped into one of the stores to get a new pair. One glove was tried on and as it fitted the clerk the pair, paid for them and left the counter without getting a sales check. He carried the other glove in his hand while threading his way through the crowd, but had not gone very far when he was stopped by a store watcher. The watcher demanded that the customer show the sales check, and when the latter could not do so the watcher escorted him back to the glove counter despite the explanation he made. The girl from whom the gloves had been bought got frightened when she saw what had occurred, and at first refused to admit that the salesman had paid for them. When asked why she didn't attempt to stop him from getting away with the gloves without paying for them the girl changed her tactics and admitted that the salesman had told the truth. He was then released by the watcher, with profuse apologies.

WANTS MORE L. I. R. R. CARS

P. S. Commission Orders Hearing on Overcrowding.

The Public Service Commission is not satisfied with the number of cars which the Long Island Railroad has provided for its electric trains, and ordered yesterday a hearing on Dec. 3 before Commissioner Williams on the necessity for a greater number.

Last Summer there were many complaints about the crowded condition of the Long Island's electric trains running out of both the Flatbush Avenue Station in Brooklyn and the Pennsylvania Station in Manhattan. The company then explained that it had not sufficient cars to provide properly for its passengers. Since then it has ordered more equipment, but the commission is not certain that it has gone far enough in this direction.

The Long Island Railroad was ordered yesterday to install forthwith "an adequate and sufficient manually operated, electrically controlled, block signal system on its Whitestone branch, between the J. C. tower and Whitestone." This is the stretch of track on which occurred a head-on collision between two trolley cars on Sept. 22.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Appraisers Decide That Place and Menu Cards Are Not Paintings.

The Board of United States General Appraisers has decided that dinner, place, and menu cards in chief value of paper, hand painted, as well as paper calendars are not "paintings" within the meaning of the Tariff act of 1909, dutiable at 15 per cent. ad valorem, as claimed by A. A. Vantine & Co., the importers. Collector Mitchel's action in classifying the articles as manufactures of paper, with duty at the rate of 35 per cent. under Paragraph 420, was affirmed.

Louis Treulich, Chicago, was sustained in a contention dealing with the classification of garnet and other necklaces made out of a silver mounting set with sapphires and rubies. The garnet necklaces were assessed at 60 per cent. and the others at 85 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 448, act of 1909, as jewelry and articles of personal adornment, respectively. The importer asserted that all of the articles were dutiable properly at 60 per cent. ad valorem under the same paragraph as jewelry. The Collector held that the protest was too indefinite, but this the board denied.

The board sustained a protest by George Hartrick, Port Townsend, Wash., in which objection was made to an assessment of 40 per cent. under the old tariff on plain molded bottles, vials, demijohns, and carboys containing merchandise subject to ad valorem duties.

The importer asserted that the bottles properly were dutiable by virtue of subsection 18 of Section 28 and Paragraph 97 at the ad valorem rates applicable to their contents.

It was decided that hatpins composed of white metal and set with paste in imitation of precious stones, imported by Straw, Young, Clothier, Philadelphia, are dutiable under the old tariff at 60 per cent. The Collector's action in exacting an 85 per cent. duty under the personal adornment provision of the law was reversed.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Woolen materials for women's Spring suits and skirts will tend strongly toward crepe weaves and other materials that will drape gracefully. Separate skirts will continue narrow at the bottom and decidedly full at the hips. Modified minarets, peg-tops, ruffles, and bustle backs will be the leading style features.

The vogue for sheer materials that now dominates the styles of women's apparel has extended to the neckwear field. In response to the resultant demand, the new lines include a variety of dainty, flimsy effects.

The local cotton goods market has been quiet for the last two weeks as a result of the sold-up condition of most lines of goods for the next few months. Buyers are unwilling to operate far ahead unless they can obtain concessions, but sellers say that they will make no lower figures at present.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The Russian authorities are planning to construct a new port at Tehrienab. Most of the grain is exported from Western Bessarabia is shipped through the Rumanian port Sulina, and the proposed new port is doubtless intended to divert this trade to a Russian harbor.

Consul Slater reports that a Cleveland (Ohio) foundry company has begun the construction of a branch plant at Sarina, Ontario. It will occupy about an acre of ground and will have a complete equipment of modern machinery.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

Where price changes were recorded yesterday as the product of the day's trading they showed small declines. The markets were inactive and a number of options failed to show any alteration from Tuesday's closing prices. Wheat was unchanged to ¼c lower, corn was the same and oats displayed heaviness. Cotton declined from 1 to 7 points. Cotton oil and provisions were steady.

A quiet holiday trade characterized operations in the wheat market and prices moved within a comparatively narrow range, closing net unchanged to ¼c lower. Argentine situation was still a little complex, but according to a cable from Broomhall most of the damage in that country has been in the least important districts.

The domestic conditions were rather bearish on the surface at least, receipts in the Northwest being quite liberal and stocks at Minneapolis and Duluth showed further increases. Cash sales were fair but the demand was not particularly aggressive. A primo cable from Armour's Russian correspondent estimated the crop in that country at 725,000,000 bushels, which was about 150,000,000 bushels under the recent estimates by the International Institute of Agriculture.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 93½c c. i. f. New York export basis and $1 f. o. b.; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 97½c f. o. b.

CORN.

The corn market also showed narrow price changes, closing net unchanged to ⅛c lower. The weather was unfavorable for curing the new crop, and there seemed to be fears of congestion in the December position in the West. The Liverpool market declined sharply under renewed pressure of spots and cheap Danubian offers, but this had little effect on prices here.

In the local cash market old No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 82½c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

Trading in the oats market was inactive and prices moved largely in sympathy with wheat and corn, closing ⅛ to ¼c net lower. The cash demand was inactive and receipts were ahead of last week.

The local cash market was dull, standard white being quoted at 46@47c; No. 2, 47@47½c; No. 3, 45½@46c; No. 4, 44½@45c; ordinary clipped white, 44½@46½c; fancy clipped white, 47@48c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The volume of business in the market for hog products were small and prices moved within a narrow range. Commission houses were fair buyers, but stock yard interests and packers were credited with selling. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 30,000; estimated for Friday, 27,000; Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 9,500.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The cottonseed oil market was moderately active, but orders were quite evenly divided and price changes during the day were narrow, final quotations being net unchanged to one point lower. Offerings of crude oil from the South were on a more liberal scale, but shorts were good buyers, and offerings were readily absorbed. Tenders on December contracts amounted to about 2,000 barrels.

The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

COTTON.

The cotton market was quiet yesterday and fluctuated within a range of 9 or 10 points. An early break reflected disappointing cables and a bearish estimate, while a rally to about the closing figures of Wednesday on covering for over to-morrow's adjournment was followed by scattered realizing, with prices finally steady at a net decline of 1 to 7 points.

Liverpool attributed the relatively easy showing there to increased hedge selling and a restricted buying power, while reports that a prominent Memphis authority estimated the crop at 14,800,000 bales minimum, caused considerable selling at the opening here. Offerings were well taken at the initial decline of 6 to 8 points, however, and the market soon rallied on some scattered trade buying and local covering. There was no aggressive support, however, and after selling back to about the closing figures of the previous day, prices again eased off, closing at reactions of 6 to 7 points from the best.

Arrivals of cotton at New York are not yet showing any material increase, and local spot men were inclined to think that December notices on Friday would not exceed 15,000 bales. Southern spot markets as officially reported were generally unchanged. On the week ended last night they showed losses of about ⅛c to ¼c, while futures were about 12 to 20 points net lower for the same period.

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and 10 points lower, at 13.30 for middling uplands; sales nil.

The range of contract prices in the local market was as follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. Close.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Syndicate Buys Old Brearley School Plot in Forty-fourth Street for Improvement—Greene Street Loft Sold —Trust Company Gets Brooklyn Club—To Enlarge Building — Bronx Deals.

An interesting deal which will lead to an important commercial improvement in Forty-fourth Street, near Fifth Avenue, has just been closed in the purchase by a syndicate of the old Brearley School property at 15 and 17 West Forty-fourth Street, a plot 50 by 100, which adjoins the Berkeley Lyceum property to the west. The buying syndicate is known as the 11 West Twenty-fifth Street Company, and is composed of Cass & Apfel, attorneys, and Frank S. Slater. The syndicate has lately completed a twelve-story loft at 11 West Twenty-fifth Street.

The Forty-fourth Street plot has been purchased from Viola M. Flannery, who acquired it from the Brearley School in 1911, when the school bought a plot for a new building on Park Avenue. It has been held at $300,000. Plans are being prepared by the new owners for erecting a twelve-story structure on the site. Just west, and adjoining the Berkeley Lyceum, is the property of the Harvard Club, which is about to be improved with a new building to enlarge the club quarters. Building and permanent loans have been obtained for the new improvement. The broker negotiating the deal was Francis B. Robert.

Greene Street Loft Sold.

The seven-story iron constructed loft at 204 and 206 Greene Street has been purchased by the D. H. Jackson Company. The property covers a plot 50 by 100 between Bleecker and West Third Streets, being 100 feet south of the latter. It was purchased from Nathan Imposoff, who acquired the property several years ago from ex-Senator Andrew Murray. The new owner is negotiating a lease of the entire building to a single tenant for a period of twenty years. The brokers in the transaction were P. Simon & Son.

Important Midtown Deal.

An important deal in the midtown loft zone was announced yesterday by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, which sold for Dr. Alexander Lambert 36 East Thirty-first Street. An adjoining owner is credited with the purchase.

The property consists of a four-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 98.9, located two doors east of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, at the southeast corner of Madison Avenue.

The adjoining houses at 32 and 34 were reported sold last August to Joseph F. Brody of Brody, Adler & Koch, who contemplated erecting a loft on the site. Dr. Lambert's property was held at $75,000.

Another Broadway Theatre.

The Stratford Amusement Company has leased for a long term of years the plot of 15,000 square feet at the southwest corner of 135th Street and Broadway, being 150 feet on Broadway by 100 feet on 135th Street.

The lessees will improve the plot with a high-class theatre, having a seating capacity of 1,500, for the production of photo plays.

The building will also contain stores and offices. The transaction together with improvements involves over $500,000. Plans are now in preparation and the theatre will be opened about April 1. Sharp & Co. negotiated the lease.

Bronx Borough.

Aimee Oppenheimer purchased for investment from Lowenfeld & Prager 1,558 and 1,562 Minford Place, two five-story flats on a plot 87 by 100 by irregular, located 70 feet south of 173d Street. The buyer gave in exchange a four-story flat, on a plot 30 by 100 lect, at 177 East Ninety-third Street, between Third and Lexington Avenues.

Abe Gladden, John Jerrido and Charles F. Deshler have sold for Leslie Acker a plot of eight lots running from Valentine to Tyler Avenue, between 183d and 184th Streets, to a builder who will improve the property with five-story houses.

Max Gertsman has purchased through the Westchester Realty Company 4.081 Edson Avenue, a two-family house, on a plot 25 by 100 feet.

Trust Co. Buys Brooklyn Club.

By far the most important Brooklyn deal that has occurred in some time, in connection with the contemplated improvement on the site, was announced yesterday in the sale of the Brooklyn Club, on the southwest corner of Pierrepont and Clinton Streets. The property has been bought by the Brooklyn Trust Company, whose building adjoins the club on Clinton Street, and within a year, it is stated, the old club building will be torn down and a new structure erected for the trust company. In the proposed improvement the present trust company's building may also be torn down and a large structure erected upon the entire plot.

The purchase has been made for the purpose of providing more room for the trust company, which, since it took over the business of the Long Island Loan and Trust Company, has felt the need for larger quarters. Negotiations have been pending for some time, but the actual sale came as a surprise to most of the members.

The Brooklyn Club is the oldest of the many clubs in Brooklyn, having been incorporated in 1865. George W. Chauncey is the President. He said yesterday that nothing definite as to the future of the club had been determined, but from another source it was learned that, in case the club does not consolidate with another club or decide to erect another home, it may obtain quarters on the top floor of the new building. The clubhouse plot is in one of the most desirable localities in the Brooklyn Heights section, being close to the business centre of Borough Hall.

Brooklyn.

In the Ridgewood section the G. X. Matthews Company purchased from the estate of Joachim Meyerrose and Richard and Joseph Meyerrose and Margaret Brunjes ten lots fronting 190 feet on the west side of Putnam Avenue and 100 feet on Onderdonk Avenue. Plans have been filed for the erection of apartment houses at a cost of $150,000.

New Jersey.

Feist & Feist of Newark have sold to Oscar Michael the five-story brick and stone elevator store and office building at 17 and 19 West Park Street, being on the south side of street, 127 feet west of Broad Street, and connecting with the rear of the property at 689 and 691 Broad Street, also owned by the buyer.

The plot measures 45 feet on West Park Street, with an average depth of nearly 100 feet. The seller was Frederick C. J. Wiss. Mr. Michael, by acquiring this West Park Street property, is now one of the largest owners of plotage with a Broad Street frontage, having recently purchased the Dennis property, two doors from the new $1,000,000 Military Plaza Hotel, now in course of erection.

Westchester County.

W. H. Oliver, in conjunction with the Fox Realty Company, has sold for A. Robert Kunkler the property known as the old Bailey homestead, located about two miles north of Ossining on the old Quaker Bridge Road to A. Smith of New York City. Mr. Smith will remodel the house, improve the grounds and occupy the premises

C. S. McClellan & Co. have sold to William C. Baxter of Wibberly & Baxter the block bounded by the Boulevard, Cliff Street and Irving Place, Pelham, on which the buyer intends to erect a dwelling for his own occupancy.

Mrs. Mae Magee and Mrs. Jennie Van Hennick have bought a plot in the tract known as the Lawrence property, Yonkers, near Valentine Lane, and will build a two-family dwelling. M. A. Broderick and Thomas S. Burke were the brokers and they have rented the dwelling, 20 Euclid Avenue for Mrs. Alice G. Chick to William Gavin of Mt. Vernon and the store at 59½ Warburton Avenue to Emmett J. Larkin.

Big Downtown Lease.

Pease & Elliman have leased to the Mortgage-Bond Company of New York the entire banking floor of the Liberty Tower Building, on the northwest corner of Liberty and Nassau Streets. Owing to the increase of business done by the Lawyers Mortgage Company and the Mortgage-Bond Company of New York, the quarters occupied jointly by them in the Chamber of Commerce Building have been found inadequate, and George A. Hurd, President of the latter company, has decided to move into new offices.

Commercial Leases.

Nelson & Lee have leased for a term of fifteen years the store and basement of the premises, 2708 Broadway, at a rental of $6,000 per annum. The lessee is Emil B. Abbott, long established in the restaurant business at Broadway and 104th Street. The owner, Henry Lowenthal, will immediately remodel the entire premises, a five-story apartment house, size 30 feet 6 inches on Broadway by 122 feet in depth, light on four sides.

Realty Notes.

W. E. and W. I. Brown were associated with Pease & Elliman in the sale of the northeast corner of Edgecombe Avenue and 139th Street, reported yesterday.

L. M. Mosauer & Co. have secured for the Fair Deal Realty Company a loan of $75,000 at 5 per cent. on the recently completed apartment house with stores, at the junction of Intervale Avenue and Kelly Street.

Plans were filed yesterday for installing an operating suite on the fifth floor of the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island opposite Fifty-third Street and thoroughly restarting the building at a cost of $50,000. Charles B. Meyers is the architect.

Governors of the Real Estate Board of New York have acted favorably on several applications thereby closing vacancies in active memberships which are limited to 200. The two hundredth member chosen was William Cruikshank of the firm of William Cruikshank's Sons.

Henry Hotchner has sold his intcrest in the Woodmere Homes Construction Company to other stockholders, including David Levy, William and Julius Goldburg. This company owns a number of plots at Woodmere, L. I.

Charles L. Kingsley has been appointed receiver of the rents of the nine-story apartment house on the southeast corner of 110th Street and Riverside Drive, a plot 100 by 100, pending a suit brought by Emily Loewy to foreclose a third mortgage of $21,000.

MERCHANTS WANT TIMES SQ. STATION

RAPID BUSINESS GROWTH

Men Associated with Biggest Enterprises Cannot Understand Attitude of Opposition.

Two men identified with great enterprises, one of which has only just come to Forty-second Street while the other was a pioneer in impressing its character on that part of the city, coincided yesterday in their views with regard to the principles that should be followed in laying out the new subways in Times Square.

Louis Stern of Stern Brothers, whose great new store in Forty-second Street just east of Sixth Avenue, is recognized as giving that thoroughfare a new importance in the commercial life of the city, and A. D. Juilliard, who is one of the mainstays of the Metropolitan Opera House, agreed that they could not imagine how the Public Service Commission could fail to place the express station of the B. R. T. as well as of the Interborough at Forty-second Street and Broadway.

What Mr. Stern said was of particular interest, as it showed something of the reasons which had led him to choose the particular site that he has for his store when he decided to leave Twenty-third Street.

"I have no doubt whatever," he said, "of the advisability of putting an express station on the B. R. T. Broadway line at Times Square and Forty-second Street. Just look at the importance of the thoroughfares which converge there, Broadway and Seventh Avenue with Sixth Avenue not far off. It seems to me that to stop the expresses there is even more necessary than at the Grand Central, for such thoroughfares as Madison and Lexington Avenues cannot compare in their commercial importance with those which unite to make Times Square.

Mr. Stern pointed out that already Forty-second Street is a great shopping centre. Not only is there there his own fine store and Aeolian Hall, but it is becoming a street for first-class specialty houses. It is, in fact, assuming the prominence in the business life of the city that it has already enjoyed in the transportation line, not only because the present Subway runs beneath it, but because of the crosstown trolley line, which leads to the Grand Central at one end and to the West Shore ferries and the Sandy Hook and Day Line boats at the other.

When Mr. Stern was asked his opinion on the probability of the important retail establishments of the city going still further north than Forty-second Street, he expressed a good deal of doubt about it. He pointed out that, with Lord & Taylor on the eve of moving into a new store in Fifth Avenue, almost within the range of Times Square, there remained only one department store of great size which would not have left the old centre about Broadway and Twenty-third Street. Of course, the Sixth Avenue group of stores might break up, but that has not yet been suggested.

"I don't think," said Mr. Stern, "that the big stores are likely to go much higher than Forty-second Street, at present at any rate. They might come up to Forty-third or Forty-fourth Street, but the difficulty of getting access town begins to be felt when you consider a site further north."

As a matter of fact the great attractiveness of Forty-second Street to business interests has been particularly apparent in the last two or three years. To the Times Building, the pioneer office building in this locality, have been added recently at or in the immediate vicinity of Forty-second Street and Broadway the Longacre Building, the Fitzgerald Building, the Putnam Building, and the Candler Building. Forty-second Street, just east of Broadway, has added to the Tilden Building, the Lewisohn Building, and the Browning Building, all of which are worthy of mention even in this city of skyscrapers. Moreover, only recently a plot of ground was sold in Forty-fourth Street next the Berkeley Lyceum for the erection of a twelve-story loft building.

This is an invasion of the theatrical and club district by business. It was these activities which first made Times Square popular. They might have seemed already developed to the utmost. But at the present time a new theatre is in course of erection in Forty-second Street next the Candler Building, on the site of the old Bruce Library, and the Harvard Club has just acquired at a cost of $180,000 a plot adjoining its house on which to build an addition.

It was the thought of the great theatrical importance of Times Square, and especially of the Metropolitan Opera House's high place among the city's amusements, that actuated Mr. Juilliard yesterday to ask how the Public Service Commission could possibly consider placing the B. R. T. express station anywhere else than at the lower end of Times Square. In advocating it as strongly as he did, Mr. Juilliard was neglecting his own private advantage. He had an interest in a building at the northern end of the square which would undoubtedly be benefited greatly by the carrying out of the commission's tentative plan of erecting the express station at about Forty-eighth Street, but he said that he recognized the greater claims of Forty-second Street.

"We want to give the people at large the best possible means of access to the Metropolitan Opera House," he said. "We have never made any money out of the opera, and, indeed, are bound not to do so. We want to get the public at large to it, so that they may hear the performances, which have outrivalled Paris, Vienna, and Covent Garden.

"People don't realize that by far the largest part of our audiences come by street car, elevated, or subway. By actual count we know that those who drive up in carriages or automobiles do not number more than 20 or 22 per cent. of our attendances. It is of the utmost importance to the Opera House to have the means of transportation so arranged as to make access by subway or elevated as simple as possible. For that reason we supported successfully the plan for the construction of an elevated railway station at Thirty-eighth Street, and so now I am strongly in favor of the placing of the B. R. T. express station at Times Square."

Mr. Juilliard declared that it seemed to him that if the people of Brooklyn were to be considered it was of the greatest importance that they should have the stations arranged on their line in such a way as to make it easy for them to reach the Metropolitan Opera House, and that this would be done by stopping the expresses on which most of them would travel at Times Square rather than at Forty-eighth Street.

It was even suggested yesterday by those who considered what it would mean to have the B. R. T.'s express trains stopped at a point five or six blocks removed from the point to which the uptown business, social, and theatrical life of the city has been focussing to a greater degree year by year for the past twenty-five years, that once this mistake was made an agitation would at once spring up for the entire remodeling of the subway systems, so as to create the traffic centre which the commission has now in its power to plan.

TO APPEAL PEIXOTTO CASE.

Higher Court to Fix the Standing of Teachers Who Bear Children.

After a spirited debate at its meeting yesterday afternoon, the Board of Education decided to appeal the case of Mrs. Bridget C. Peixotto, former teacher in charge of the Throgs Neck Public School, whose dismissal by the board for being absent without leave to bear a child was set aside by Justice Seabury.

The debate was started by a report from the Committee on By-laws and Legislation, of which Commissioner George J. Gillespie is Chairman, advising the board to ask the Corporation Counsel to take an appeal from Justice Seabury's decision.

Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., former President of the board, moved as an amendment that the Corporation Counsel be ordered not to take the appeal. Mr. Winthrop, who was one of those who spoke and voted against Mrs. Peixotto's dismissal, said that he thought an appeal would not be successful. It would be unfair, he said, to put the teacher to the additional expense of having her counsel argue the case in the higher courts. He had always thought, he said, that the injustice to Mrs. Peixotto was perfectly plain, and Justice Seabury's decision was in line with his own opinion. An appeal to the Appellate Division and to the Court of Appeals, he said, would afford no remedy. The decision of the board in dismissing Mrs. Peixotto was illogical and it was absurd to believe that the higher courts would reverse Justice Seabury. Commissioner Arthur S. Somers, Chairman of the Committee on High Schools, seconded Mr. Winthrop's amendment.

Gen. George W. Wingate said that he was in favor of an appeal being taken. The board, he said, by a large majority had decided to dismiss Mrs. Peixotto, and it was desirable to get the highest court opinion on the subject as a matter of policy.

Abraham Stern, as a member of the sub-committee of the Board of Retirement, made a report with regard to the teachers' pension fund and the bill which is to be presented to the Legislature so that the fund may be rescued from its present state of practical bankruptcy.

WIDOWER'S AD GETS WIFE.

Four Hundred Heard Darrow's Appeal, but He Selects Girl Near Home

Special to The New York Times.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., Nov. 26.—When Ernest W. Darrow, a widower, of Patchogue, advertised in a Brooklyn newspaper, calling for a wife to preside over his table, care for his six children, and share with him his $50 a week income, the notice was copied extensively throughout the country, so that when the answers began to come in they bore postmarks from as far away as the Pacific slope.

All told, 400 widows and spinsters expressed their willingness to become Mrs. Darrow. The answer which most appealed to the widower was from a young girl visiting in Patchogue just a brief walk from the Darrow home in Medford Avenue.

Julia Stagg, the girl in question, came here from Newfoundland. She and Darrow corresponded and then they met, and Patchogue was beside itself with good-natured interest when it saw them walking together along the village streets.

The next chapter of the romance will be written to-morrow, for they are to be married on Thanksgiving Day in the Darrow home. The ceremony will be conducted by the Rev. Lucius Harold Johnston, who had the village tittering to-day by mistaking the date and appearing at the Darrow home this afternoon in his best wedding manner.

TO KEEP "BIG TIM'S" NAME.

Bowery Association Appeals for Incorporation Certificate.

Mitchell E. Friend made application yesterday in the Supreme Court for the incorporation of the famous Timothy D. Sullivan Association. Everybody thought the association had been incorporated years ago, but the late Senator Sullivan never bothered about it. After his death Clark L. Jordan, the counsel for the association, resolved to give it a corporate existence, and so insure the continuance of the name of its founder. The rooms of the association are at 207 Bowery, and the object of the club will be a mixture of politics and charity as heretofore. Mr. Friend said that the annual distribution of shoes and socks would be continued, together with a big dinner at Christmastide to the thousands of poor of the east side.

The incorporators are Patrick Sullivan, a brother, and Lawrence Mulligan, a half-brother of the late Senator; Harry Oxford, Michael C. Padden, Carmine J. Marasco, and Harry M. Applebaum, who for many years was the Senator's secretary.

The application describes the objects of the association as the promotion of fellowship among the members, the furtherance of their social and political welfare, and the advancement of good citizenship. Also the purpose is "the perpetuation of the memory and wishes of Timothy D. Sullivan by carrying out as far as possible his works of voluntary charity and benevolence."

FAREWELL TO GEN. BOOTH.

Salvation Army Out to Cheer as Leader Sails.

Preceded by the headquarters staff band of fifty pieces and a guard of 500 officers of all ranks, Gen. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, rode in an open automobile yesterday morning to the French Line pier at the foot of West Fifteenth Street to embark on the steamship France for Havre.

Before leaving General Booth told the reporters that he had been treated with the utmost kindness during his visit to the United States and he hoped to come again.

"I am glad that I have met my brother Ballington after not seeing him for seventeen years," said Gen. Booth. "We hope to meet in England next Summer. I have been made so happy by this visit that I hope to repeat it, probably as early as next year, when I go on my world tour."

DEMOCRATS SCOFF AT SCHWAB'S FEARS

Prosperity, Not Predicted Depression, Will Flow from New Tariff, Leaders Assert.

A THREAT, SAYS WILLIAMS

Senator Points to Growth of Exports and Decrease of Imports as Disproving Steel Man's Views.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—Democratic leaders in Washington refused to-day to take seriously the prediction of coming disaster on account of the new tariff made by Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company. Speaker Clark, Chairman Underwood, and other leaders assert that the country will experience prosperity under the Underwood law.

They point to the growth of American exports during the first month of the Underwood law, asserting that this indicates no depression as a result of foreign competition. The increase in exports, Democratic leaders think, is an indication that American ingenuity and skill are cutting the market from under foreigners in manufactured products. It is also pointed out that advance sheets on American imports for October, the first month of the new tariff, fail to bear out the Republican prediction that there would be a dangerous influx of foreign goods.

Speaker Clark said to-night of Mr. Schwab's interview:

"It's all poppycock, that's all I want to say in reply to Mr. Schwab."

Speaker Clark already had predicted prosperity under the Underwood rates. Chairman Underwood has made similar predictions. He is now in Alabama. Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce pointed to the growth of American exports as an answer to those who predict industrial depression.

Senator John Sharp Williams insisted that there was no relevancy in what Mr. Schwab said about the freight rates on steel between Bethlehem and New York and Rotterdam and New York.

"Mr. Schwab asserts that under the new tariff the cost of the transportation of steel is affected—that the rate between Bethlehem, Penn., and New York is as great as that between Rotterdam and New York," said Senator Williams. "Mr. Schwab knows that the Steel Trust is able to ship its products to Europe, pay the cost of freight, and still sell those products in competition with the European manufacturers, and no doubt the Bethlehem Steel Company can do the same thing. I am not afraid of foreign competition with the steel industry.

"As to Mr. Schwab's prediction of depression, I see no reason to believe that it is correct. Our export trade is heavy. During October, 1913, our exports amounted to $271,588,726, as compared with $254,633,504 during October, 1912, and as against $207,034,661 in October, 1911. Under the Underwood tariff our exports were nearly $20,000,000 greater last month than under the Payne law in October a year ago and nearly $65,000,000 greater than under the Payne tariff in October, 1911. This is certainly no indication of depression, or that the tariff has hurt the American manufacturer.

"Nor do I see anything in the import situation that presages danger. Dutiable imports brought into this country last month were $20,000,0000 less than under the Republican tariff in October, 1912, and $12,000,000 less than in October, 1911. Our imports have not increased to the dangerous extent that our Republican opponents predicted.

"None of the things has come true that the assailants of the Democratic Tariff bill predicted. I would like to have Mr. Schwab explain that.

"A prediction from that source—from Mr. Schwab—is less of a prediction than a threat. But I think that this country has long since passed the time when threats will throw it into a panic. The country is too intelligent, and will not stand for such threats."

COURT IDENTIFIES A DRUG.

Magistrate Tests Cocaine and Holds Man Having It for Trial.

After several adjournments of the hearing in the case of Henry Hollander of 524 East 184th Street, a young clerk accused of having had cocaine in his possession, and weary of waiting for the Board of Health's agent to report on the nature of the powder submitted in the Morrisania Court as having been found in young Hollander's possession, Magistrate Corrigan qualified yesterday as an expert in his own court and after an examination of the powder, held the prisoner in $1,000 bail for trial.

The Magistrate said that he could tell cocaine when he saw it, because he had used it when his nose was being treated.

"Put some on your tongue, and you will find it has a bitter taste and a numbing influence," he told Hollander's lawyer, "that is, if it is cocaine."

The lawyer entered several objections, but consented finally to put the powder on his tongue. He admitted it was bitter. Magistrate Corrigan put some on his own tongue and went even further. He said it was cocaine. In the case of another man accused of having had the drug in his possession, the Magistrate confessed he did not feel so sure of the identity of the drug produced, so he adjourned the hearing until its nature had been determined.

PLAYS IN SEMI-DARKNESS.

Mme. Rider-Possart Is Good Pianist, but Gloom Depressed Auditors.

Cornelia Rider-Possart, pianist, gave a recital yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall before a fair-sized audience. The programme opened with Beethoven's sonata, Op. 2, No. 3, and continued with a group which included Mozart's Pastorale Variée, Daquin's "Le Coucou," and Scarlatti's presto in D minor. These were followed by Brahms's ballade and intermezzo, Op. 118, Raff's rigaudon, and Chopin's nocturne, Op. 62, No. 2, and scherzo in B flat minor. The last composition was Ludwig Schytte's sonata, Op. 53.

It was not an essentially interesting programme. The pianist had elected to have most of the lights in the auditorium turned off, and the semi-gloom had a depressing effect which may have had its influence on the way her music was received. Mme. Rider-Possart is a good pianist, but there was nothing particularly exciting or moving about yesterday's recital. She was careful and painstaking in her readings, and there was nothing that spoke against her possessing mature musicianship and ample technical accomplishment, but the spark of brilliance and animation glowed rather feebly. Some one should advise the pianist to turn the lights up full next time, and let the audience chatter cheerfully between numbers.

DROPS DIVORCE SUIT.

Supreme Court Justice Seabury signed an order yesterday discontinuing the divorce action brought by Mrs. Justine Sutton Gray against John Boyd Gray of the Wall Street firm of Fuller & Gray. The statement that a reconciliation had taken place between the broker and his wife was denied by counsel on both sides. A reconciliation was attempted when the husband and wife met at the Prince George Hotel on Nov. 18, but the meeting ended in a quarrel. Mrs. Gray in her divorce complaint named Bessie Clifford, the dancer, and Jean Hammerstein, the actress, as corespondents. She asked for $1,000 a month alimony and $5,000 counsel fees. Justice Giegerich awarded her $250 a month and $1,500 counsel fees.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray were divorced once. They were married first in 1904 and lived together until 1911, when Mrs. Gray obtained a divorce at Reno. Three months later they remarried.

Handkerchiefs For Christmas Gifts

Thousands of people all over this broad land buy their Linen Handkerchiefs at McCutcheon's exclusively—and there are perfectly good reasons for this.

No such assortment of strictly pure linen Handkerchiefs is to be found anywhere else in this country. The variety of styles is almost limitless; the quality can always be relied upon and the values for the most part are unequalled.

Take, for example, our Men's Initial Handkerchiefs at $3.00 per dozen—compare the size, the quality, the character of the hemstitching, the style of embroidery, with those shown elsewhere.

We believe there is no comparison!

What is true of those Handkerchiefs is true of practically the entire collection. There is no good thing in Handkerchiefs for men, women or children which cannot be purchased to the very best advantage at "The Linen Store."

Special Note—Our Department for Housekeeping Linens offers many suggestions for gifts in the way of Table Linens, Lace and Embroidered Centerpieces, Tea Cloths, Scarfs, Towels, etc., such as every housekeeper delights in

ACCUSES CARLISLE IN ASPHALT DEAL

The Warner-Quinlan Company Charges Him with Conspiracy and Wastefulness.

DENIAL BY COMMISSIONER

Asserts That Complaint Against Him Is False in Every Allegation.

HENNESSY IS BROUGHT IN

Accused of Ordering Use of Barber Product—Full Inquiry Is Called For.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 27.—Gov. Glynn made public to-day the charges of the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company against John N. Carlisle, State Highway Commissioner, and his reply, which was a flat denial of everything. The Warner-Quinlan Company accused Mr. Carlisle of discrimination in favor of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company, averring that he had held secret meetings with the agents of that company in order to conspire against other companies; that he employed incompetent engineers, that he had wasted many thousands of dollars, and that he had thrown the Highway Department into a state of chaos.

Mr. Carlisle denied it all, and asserted that the accusations were inspired by manufacturers who had failed to foist on his department "just as good" asphalt for that required by the specifications.

The name of John A. Hennessy, formerly a special investigator in the Highway Department, appeared unexpectedly in the charges. He was accused of sending a telegram to highway contractors last July 5, notifying them that they must use Barber asphalt. This telegram was alleged to have followed a meeting in Cooperstown between Gov. Sulzer, Mr. Carlisle, George McGuire, an agent for the Barber company, and others. The message is said to have borne the name of Roy K. Fuller, but is alleged to have been sent by Mr. Hennessy. Mr. Fuller is secretary to the Highway Department, and he has denied ever having sent the message.

McGuire Conferences.

It was further alleged that two days after Mr. Hennessy was appointed, on June 16, 1913, he was called into conference with James K. McGuire of the Barber company, Mr. Carlisle, and others, and informed that only Barber asphalt would meet State highway specifications.

The charges assert that both Mr. Hennessy and Mr. Sulzer received money from the McGuires, "some of which, if not the entire amount thereof, was furnished by the Barber Asphalt Paving Company."

Members of Mr. Carlisle's board of advisory engineers, Harold Parker, George C. Diehl, and William De H. Washington, also were accused of participating in asphalt conferences with the McGuires and Carlisle. In this connection it was further charged that Mr. Washington had received his appointment at the hands of Gov. Sulzer on the recommendation of McGuire, and that Diehl and Parker were recommended by two contractors interested in State highway work. Mr. Parker was alleged to have been a stockholder in the Hassam Compressed Concrete Paving Company, to which the State had paid royalties for the use of a paving process.

These engineers received $50 a day and expenses for their services from last May until recently. Messrs. Parker and Diehl resigned last week.

When he barred the Warner-Quinlan product he knew it had passed the tests of his department with a higher percentage than any other asphalt.

Inquiries he made when he assumed office proved the asphalt was good, and for a time he permitted the use of it.

Favors a Rival.

Carlisle interpreted the specifications of his department so as to compel contractors to use the Barber product.

When protest was made against his action he admitted the specifications were unfair, said he was powerless to change them, but promised to make an effort to remedy conditions. Soon afterward, on Aug. 4, 18, and 19, he attempted to let repair work under the old specifications, and when a temporary injunction was granted prohibiting the letting of these contracts, he fought it in the Supreme Court.

In order to circumvent the injunction Carlisle entered into supplemental agreements with contractors, and on the authority of the Advisory Board, Fuller notified contractors that a higher price would be paid them for their work if they used Barber asphalt.

That after promising public hearings to determine asphalt specifications, Carlisle waited four months and then called a hearing on six days' notice. This hearing was unfair and finally resulted in the drawing of specifications which, if adopted, would perpetuate the monopoly of the Barber Company.

The selection of the consulting engineers is "regarded as a farce and a disgrace by those familiar with the subject." These engineers have spent much money uselessly, a single instance of which was the going of Washington to Europe to a good roads congress at an expense of $3,000.

The accusation filled a book of fifteen printed pages. C. M. Warner and P. Quinlan, President and Vice President, respectively, of the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, signed them.

Mr. Carlisle's Answer.

Mr. Carlisle's answer was a letter of about four thousand words. In part, it is as follows:

"The Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Com-

7 HURT IN AUTO COLLISION.

Col. C. L. F. Robinson and Members of His Family Injured at Hartford.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 27.—Just as a big limousine bearing Col. Charles L. F. Robinson, President of the Colt Firearms Company; his wife, two children, and his sister-in-law, breasted a slight incline at the intersection of Asylum Avenue and Woodland Street to-day, a runabout, owned and driven by Martin Van Buren Stevens, running south in Woodland Street, collided with the rear wheels of the limousine, which was upset and fell on one side, the roof and the sides, with their heavy plate glass panes, crashing down upon the five occupants.

At St. Francis Hospital, to which the injured were taken, Col. Robinson was reported as comfortable. Five stitches were taken in his scalp, which was cut by glass, and the muscles of his neck are strained. Mrs. Robinson is seriously hurt, with possible internal injuries, a fractured rib, and scalp wounds, and suffers extreme pain. Elizabeth, the 13-year-old daughter, suffers from a sprained back and painful glass cuts about the head. The 10-year-old boy, Francis, sustained a deep laceration near the right ear and one of his facial arteries in the left cheek was severed.

Mrs. Robinson's sister, Mrs. R. J. Umbstaetler, of Boston, who came here yesterday on a visit, had a long scalp wound and other painful cuts about the head and body, and the ligaments of her arms were strained.

Mr. Stevens was only slightly injured and the Robinson chauffeur, Arthur T. Chapin, escaped with a wrenched back.

At the hospital it was said to-night that all the injured would probably recover, though Mrs. Robinson was suffering such severe pain that the physicians would make another thorough examination to-morrow.

SMOKER FALLS TO DEATH.

Long Tumbles from Window Trying to Recover Cigarette.

Richard Long, 41 years old, opened the window of his flat on the second floor of 422 West Twenty-sixth Street about 7:30 o'clock last evening to smoke a cigarette, while his wife, Mary, and the four children, the eldest 6 years old, were clearing the table and straightening up the kitchen.

A few minutes later juvenile Thanksgiving merrymakers, singing and begging pennies from passersby in the street below, scattered in fright, when with a loud scream Long tumbled out the window and fell in a heap on the sidewalk.

Mrs. Long heard her husband's cry and ran screaming to the open window. Her children also began to scream, and Patrolman King of the West Seventeenth Street Station, came to the house on the run. He found Long lapsing into unconsciousness. The injured man said that he had laid his cigarette on the window sill, and that when a puff of wind flung it below he had grabbed at it, lost his balance, and fallen.

An ambulance was summoned from the New York Hospital, and Dr. Shrock found Long in a critical condition. He was rushed to the institution, but died almost immediately after arriving there. He had suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Long had been employed for nineteen years by Runkel Brothers, chocolate manufacturers, West Thirtieth Street, near Tenth Avenue, and was foreman of one of their departments.

NATHAN STRAUS AIDS HERO.

Sends a $100 Check to Lineman Who Saved a Comrade's Life.

Special to The New York Times.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 27.—Harry Phipps, lineman, employed by the Terre Haute, Indianapolis & Eastern Traction Company, received to-day a check for $100 from Nathan Straus in recognition of his act in risking his life to save a fellow workman.

The rescue was effected Oct. 23, when Charles Mathney was rendered unconscious and hung helpless on a high pole. Phipps, although knocked from the pole when he came in contact with Mathney's body, returned and released him from the wires. Then he brought him back to life by means of artificial respiration. After seeing his companion started to a hospital, Phipps slipped away in the crowd.

When the check was delivered to him Phipps wrote the following:

Mr. Straus: The editor of The Star has given me the check for $100 that you sent him for me and also the letter. I surely do thank you for the same, being the only support of my family. I surely do thank you from the bottom of my heart. I had forgotten the incident until the editor told me. I intend to have the letter framed and keep it as long as I live.

Phipps supports his invalid father and his sister. He said he would use the money to make a payment on a home he is buying.

15 RACES IN HER FAMILY.

Chicago Woman to Adopt Babies Representing Fifteen Peoples.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Mrs. L. Brackett Bishop, wife of a wealthy business man, announced to-day her intention to adopt fifteen children, each to represent one of the fifteen most characteristic racial types. Her representatives are visiting local orphan asylums in search of the nucleus of her future family. Mrs. Bishop also has friends touring Europe to find babies representing such races as are not represented in Chicago.

The family will include a negro baby, an Indian, an Arab, a Japanese, a Malay, a German, an Irish, a Chinese, a Scandinavian, an American, and babes representing several of the South American countries.

The plan, Mrs. Bishop said, had been under consideration since the death of her two daughters, twenty-five years ago.

"We will move from the hotel where we are now living to a comfortable house in the outskirts of the city as soon as the family is started," said Mrs. Bishop, "and we intend to bring the children up as nearly as possible as the American family of moderate means"

ZELAYA'S ARREST BRINGS A PROTEST

Counsel Says Politics Inspired His Conviction of Murders He Did Not Know About.

RELY ON EZETA DECISION

President Cleveland Refused to Return Political Refugees to Salvador Who Were Charged with Murder.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—A protest against the arrest of José Santos Zalaya, ex-President of Nicaragua, who is wanted by those in charge of the Government of that country now for sentence after his conviction of murder, was filed at the State Department to-day. The protest was prepared by Corry Montague Stadden, a lawyer of this city, who was counselor of the Nicaraguan Legation in Washington from 1901 to 1910, while Zelaya was President.

Mr. Stadden protested against the arrest of Zelaya on cabled information. He asserted, also, that the alleged offense and the demand for his client's extradition were based on political motives, and he pointed out that the Fourth Article of the Nicaraguan Extradition Treaty with the United States provided specifically that its provisions "shall not be applicable to persons guilty of any political crime or offense or of one connected with such a crime or offense."

Mr. Stadden held two conferences with Joseph W. Folk, the new solicitor for the State Department, Zelaya's return to Nicaragua is sought on the ground that he is responsible personally for the deaths of Domingo Toribio and Sixto Pineda at Masaya, in Nicaragua, on April 21, 1901, through abuse of authority.

Gen. Chamorro, the Nicaraguan Minister, told the State Department that the Nicaraguan Legislature some time ago referred these cases against Zelaya to the Supreme Court of Nicaragua for trial and that the court indicted the defendant and convicted him. Under the Nicaraguan code a man may be tried and convicted in his absence. At the Nicaraguan Legation it was said to-night that the papers upon which the extradition of Zelaya was sought were on the way to Washington from Managua and would not arrive for two weeks.

The arrest of Zelaya brings to light a clause in the extradition treaty between the United States and Nicaragua, ratified in 1905, under which it is agreed that a fugitive may be "provisionally" arrested and held for sixty days in either country on cabled information that a warrant has been issued for the fugitive for a crime that is extraditable. Mexico is the only other country with which we have such an arrangement. In the Mexican treaty the period for which a criminal may be held is fixed at forty days instead of sixty.

The usual procedure is for the Consul or Minister representing the country desiring the extradition of a fugitive criminal to appear before a court or a Commissioner and ask for a warrant for the arrest and detention of the accused person. When application is thus made the evidence against the accused must be presented.

At the Nicaraguan Legation the assertion that the arrest of Zelaya was due to politics was denied, and it was pointed out that the treaty under which it was possible to arrest Zelaya on a cabled request was negotiated while Zelaya was President of Nicaragua in 1905. Luis F. Corea, one of Zelaya's counsel in New York, then Nicaraguan Minister in Washington, negotiated the treaty.

Mr. Stadden, in his conferences to-day with Solicitor Folk, said that, while the warrant on which Zelaya was arrested charged that Toribio and Pineda were killed the same day at the same place, the facts would show that the murders occurred at different times and places. Mr. Stadden said that Zelaya had no knowledge of either death. He said that Sixto Pineda was shot by the then Lieutenant Governor of the province of which Masaya is the capital for an attempt on the life of the Provincial Governor, and that Domingo Toribio was shot by the Nicaraguan police at Managua while committing a robbery. Mr. Stadden said that the circumstances of both deaths were matters of public record in Nicaragua, and that it would be shown that Gen. Zelaya had no share in them.

A case similar to that of Zelaya, upon which Zelaya and his counsel will rely as a precedent against his extradition, was that of Gen. Antonio Ezeta of Salvador, whose extradition was sought in the Administration of President Cleveland in 1894. Ezeta was Vice President of the Government which was overthrown by Gen. Rafaela Gutierrez in 1894. Some of its military and civil officers, including Gen. Ezeta, who were pursued by insurgents, sought refuge on the United States gunboat Bennington, then at La Libertad. There were seventeen refugees in the party, and they were taken to San Francisco.

Their extradition was demanded on charges of murder, robbery, and arson. President Cleveland directed that each of the refugees as had not quit the Bennington should be arrested upon their arrival at San Francisco. This was done, and Judge Morrow of the Federal court at San Francisco ruled that the charges of robbery and murder were found to relate to offenses of a political character, which were excluded under the terms of the treaty. He discharged all of the accused except one, Juan Cienfuegos, who was held for an attempt to murder. But President Cleveland directed his release, holding that an attempt to murder was not one of the crimes charged against him, and upon which his surrender had been demanded.

ZELAYA SENT TO THE TOMBS.

His Counsel Expected to Apply for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Gen. José Santos Zelaya, the deposed President of Nicaragua, who was arrested on Wednesday night in the home of his friend, Washington S. Valentine, at 645 West End Avenue, where he was asleep in bed, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields in the Federal Building yesterday charged with "murder and other crimes." Bail was refused, and he was locked up in

BOMB WRECKS SHOP, ALARM ON HEIGHTS

Shoemaker and Wife Hurled from Bed by Its Force—Inspector Faurot Hurt.

Washington Heights had its first bomb explosion last night attributed to Black Handers. The explosion, which occurred at 11:50 o'clock, awoke the neighborhood of Amsterdam Avenue and 148th Street. The residents poured out into the streets to seek an explanation.

The noise of the explosion came from the little shoe store and repair establishment of Joseph Forno, an Italian of good standing. Forno's store is on the ground floor of 1,785 Amsterdam Avenue, a hundred feet or so from 148th Street. There is a little areaway leading to his doorstep and there was a big plate-glass window in his store—a convenient setting for a bomb explosion.

Policeman Henry McGrath was on fixed post at 148th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, almost directly in front of Forno's store, when the explosion occurred. Its force threw him from his feet. All through the neighborhood he heard glass breaking upon the pavement. A squad of policemen from the police station at Amsterdam Avenue and 152d Street came on a run.

Among those who came to the scene was Police Inspector Joseph A. Faurot. Inspector Faurot lives at 521 West 149th Street. He did not have to be told that the Black Handers were at work. He assumed charge of the police and detectives who gathered around the wrecked shop of Forno.

Faurot took a few men into the rear of the store and there they found Forno and his wife, Angelina. They had been hurled from their beds by the explosion. Faurot learned from them of their prosperity, how they had started a little shoe shop fifteen years ago, how their business had grown, and how many of their Italian friends had expressed envy over their bank account.

"But we never got any letters," Forno insisted, and when pressed further along this line he shrugged his shoulders.

Inspector Faurot questioned Patrolman McGrath, and when he learned that the patrolman had seen no one in the neighborhood either before or after the explosion, he went on a tour of inspection in the cellar and rear court.

While going down the cellar steps he slipped and went sprawling the rest of the way. He fell into a mass of broken glass, and his left arm was so badly cut that a physician in the crowd had to take him to his office and sew up the wounds.

Capt. Day of the West 152d Street station then took command of the situation. Capt. Day and his men made an inspection of other houses in the neighborhood, and found that a hundred panes of glass had been shattered. In Joseph Heinrich's saloon at 1,789 Amsterdam Avenue the bartender told Capt. Day that seven men who had been lined up before the bar dropped to the floor when the bomb was exploded. Heinrich's big plate glass window was shattered. It was long after midnight before quiet was restored.

BOMB ROUTS 20 FAMILIES.

Attempt Made to Blow Up a New Rochelle Tenement.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Nov. 27.—The police of this city are making an investigation of an attempt made early this morning to blow up the Italian tenement house, 329 Lockwood Avenue, occupied by about twenty Italian families. The police say they have a clue which they think will result in an arrest.

Policeman John Sullivan was patroling his beat early this morning when he heard an explosion, and he hurried to the house. He found the families in a panic rushing from the building, all of them clad in their night clothes. He found the front of the lower part of the house badly damaged.

The authorities believe that dynamite was used. None of the Italians would admit to the police that he had received any Black Hand letters.

GEN. SCOTT IN LONE PARLEY

Goes Unescorted for Pow-Wow with Navajo Indian Chiefs.

FARMINGTON, N. M., Nov. 27.—An Indian runner arrived to-day with news of the movement of the Twelfth Cavalry, acting as escort for Gen. Hugh L. Scott, ordered to the Navajo Reservation to subdue an incipient uprising.

Gen. Scott to-day, accompanied only by an Indian interpreter, left Noel Trading Post, at the foot of Beautiful Mountain, the Indian stronghold, for a pow-wow with the Navajo chiefs. Gen. Scott left his cavalry and escort fifteen miles away, proceeding on horseback to the top of the mountain. The outcome of his conference will decide whether the Indians will surrender without a fight. Gen. Scott is not expected to rejoin the troops before to-morrow.

The overland trip of the troops from Gallup to Shiprock, 100 miles, was a tedious one, requiring six days. Heavy rains had made the roads almost impassable for the wagon train. The troops are now encamped at a strategic point within five hours' march of Beautiful Mountain. They have a mountain battery and three rapid-fire guns.

Should Chief Be Sho She, with whom Gen. Scott conferred to-day, spurn overtures of peace, then the troops will move against the Indians immediately. Many Indians are reported to have joined the band of recalcitrants on Beautiful Mountain.

TO ASK FOR VOTE ON CATHEDRAL DESIGNS

St. John the Divine Trustees to Seek Public's Verdict on New and Old Plans.

Differences of opinion have arisen among the trustees of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine over the new design for the Cathedral exterior. Some of the trustees favor going back to the old design, and so it has been decided to call in the judgment of the public. Duplicate designs are to be placed on exhibition in the new Synod Hall on the Cathedral grounds, and at the Architectural League building, Fifty-seventh Street, near Broadway.

It was said yesterday that about $250,000 had been obtained toward the $1,000,000 needed to complete the Cathedral nave, but that until the matter of the exterior design of the whole structure was decided work could not well proceed.

As soon as the critics have looked at the two designs, or, at least, as soon as they have examined the new Cram ones, they are invited to send their views to Bishop Greer, or to any of the trustees of the Cathedral. Among their number are the Rev. Drs. Grosvenor, Stires, Slattery and Robbins, and August Belmont, Henry Lewis Morris, George Mccullough Miller and Elbridge T. Gerry.

The original plan was the work of Heins & La Farge, and was selected after a sharp competition with four other designs. A feature of it was a great central tower, ending in a spire. At the western end were two towers. Other parts of the exterior were plain, and as many hold, the whole was simple, dignified, impressive.

In 1911 C. Grant La Farge, the surviving architect of the firm, was supplanted by Ralph A. Cram of the firm of Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson. Mr. Cram was asked to make a new exterior, and to make such alterations as he thought wise in interior plans. So far as known the interior changes bring no differences of opinion in the trustees' ranks. The new Cram exterior presents two companion spires in place of the one central tower. There are other spires and towers to the number of seven, while the entire exterior is a mass of finials and miniature towers. Hardly a square foot of exterior space but is covered with some ornament.

Bishop Greer is a strong advocate of the new design, and said yesterday:

"It is inspirational, as the old was not."

Among those who prefer the old plan is the Rev. Dr. Henry Lubeck, and he said:

A curious dilemma has arisen concerning the new $350,000 Synod Hall. It is to be made the centre of Episcopal affairs in this city and the house in Lafayette Street is to be given over to other church causes. But the dilemma relates to the ownership. It was given by the late Messrs. Morgan and Cutting for the use of the Episcopal General Conventions. The question comes up whether the Convention owns it. Is the deed to be in its name? Or does the Diocese of New York own it? Or, finally, do the Trustees of the Cathedral own it? There is no fund to pay for its light and heat, and yet it is in constant use. Hardly a day since the Convention adjourned a month ago but meetings have been held there. The question of title deed came up in the Cathedral Trustees' meeting, and it left it open for somebody else to determine.

LOST WEDDING GOWN FOUND

Negro Picked Up Miss Stattleman's Suit Case Containing It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Louis Jackson, a negro ragpicker, appeared in the Police Court to-day in connection with an investigation into the disappearance and ultimate recovery of a suitcase containing the gown which Miss Henrietta L. Stattleman of Wilmington, Del., intended to wear at the White House wedding on Tuesday. Jackson said he had picked up the suitcase in the street near the Union Station on Tuesday morning, and, after leaving it in a barroom for a while, had taken it to his home with the intention of holding it until it was advertised for.

After Jackson's explanation a charge of larceny against him was dismissed. The police notified Miss Stattleman that they had her suitcase and gown.

Miss Stattleman, who is a friend of Mrs. Jessie Wilson Sayre, arrived in Washington from Wilmington several hours before the wedding and took a taxicab for the White House. When she got there the suitcase was missing.

BIRD LAW TO BE TESTED.

Carmody Tells Hornaday It Is Sure to Reach the Courts.

ALBANY, Nov. 27.—That the question of the constitutionality of the Federal migratory bird law is certain to be raised in the courts is pointed out in a letter sent by Attorney General Carmody to William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park. The letter is a reply to one written by Mr. Hornaday in which he inclosed abstracts of a communication received from Ernest Knaebel, a Deputy United States Attorney General, who said that Mr. Carmody's opinion could not prevent the enforcement of the law. In reply Mr. Carmody indicates how the constitutionality of the law probably will be raised, and adds:

"The question is bound to come up whenever an attempt is made to enforce the law, and then the question as to the validity of the statute will have to be determined by the courts."

HALDANE INDORSES MONROE DOCTRINE

Lord Chancellor Declares That We Are Not Guided by Selfishness in Enforcing It.

IS BRITAIN'S POLICY, TOO

World Looks to Us to Carry On Our Traditions Without Adding to Our Possessions.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—In a remarkable speech at the Thanksgiving Day banquet of the American Society in London to-night, Viscount Haldane, the Lord Chancellor, proposed the toast of the President of the United States.

The Lord Chancellor spoke of the high ideals of Mr. Wilson and the expression that he is giving to those ideals in his policies, and he went on to announce what may be regarded as the British Government's cordial attitude toward the Monroe Doctrine in its latest developments. Lord Haldane said:

"Before Mr. Woodrow Wilson became President he was a thinker and a moralist, and in studying his career what seems to one who looks at things detachedly is that he has not ceased to be a thinker and a moralist because he has become the holder of a great office and is a great statesman. These things do not always go together, but a distinctive characteristic of the remarkable man who holds the office at the present time of President of the United States is that he presents the spectacle of something out of the way—a combination of gifts and possessions which is not usual.

"It seems to me that Mr. Wilson typifies the inspirations and ideals which he has expressed to the world. It is not merely his firm declaration that the policy of the United States is not a policy of conquest or annexation. That we respect profoundly, because we know its deep meaning ourselves. A country like the United States, with its enormous possessions, its tremendous wealth and power, has burden enough to carry without adding to its responsibilities, and that is our own case also.

"Nor is it merely that when the United States intervenes it is not for personal advantage. It is, I think, about ninety years since President Monroe sent his famous message to Congress, containing what is known as the Monroe Doctrine. The Monroe Doctrine remains to be completed, and it seems to me—looking on as though to divine the true inwardness of what was in the mind of the President of the United States in the declarations which he has recently made—that, just as his Government in the days of Monroe assumed a great responsibility for the protection of the nations south of the United States on the great American continent, so to-day the United States feel that the responsibility must be extended to securing good government and fair treatment for all those who live and trade in those countries.

"My interpretation is that the United States is ready to accept responsibility, not merely for insuring good government and good treatment in the interest of her own subjects, but in the interests of the world at large, so that all who live and trade on the great American continent may feel that she has set before her a high ideal, to secure for them equally with her own subjects that justice and righteousness of which President Wilson has spoken.

"I am not sure that anybody ought to speculate from the outside on the interpretation of this policy, but I have been deeply impressed with what has passed recently, and I think myself at liberty to speak to you of the interpretation which I put upon it; for, if it be true, then indeed a high spirit and aim has been brought into the policy of the United States Government in its dealings with adjacent countries.

"It is because the present President seems to me to have taken this step—a step which one cannot but admire, whatever its consequence may be—that I give the toast, 'A health, not merely to Mr. Woodrow Wilson, the President of the United States, but to Mr. Woodrow Wilson the man.'"

350 Americans Present.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—At the Thanksgiving dinner of the American Society here to-night three hundred and fifty American men and women, with a large number of British guests, were present, and they cheered Lord Haldane's words again and again.

Sir John A. Simon, the Attorney General, proposed the health of the American Ambassador, Walter H. Page, declaring him to be a worthy successor of his distinguished predecessors. He said:

"America and England have given their best and their worst to each other. America has sent us ragtime; we have sent you militant suffragettes."

Mr. Page referred to the cordial reception which he had met with in England, and which, he said, he knew to be a tribute to his country.

Speaking of the difficulties of his office, he said that when the Ambassador referred to the debt which America owed to England, American citizens of Irish, German, Polish and Lithuanian blood gathered to adopt resolutions de-

SAVED FROM MEXICAN JAIL.

Woodyard, American, Who Aided Maderos, Refugee on the Michigan.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 27.—Fearing arrest by the Mexican authorities on the charge of having assisted in the recent escape to the United States battleship Rhode Island of Evaristo and Daniel Madero, J. F. Woodyard, Jr., a prominent member of the American colony at Vera Cruz, and formerly of Monterey, is under the protection of the American flag aboard the battleship Michigan. Capt. Edward E. Capehart, commanding the Michigan, is the senior officer of the squadron now here.

Woodyard was informed yesterday that a warrant had been issued for his arrest and committal to the fortress of San Juan d Ulua. He went immediately to the American Consulate, where he was informed by the Consul, W. W. Canada, that he was unable to give him asylum. Woodyard then boarded the battleship. His presence there was a profound secret until to-day, when a proposal was made to put him aboard the steamer Esperanza for Havana. To this the agents of the line objected when they learned the circumstances of the case, saying that they were not willing to face the peril of complications with the Mexican authorities.

The Mexican officials learned to-day that Woodyard was aboard the Michigan, but made no demand for his surrender.

It is understood that the officials gave Woodyard an intimation that he would have a prompt trial, but he chose to remain on the Michigan in preference to a possible long preliminary confinement in the fortress.

Woodyard is a warm friend of the Madero family, but it is not known that he is affiliated with them politically. He is a graduate of West Point and an engineer by profession.

RODIN FORGOT HIS WORK.

Said It Was a Forgery, and a Paris Dealer Is Suing Him for Damages.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Auguste Rodin is faced with a curious action for damages.

Recently he heard that a bronze statue entitled "The Earth," described as being by him, was being offered for sale in some art rooms here. As he was unable to remember such a work, he informed the police and a warrant was issued for the seizure of the supposed forgery.

The art dealer made inquiries of the man from whom he bought the statue, and it was traced back from one purchaser after another to Prof. Heilbuth of Hamburg, who stated that he bought the statue from M. Rodin himself in 1899, and that Rodin wrote on it with his own hand, "First model."

Reminded of this, M. Rodin withdrew the charge of forgery and confessed his mistake.

The dealer now alleges that his credit has suffered and he is about to sue M. Rodin for heavy damages.

TRIPLE LOOP BY BEACHEY.

Daring Aviator Performs Feat Easily at San Diego.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 27.—Lincoln Beachey executed a triple loop with his biplane here to-day. The feat was performed easily and at no time was he in danger of losing control of his machine.

Strapped to the seat of his biplane, Beachey circled upward to an altitude of nearly 3,000 feet. Then the frail craft darted downward several hundred feet, described a vertical circle and rose again. Another drop to within a few hundred feet of the earth and the aviator turned a second somersault; righting his biplane, he soared a thousand feet, made a third loop and came swooping down to earth.

RESCUE-CREW DIE IN GALE.

Three Men of Steamship President Lost Trying to Save Passenger.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—Fourth Officer Shane, Quartermaster Oswald and Seaman H. Hansen of the steamship President, from Seattle for San Francisco, were drowned fifty miles off Coos Bay last night when they attempted to rescue an unidentified steerage passenger, who had been swept overboard by a heavy sea.

According to the account transmitted by wireless, when the cry of "man overboard" was raised Shane, Oswald and Hansen volunteered to go to the rescue, although the President was battling with a seventy-mile gale, and the seas were breaking over her bow.

The crew having succeeded in lowering a boat, the three men started away. Their frail craft was carried astern like a flash, and the next moment a great wave curled over it and swamped it.

After futile efforts to recover the bodies the President continued her voyage.

GRENFELL WORKER BACK.

Miss Coates Tells of Record Trip She Made in Labrador.

Miss Laura Coates, who is 28 years old and the only white woman who has visited Grand Falls, Labrador arrived yesterday from St. John's, Newfoundland, on the Red Cross steamship Stephano after spending two years in Labrador working with Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell. She said that most of her time had been spent at the headquarters of the mission at Hamilton Inlet, from which she made expeditions to the nearby villages over the snow.

Accompanied by an Indian half-breed guide and armed with a rifle Miss Coates started to travel 325 miles by canoe and on foot up the Grand River to the Falls. They had a canoe each, she said, at starting, but one was smashed on the journey. The Grand Falls are 375 feet high and there are three falls in succession. On the bank Miss Coates found bottles containing the names of persons who had visited the spot and the date. Miss Coates wrote her name and date on a card and left it in a bottle and then started back for Hamilton Inlet.

Advices Received Tell of Rebel Progress Throughout the Northern States.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27.—It is now known that Ciudad Victoria, the capital of Tamaulipas, despite the assertions of the Government that the place was safe, has been evacuated by the Federals, who have fallen back to Tula, southeast of Victoria.

The rebels occupied the town and looted it, finally razing the buildings in face of a probable attack by the Federal columns under Gen. Rubio Navarrete, which had been mustering to the north for several days.

Gen. Rabago, Governor of Tamaulipas, in his retreat with his garrison, left the rebels at liberty to advance toward Tampico, which is believed to be their next objective.

It is reported here that the rebels carried away trainloads of loot and many women.

Late reports from Victoria state that the Spanish Consul there and several Spaniards and other foreigners were massacred by the rebels before the evacuation of the town.

This report was brought here by Spaniards to-day, but it is not confirmed officially or from any diplomatic source.

Government officials will say nothing regarding the situation at Victoria, although it is understood that they are fully informed of the facts.

Thanksgiving Day was celebrated here by the Americans. Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy entertained the American colony at a reception this afternoon. This function did much to allay the alarm which had been caused by recent rumors of possible intervention. Hundreds of Americans and many foreign diplomats called at the Embassy.

Government Troops for Tuxpam.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 27.—Gen. Joaquin Maass has about a thousand men here to-night. Early to-morrow morning he will place them on transports destined for Tuxpam. The Government has decided to prosecute an energetic campaign against the rebels in the oil districts.

John Lind has notified Consul Canada that he will return to Vera Cruz on the first warship coming this way, and will arrive before Sunday.

The action of a surgeon of the Michigan in risking his life in an effort to save a Mexican fisherman from drowning near the pier has caused much favorable comment here.

Capital Admits Rebel Progress.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27.—Such reports of developments through the country as are available indicate rebel progress at almost all points, although the tone of the reports emanating from the War Department is optimistic.

More than fifty rebels were killed yesterday in the course of three sharp engagements between a force of 400 revolutionists and a body of Federal troops commanded by Col. Celso Aguilar in the State of Tlaxcala, according to advices received at the War Office.

A column of Federal troops commanded by Gen. Rubio Navarrete was ambushed yesterday by a strong body of rebels near La Cruz while moving from Monterey toward Ciudad Victoria. The Federals were caught in a ravine by the rebels, who poured in a heavy rifle fire from the hillsides. The Federals brought their machine guns into action and in this way saved themselves from annihilation.

The rebels were eventually driven off, leaving some seventy dead on the field. The Federal Commander admits that twenty of his men were killed.

Another rebel force yesterday sacked the town of San Dionisio in the State of Puebla. They did not even spare the church, which they looted, after killing the sacristan. Such a thing is unusual, churches and priests generally being respected by the raiders.

A military train with 150 soldiers aboard was dynamited to-day at El Salado, sixty miles south of Saltillo. The casualties are not known. The rebels in that region appear to be continuing their concentration.

An executive session of the Chamber of Deputies was held to-day, and the proposition to reduce the salaries of its members was discussed, but no action was taken.

VILLA TO ATTACK CHIHUAHUA.

Plans to Leave Juarez with 7,000 Troops To-day or Saturday.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 27.—Rebel scouts reported to Gen. Frisco Villa at Juarez to-night that during the day they had sighted the Federal outposts at Villa Ahumada, eighty-three miles south of Juarez. The presence of the Federal forces at Villa Ahumada has caused no little concern in Juarez, as the rebel officers do not know definitely whether they are the troops which retreated from Tierra Blanca after their defeat on Tuesday, or reinforcements from Chihuahua again moving north to engage Villa.

"I will leave to attack Chihuahua just as soon as I can get my trains loaded with provisions and my troops, which will probably be to-morrow night or Saturday morning," said Gen. Villa at Juarez.

To-morrow morning Gen. Villa will hold a review and parade of his troops in celebration of the victory over the Federals at Tierra Blanca. After the parade the troops will make immediate preparations for leaving for the south.

Thousands of dollars' worth of provisions were transferred from El Paso to Juarez to-day to be loaded on Villa's train.

Villa expects to have at least 12,000 men when he attacks Chihuahua. He said to-night he had sent word for Gen. Tomas Urbina to bring 3,000 men north from the Torreon district, and that Gen. Manuel Chao was in the vicinity of Chihuahua with 2,000 rebel troops. Villa will take 7,000 soldiers from Juarez, leaving a garrison of about 100 men to protect the city.

Spanish residents of Juarez have appealed to the American Consul, Thomas B. Edwards, to take charge of their possessions in the city, as Gen. Villa has threatened to confiscate their stores and other property. Consul Edwards accepted the custody of the properties. There are about 100 Spaniards in Juarez. They have aroused Villa's displeasure by refusing to accept rebel fiat money and closing their stores.

Rebel forces under Gen. Antonio Villareal to-day routed Gen. Rubio Navarette's Federal column at La Cruz, State of Tamaulipas, according to an official dispatch received by Gen. Villa's Juarez headquarters from José Vasconcelas, a rebel agent. The message said:

"Gen Antonio Villareal defeated and routed Rubio Navarette's force at La Cruz, near Linares. Navarette abandoned his trains. Gens. Candido Aguilar and Abel Salazar, with 5,000 Constitutionalists, have demanded the surrender of Tampico. Navarette was going to the relief of Tampico."

VICTORY SPURS THE REBELS.

Carranza Changes Plan of Campaign —Will Move on Chihuahua.

HERMOSILLO, Mexico, Nov. 27.—Francisco Villa's victory over the Huerta troops south of Juarez is likely to alter the entire plan for a general movement of insurgent troops in the South.

Gen. Carranza, head of the Constitutionalists, announced to-day that he would probably move into Chihuahua State. This would mean the abandonment of his formerly announced plan of proceeding directly south along the west coast into Sinaloa and Tepic.

If the Constitutionalist commander goes into Chihuahua, the general movement of insurgent forces will be made south of Juarez and along the central line of the National Railways, the most direct route into the centre of the Republic.

On account of the unsettled conditions between Agua Prieta, opposite Douglas, Ariz., and Juarez, opposite El Paso, Texas, the General Staff will probably be accompanied by a small escort.

There is no railroad in Mexico between those two points, and if the new plan for a southern invasion goes into effect all available troops from Sonora and Sinaloa, the two west coast States, will move south by rail to Tepic City, and thence across the mountain passes for about 100 miles to Guadalajara, Jalisco, joining the Chihuahua troops at some interior point. This was the route originally selected by Gen. Carranza for his southward advance.

Details of the fighting near Juarez received here to-day through border representatives indicated the complete rout of the Federal troops under Salazar, Orpinel, and Mercado. Word from Chihuahua City, upon which it was reported that other insurgent forces were marching, was awaited with impatience. It was asserted at Carranza's headquarters that Villa's victory was the most crushing since the beginning of the Madero outbreak in 1910.

REBEL ADVANCE EXPECTED.

Washington Hears Carranza Is Preparing for Strong Movement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Advices to the State Department and to the Constitutionalist representatives here tonight indicated that the plan of the Mexican rebels' campaign originally decided on by Carranza will now be changed. The first objective in the original plan was Mazatlan, and the idea was to move down the west coast to the City of Mexico. It is now planned to advance along what seems to be the line of least resistance, from Chihuahua to Jiminez, Torreon, Monterey, and Saltillo.

The overwhelming victory of the Constitutionalists at Juarez has given them such strong control of the northern States that they can use the Mexican Central Railway to move a large force southward with facility and some speed. It is asserted that although the railroad has been the object of attack by both sides, and bridges and tracks have been destroyed at times, it can be quickly put in order and that the railroad employes in Northern Mexico are in sympathy with the Carranza party and will work with a will to set things right so that Gen. Villa's army can advance.

Reports secured by Carranza within the last few days are said to show that he can get all the cars and locomotives he wants, and that if necessary he can move his army in two columns, one on the Mexican National and the other on the Mexican Central. The distance from Chihuahua to the City of Mexico is about 1,200 miles, and the problem of gaining subsistence and combatting strong resistance of the Federals, who will try to destroy the railroads, will confront the advancing rebels.

At the Constitutionalist headquarters here it is predicted that the new line of march to the City of Mexico will be apparent in the operations of Villa within the next fortnight.

Villa's Report of Juarez Battle.

A dispatch received to-day at Constitutionalist headquarters from Gen. Villa said:

I have the honor to communicate to you that I have completely defeated the enemy and have captured practically all of his artillery and three trains. The enemy has retreated in disgraceful order. I congratulate you in the name of all your subordinates upon this victory.

News of another victory of the Constitutionalists was contained in the following telegram addressed to Señor Pasquiera:

Gen. Villa, after thirty-eight hours of continuous fighting, has defeated the Federals under Gens. Rojas, Caravel, Salazar, Orpinel, Terrazas, and Monellia. They fled south. I have not yet gone completely over the battle-ground. I have captured more than 1,000 rifles, 15 cannon, many shells; also horses, prisoners, and three trains.

Federal losses are about 1,500. We found dead Gens. Terrazas and Monellia. Caravel reported fatally wounded. Our losses are about 500 dead and wounded. Gen. Banavides, with 800 cavalry, is pursuing the Federals.

Later the Constitutionalist agent made public this telegram:

Further details from Juarez report the capture of sixteen cannon, including "Borro" cannon, which was found on platform car; fifteen machine guns, ninety-two cars, eight armored cars and five engines, and 800 Federal prisoners captured.

Another dispatch says that Gen. Rubio Navarette, the Federal commander in the region between Monterey and Tampico, has been whipped at La Cruz, by Gen. Pablo Gonzales, with the loss of his entire train of supplies and ammunition.

La Cruz is sixty miles north of Victoria, and it is said that Gonzales is now in control of the whole region northward from Victoria. It is now the plan for Gen. Aguilar and Gen. Gonzales to join forces and try to take Tampico, which the Constitutionalists expect to do within a week.

It was said at Constitutionalist headquarters that Gen. Villa had telegraphed to President Wilson a denial of reports that he was acting independently of the orders of Gen. Carranza.

Another visit paid to-day to President Wilson by Sir William Tyrrell, private secretary to Sir Edward Grey, the British Minister of Foreign Affairs, has revived reports of a British-American understanding with reference to the Mexican situation. No information as to the reason for Sir William's call at the White House was furnished, other than a brief statement by him in response to an inquiry that he was about to sail for England on Saturday and had called on the President merely to say good-bye.

This is the third conversation that Sir William Tyrrell has had with President Wilson within a week. It has been admitted that he discussed Mexican affairs with the President and Secretary Bryan on previous visits.

Immediately after Sir William's call at the White House last Sunday night orders were sent by the Secretary of the Navy to Rear Admiral Fletcher at Vera Cruz to proceed at once to Tuxpam and Tampico, where British and American capitalists have heavy investments in the oil fields.

Gen. Aguilar has repeated his assurances not to permit any act that will injure the oil wells or oil tanks in the Tampico and Tuxpam districts. But he insists that the Pearson Company and the Standard Oil Company must at once pay to the Constitutionalist government the due and proper taxes, which they have hitherto paid to the Federal Government.

He threatens that if this is refused the properties will be seized and the owners will not be permitted to operate the wells or have charge of or ship oil from the tanks. So far as he has power, however, Gen. Aguilar says he will not allow any one to set fire to the oil tanks or uncap any of the wells.

To-day the Navy Department received a dispatch from Admiral Fletcher, reporting his arrival at Tampico in his flagship, the battleship Rhode Island. He said that everything there was quiet.

The most interesting information in Admiral Fletcher's report was that the British armored cruiser Suffolk, flagship of Rear Admiral Cradock, had arrived at Tampico. He reported also that the British armored cruiser Berwick, of Rear Admiral Cradock's squadron, had arrived at Puerto Mexico, formerly Coatzacoalcos, the Atlantic outlet of the Tehuantepec Railroad. The arrival of these British war vessels in Mexican waters had been expected. While this Government is willing to assure Great Britain and other foreign Governments that the interests of their subjects and citizens will be looked after by the United States, the Wilson Administration has no reasonable ground on which to object to the action of the British Admiralty in sending the Suffolk and the Berwick to Tampico and Puerto Mexico.

It has been customary, however, since the Mexican situation became acute, for all foreign nations that have sent warships to the waters of Mexico, or have contemplated sending them, to let this Government know in advance that there was nothing political in the missions of those vessels, and that they had been sent to Mexico merely to give adequate protection to the nationals of their Governments.

Whether Great Britain has furnished any such polite assurances has not been announced, but it is taken for granted that her attitude has been similar to that of other foreign nations. The belief here is that Sir William Tyrrell's several visits to the President have been made under direct instructions from his chief, Sir Edward Grey, and that they have been for the purpose of making known to the President that Great Britain would undertake no action that would in any way be embarrassing to the policy which this Government is endeavoring to carry out.

TAMPICO REFUGEES LOSE ALL.

84 Americans Arrive at Galveston —Their Crops Commandeered.

GALVESTON, Texas, Nov. 27.—Refugees from around Tampico, who arrived her to-day on the steamer Atlantis, told stories of conditions steadily growing worse, which forced them to flee to the United States.

When they left Tampico six days ago Constitutionalists were reported ready to attack the port and had already occupied the surrounding country with disastrous results to the property of many of the inhabitants. J. Laffer, a ranchman, said that it had become impossible to make even a living.

"Crops, if grown, cannot be marketed," he said. "They fall into the hands of Constitutionalists or Federals, or, if they escape these, the bandits get them."

Few of the refugees required financial assistance, though they said they expected to lose all their holdings in Mexico. There were eighty-four Americans in the number.

AN OIL WAR, SAYS BRYANT.

Concessions, Not Principles, at Stake in the Mexican Conflict.

Special to The New York Times.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Nov. 27.—President Albert G. Briant, of the American School of World Peace, of Boston, who is attending the Colorado State Teachers' Convention, says vast money interests in Europe and America are trying to force President Wilson into armed intervention in Mexico.

"The Madero revolution was financed from abroad," he says, "and Huerta is making bids for European assistance by holding out concessions to the great interests. Lord Cowdrey of England, and the Pearson interests, whom Huerta has favored, are hoping that Huerta's Congress may be held legal, so that it may approve vast concessions in Mexico oil fields made them by Huerta. American interests are hoping that Huerta may be unseated so that these concessions may become worthless. The Mexican oil fields are the richest in the world. For these rather than for any political principles, the war is now being waged.

"It is not for the United States to pull these political chestnuts out of the fire for either faction, and all good citizens should support President Wilson's policy to avoid intervention. Americans are further interested in mining enterprises which would be much more valuable if Mexico were in United States territority. These interests are willing to sacrifice the men and capital necessary for the war to succeed."

BLAMES WILSON'S IDEALISM.

Service Journal Says He Should Protect Investors in Mexico.

"We are in a pitiful condition, indeed, when we say to our own citizens who are engaged in enterprises abroad that they must take care of themselves and not look to protection from home." The Army and Navy Register of Washington says in a reference to the present Mexican situation.

"We are insisting that the Europeans shall keep off the Latin-American and the South American preserves, have assumed the attitude of settling disputes according to our own opinion of right and justice; we will determine whether the existing Government shall be acknowledged and recognized as such; we will prescribe the method and the terms by which an existing and acceptable Government shall prevail. If we have undertaken to render this service, it behooves us not to be too idealistic. We must take into account the protection which is due Europeans as well as Americans who have invested money on this side of the ocean.

MARINES OFF FOR THE SOUTH.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—With 800 marines and a full crew on board, the transport Prairie left the Philadelphia Navy Yard at 1 o'clock to-day for southern waters. The transport carries stores and ammunition for a three months' cruise. The marines are commanded by Col. A. J. Lejeune.

The colonel and officials of the Philadelphia Navy Yard said before the Prairie sailed that the orders received named Pensacola, Fla., as the objective point of the trip. It has been rumored at the Navy Yard, however, that these orders might be changed by wireless telegraph from Washington after the Prairie had passed out to sea.

The transport received a noisy send-off by the sailors and marines of the navy yard fleet now stationed at the yard.

SAYS PRESS BEAT COLOMBIA OIL PLAN

DID NOT SEEK A MONOPOLY

Not He, but Lord Murray, Withdrew the Application—Comment on American Views of It.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 28.—That the withdrawal of his application for oil and other concessions in Colombia had absolutely no connection with the present situation in Mexico was the emphatic and unequivocal statement of Lord Cowdray to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent yesterday. He said that his withdrawal was purely a business matter, and that Lord Murray had taken the step on his own initiative without instructions from the home office because of political complications to which the applications had given rise in Colombia. These complications, he said, were due largely to misrepresentations in the American press of the nature of the concessions asked for.

Lord Cowdray began the interview by remarking:

"There is nothing that I can say about Colombia until Lord Murray, one of my partners, who alone conducted the negotiations, returns in the course of two months. He may have something to say when he gets back."

When the correspondent urged the advisability of his making an authoritative statement of his position in the whole matter, Lord Cowdray became more communicative, and said:

"Lord Murray has been away a year engaged in that and other business. The negotiations with Colombia, both as regards general features and details, are entirely in his hands. Everything has been done at his discretion. We thought the proposals would be accepted strictly as a business proposition. Lord Murray withdrew them entirely on his own initiative, without any suggestion from this side. He says they were withdrawn on account of the political conditions which the applications developed. The withdrawal has absolutely no significance politically and most emphatically no connection with the present situation in Mexico. The Colombian situation has been entirely misrepresented by the American press. It has been asserted that our applications for concessions were monopolistic and included rights other than those considered proper and requisite for the oil business. In consequence all kinds of statements about these concessions being anti-Monroe Doctrine have been circulated, whereas the truth is that our applications were for oil concessions and the necessary facilities to conduct an oil business and nothing else.

"The concessions applied for were only a small fraction of 1 per cent. of the whole Colombian territory, so no monopoly could possibly have resulted. Why, a hundred similar concessions could be given. It beats me where any monopoly would come in. As regards concessions for the facilities applied for take the case of a railroad. I ask you, Would any one with money behind him think of putting capital into a railroad there without material Government help in a new, unsettled and undeveloped country? Nobody would even suggest such a thing. If a railroad needs it, an oil enterprise like ours certainly does."

American dispatches to the London newspapers this morning dwell on the satisfaction with which the news of Lord Cowdray's abandonment of the Colombian oil concession was received in the United States. A New York dispatch to The Daily Mail says:

"It is generally assumed that American oil interests will now seize the opportunity, since Lord Cowdray has resigned."

The Daily Mail's dispatch goes on to quote THE NEW YORK TIMES Washington statement that "officials of the State Department insist that the United States Government has left Colombia free to grant concessions to the Pearson syndicate or to a United States company which is also seeking to obtain a share of the natural resources of the country."

In a lengthy dispatch the Washington correspondent of The London Times says:

"Lord Murray's retreat will strengthen American faith in the two latest corollaries upon which the Monroe Doctrine has been saddled." The correspondent points out these reasons why the Murray contract was opposed by the United States. First as possibly supplying a foreign country with military conveniences within striking distance of the Panama Canal, then raising the bogey of British exploitation of the Atrato route."

"Then," continues the dispatch, "came Wilson's speech at Mobile with its depreciation of concessions in general, and in particular of undue extra American financial influence with the Latin-American Governments. Although the Pearson contract in effect was comparatively modest, it had been consistently depicted as a monopoly. It had begun to be felt that by the success or failure of that contract the newest Latin-American aspirations of the United States might stand or fall.

Hence it is quite possible that Colombian political opposition would have wrecked the contract unaided, and it is just possible that it may be renewed when the atmosphere is clearer there. This morning there is much congratulatory comment upon the effectiveness of American diplomacy, but there is scant reference to the problems, domestic and international, with which Washington is burdened. Is it, for instance, to oppose Latin-American concessions to American companies as much as those which are competing with Pearson in Colombia and elsewhere? If so, how is Latin-America to be developed? But the difficulties and possibilities of this new doctrine of Pan-American exclusiveness and morality are patent.

"There is another point about the Latin-American oil imbroglio that demands immediate attention. There is no sign that the renunciation of their Colombian ambitions will help the Pearsons in Mexico. It is growing clear that certain agencies are determined to exploit to the nth degree American prejudice against Lord Cowdray, and consequently American suspicions of the British attitude toward Huerta."

The London Times correspondent then quotes THE NEW YORK TIMES's dispatch from Mexico yesterday morning as a "typical dispatch," and, following up the assertion that if the rebels injure the oil properties at Vera Cruz it will be due to their belief that Lord Cowdray is still helping Huerta financially and otherwise, concludes:

"Whether this be true or not, it is suggestive that so far as I can gather the chief manufacturers of such anti-British sentiment as exists in the United States are agents of the revolutionaries, and that their most active representative here is a well-known American lawyer, who in the last Mexican Administration was on the closest possible terms both with Madero and the most important American oil interests.

"British observers should, in fact, scrutinize with all possible care all the news touching Anglo-American relations, and, above all, the stories that pretend that the understanding between Washington and Downing Street is anything except 'satisfactory.'"

pany is a corporation engaged in the manufacture and sale of asphalt, and their entire interest in the matter is a selfish, personal interest with the idea of selling their product to the State of New York, and their entire charges should be scrutinized from this viewpoint.

"It is unfortunate that in these charges they have seen fit to attack the reputation of the Board of Advisory Engineers, who have been faithfully working for the State for the past six months in an attempt to try and place this department upon an efficient basis, to advise me in regard to the various types of roads to be built, and in the preparation of specifications for new construction.

"Messrs. Parker, Diehl, and Washington are men of reputation in their communities, and I know that they have tried to the best of their ability to give proper advice our department, and I think their report as to methods of efficiency and economy and dealing generally with the future of the department is a document which will be used the world over in connection with future highway organizations and in construction work.

"I desire to resent at the outset any reflections upon their character, the methods or manner of their appointment, or the methods under which they worked, as everything has been done in the open from the commencement of their investigations, and public hearings have been had upon all important matters considered by them.

Forced to Obey the Law.

"The real contention in the Warner-Quinlan charges is to the effect that I compelled the contractors of the State to live up to the written contracts and specifications then in existence, which were awarded before I was made Commissioner, and would not permit the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company to substitute for use upon State highways a material not complying with the specifications.

"Soon after I assumed office on the first of May, 1913, the fact was brought to my attention that there were a number of contracts which were legal and valid, and which required a natural solid asphalt to be furnished under them, and I learned at the time that there were two classes of asphalt that could be furnished, one by the Barber Asphalt Company, which was procured at Bermudez, Venezuela, and one by the Warner-Quinlan Company which was procured from land asphalt at Trinidad.

"Our records show that in 1910 the Warner-Quinlan Company furnished Trinidad asphalt to the amount of 22,728 gallons, in 1912 130,774 gallons, and in 1913 141,273 gallons, which was sold to contractors, and which could and was properly used under the specifications calling for a natural solid asphalt.

"Within a few years there were discovered in Mexico deposits of oil containing a heavy asphaltic base, and this oil was brought into the country and manufactured into asphalt by a number of different concerns, including the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company. Very soon after I entered upon the discharge of the duties of my office I learned from different sources that the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company were furnishing asphalt manufactured from Mexican oil which they were supplying to contractors of the State, which, as I was informed, did not comply with the requirements of certain contracts, and an investigation was had as to the reasons why this was being permitted.

Sought Old Resolution.

"The claim was then made by the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company that a resolution had been passed by the old Highway Commission on June 18, 1912, permitting their company alone to furnish an asphalt product made from oil brought from the Mexican fields, in the place of natural asphalt called for in the specifications, but an investigation of the records of this department disclosed that no such resolution had ever been passed, and was not upon our records.

"This company contended that this resolution affected only themselves, and did not claim that it permitted any other of the manufacturers of Mexican oil to furnish their product, and it passed, was clearly a special favor granted to the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, which was not granted to their competitors.

"I immediately took this matter up with the Board of Advisory Engineers and the other engineers connected with the department, and the matter was threshed out by repeated conferences with the different people interested, and it became apparent that the only solution of the difficulty, as long as there were no records in my office to show any such resolution had been passed and no supplemental agreement had been signed or filed, was to compel the performance of contracts according to specifications and the law.

"I believe if I had acted otherwise in the matter and had continued to permit the wholesale disregard of these particular specifications, that I would have been justly subjected to great criticism.

"The investigation also disclosed that the permitting of the use of asphalt manufactured from Mexican oil was a great financial benefit to the companies; that they were able to furnish it at a cheaper cost than they could have furnished the natural asphalt, and that the State was absolutely deriving no benefit whatever for the substitution of this material.

"That their main contention was that their article was 'just as good,' and that, therefore, we should permit it to be used.

The Cooperstown Meeting.

"The statements that on June 18, 1913, a conference took place in my office, at which Mr. Hennessy was present, and also James K. McGuire, and that following thereafter on July 5, a meeting was held at Cooperstown, N. Y., attended by Gov. Sulzer, George McGuire, and myself, are absolutely without foundation. There was no such conference in my office, and I was never in Cooperstown but once in my life—several years ago when I was a member of the Public Service Commission. On July 4, 5 [illegible] my home in Watertown, [illegible] at my home, Sunday afternoon, July 6, reaching Albany late that evening.

"There was no communication sent by Mr. Hennessy from Cooperstown on July 5, and no telegrams or communications were sent out of this office in relation to Barber Asphalt or Warner-Quinlan Asphalt on that date by Mr. Fuller or any one else.

"At the several conferences with the engineers before making my decision the representatives of practically all the asphalt interests of the United States were represented, either personally, by their attorneys, or by counsel, and no one was granted any favors at the hands of the department, nor was any one discriminated against in any way. The matter was decided entirely upon its merits and in accordance with the provisions of the highway law.

"The allegations as to the appointment of the Board of Advisory Engineers is absurd. They were all appointed by me.

"The allegation that I interpreted the specifications of the department so as to compel contractors to use asphalt produced entirely by the Barber Asphalt Company, thus creating a monopoly for that company, is false.

"A large number of the contracts then in existence called for residuum asphalt, and since July 8, 1913, the records of this department show that the following companies have furnished material to the State:

	Gallons.
Standard Oil Company	1,821,260
Sun Company	508,009
Beverly & Sons	76,208
Johns-Manville Company	55,284
Warner-Quinlan Company	452,470
Barber Asphalt Paving Company	1,940,570

Defends Specifications.

Mr. Carlisle scouted the charge that the specifications were drawn to permit a monopoly. In a long explanation of how these specifications were prepared, he went into minute details, asserting that all the asphalt interests had been fully heard and that the best expert advice obtainable had sanctioned the specifications. Then he added:

"I believe the specifications, when finally promulgated, will be recognized throughout the country as the best yet devised, and which Highway Departments can follow with safety and advantage in building modern types of roads.

Entirely Reorganized.

"I desire to emphatically deny that there has been any condition of chaos in our department. The Department has been practically reorganized from the top down, and the results in road building and maintenance in this State this year speak for themselves.

"We have completed a greater number of miles of roads than were ever constructed during any one construction year, have repaired hundreds of miles of roads, and are now in a position to take care of the awarding of the contracts for next year.

"The most serious problem confronting us is unfair criticism. This department, in order to render the services to the State which is expected of it, must have the confidence of the people of the State. We have striven night and day to justify the confidence of the people in the work of our department, and I am satisfied that the fair-minded people of the State realize that every effort has been made and every step taken to give to them an efficient, honest, and economical administration, taking into consideration the interests of the State, and not of any selfish group of men who desire to make money out of the State for their own personal ends."

HENNESSY DENIES IT, TOO.

Demands That Glynn Investigate the Charges to the Bottom.

John A. Hennessy, when advised yesterday of the accusations made by the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company through its counsel, Henry A. Rubino, denied the accusations, and said that he regretted that he could not hold Mr. Rubino responsible for them. He called upon Gov. Glynn, as the man who had made the charges public, to "go all the way" and to investigate the charges to the bottom. It was Mr. Rubino who personally submitted the charges to Gov. Glynn last week.

It is understood that Mr. Hennessy has in his possession several documents and receipts by which he can show that he was not in Albany on July 5. He said yesterday that he was in Cooperstown on an inspection trip during a part of the morning of July 5. Hotel registers, vouchers, and postal cards which he sent to his family, it was intimated, would show that he could not have been in Albany on July 5. It was on this day, according to the Rubino charges, that the asphalt conference was held in Cooperstown by Gov. Sulzer, Commissioner Carlisle, and George H. McGuire. Mr. Hennessy, it is alleged, was in the office of the Highway Department with James K. McGuire when a long distance call was put through from the conferees in Cooperstown to the Highway Department. The telegrams were sent out to the contractors, it is alleged, within an hour after this telephone conversation.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Hennessy in his formal statement given out at the Press Club yesterday afternoon, "that what the Governor of New York should have done was to send these charges to the District Attorney of Albany County, where the crime, if any, was committed, and have him begin proceedings there either before a Grand Jury or publicly, to show what is in the case. Then Mr. Rubino and those associated with him would have to testify under oath. As I see it now, Rubino cannot be held for libel or slander.

"The Governor is the man who made these things public, and the Governor should now go all the way so that the public will learn eventually who the crooks are behind Rubino.

"The merest examination by Rubino or by a clerk in his office would have shown that there was no such conference; would have shown where I was on July 4 and July 5; would have shown where Carlisle was on July 4 and July 5, and would have shown the whole thing to be false.

"If the Bar Association thinks it worth while to investigate Rubino I'll be delighted to present a case against him.

"I never have talked to Jim McGuire since Carlisle has been Commissioner. I never talked to him before that except on two occasions, one at the convention which nominated Van Wyck for Governor about twelve years ago, and again last April or March, when I greeted him with his brother George in Lancaster Street, Albany."

nouncing him. Acknowledging Lord Haldane's speech, he said:

"The American nation is not one which is afraid to follow its bent to the utmost length. The Lord Chancellor has spoken of doing what is righteous without regard to consequences. There are no consequences."

Prof. A. B. Alexander, Chairman of the American delegation to the International Conference on Safety at Sea, proposed "Thanksgiving Day."

Lord Kintore and Sir Claude M. MacDonald responded to the toast "Our Guests." Lord Kintore spoke of the coming celebration of the centenary of peace between the two nations. He said he hoped it would eventually be followed by the celebration of the millentum of peace, but those arranging the centenary celebration intended that none which might follow would be more noteworthy.

Sir Claude MacDonald, who was enthusiastically greeted, said so much had been spoken about the landing of the Pilgrims on Plymouth Rock that he understood some Americans were disposed to wish that Plymouth Rock had landed on the Pilgrims instead. He gave interesting reminiscences of the Boxers' siege of Peking, at which time he was British Minister there, and said that next to the honors conferred upon him by his sovereign the proudest moment of his life was when he was placed in command by the American Minister of the American contingent there, and fought shoulder to shoulder with them.

The guests included the staffs of the American Embassy and Consulate, the American delegates to the Life Saving Conference, Lord Charnwood, the Earl of Denbigh, Dr. Joseph Hertz, chief rabbi of Great Britain; Isaac N. Seligman, Sir Henry Primrose, Chairman of the Pacific Cable Board, and Sir Rider Haggard.

the Tombs in the custody of United States Marshal Henkel.

His friends were not allowed to communicate with the ex-President, and it was said that it would be a day or so at least before his counsel could apply to a Judge of the Federal District Court for a writ of habeas corpus as a step toward obtaining his release on bail.

Charges Made in Complaint.

Gen. Zelaya passed Wednesday night in the Greenwich Street Police Station. He was arraigned before Commissioner Shields by Assistant District Attorney Roger Wood on a provisional complaint which formed the basis for the extradition warrant. This said in part:

Roger B. Wood, Assistant United States Attorney, being duly sworn, alleges, complains, and charges on information and belief that he has been informed by telegraph through the diplomatic channel, that a warrant has been issued by competent authority for the arrest of a fugitive criminal charged with a crime enumerated in the treaty between the Republic of Nicaragua and the United States of America concluded March 1, 1905, to wit: the crime of murder and other crimes, and that deponent has been assured from the same source that a requisition for the surrender of such criminal is about to be made accompanied by such warrant and duly authenticated depositions or copies thereof in support of the charge.

That at a time heretofore, one Jose Santos Zelaya was a resident of the Republic of Nicaragua.

That at a time heretofore, the same Jose Santos Zelaya, in the said Republic of Nicaragua, did unlawfully commit the crime of murder and other crimes. Deponent further says that the place wherein the Republic of Nicaragua and on what day the said crime of murder and other crimes were committed, he has no means of knowing, and, therefore, cannot here set forth with greater particularity.

That the said Jose Santos Zelaya is a fugitive from justice of the Republic of Nicaragua, and is now within the territory of the United States, to wit, the Southern District of New York.

That the sources of information and grounds of belief of deponent are derived from telegraphic instructions just received by deponent from the Hon. James C. McReynolds, Attorney General of the United States of America.

Wherefore, said complainant prays that a warrant may issue for the apprehension of the said Jose Santos Zelaya, and that he may be brought before the said Commissioner to the end that upon the production of evidence to sustain the charge, he may be held for extradition to the Republic of Nicaragua, in accordance with the treaty and the statutes in such case made and provided.

William M. Offley, Division Superintendent of the Department of Justice, brought Gen. Zelaya to the Federal Building, and on the way there the prisoner said little to say about his case. He expressed the opinion that the charges did not come under the extradition treaty; that they grew out of politics, and that they were made by his enemies in Nicaragua.

When Gen. Zelaya, building Gen. Zelaya, was held for an hour in the office of Marshal Henkel before he was arraigned. He consulted then with his counsel, Edwin F. Johnson of the firm of Johnson & Galstan of 49 Wall Street. The General speaks English imperfectly, so when he was brought before Commissioner Shields, Mr. Johnson interpreted for him. The proceedings were brief. The Commissioner told the ex-President that he had been arrested on a charge of murder and informed him of his constitutional rights. The prisoner was held then pending the arrival of the formal extradition papers from Washington, and his examination was set down tentatively for Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Not Admitted to Bail.

The question of bail then came up. Assistant District Attorney Wood pointed out that it was impossible to release a prisoner, held on an extradition charge, in bail, and so Commissioner Shields ordered Marshal Henkel to take the ex-President to the Tombs. There as a Federal prisoner he is under the control of the Marshal and not of the regular prison authorities. Marshal Henkel gave strict orders that no one was to be permitted to see or to communicate with the ex-President without an order from him, and it was said that he was not disposed to grant such permits to any one but Gen. Zelaya's counsel or his sons.

Throughout his arraignment and removal to the Tombs Gen. Zelaya seemed to be self-possessed. He maintained a quiet dignity and submitted readily to the orders of the court officials.

Mr. Johnson was unwilling to discuss the case of his client yesterday. When he was asked about the form of the complaint and the fact that it did not specify the names of those killed and the place and date of the murders with which Gen. Zelaya was charged, he said:

"The warrant conformed with the terms of the law."

"Do you know the identity of the persons whose deaths are attributed to Zelaya?" he was asked.

"Not fully," he replied. "I expect, however, that the matter will be cleared up in a few days."

Mr. Johnson would not tell last night the steps he intended to take to obtain the release of his client. But he pointed out that a writ of habeas corpus had been sued out in similar cases before. He was not likely, he said, to apply for such a writ to-day, but might do so to-morrow.

It was said at the Federal Building yesterday that although Commissioner Shields was not empowered to accept bail for a prisoner held under the circumstances surrounding the case of Gen. Zelaya, a District Judge might release him under proper security. It is expected that when a hearing on the writ of habeas corpus is granted Mr. Johnson will make a hard fight to obtain the release of his client on bail while the court is considering Nicaragua's application to have him returned to that country.

It was learned yesterday that Washington had not issued any instructions to have Gen. Zelaya watched while he stayed here until word was sent to Assistant District Attorney Wood on Monday to arrest him. The authorities are anxious to learn how he obtained the advance information that his arrest was desired, which made it possible for him to go into hiding.

Mr. Offley, ever since the ex-President arrived in this city, had kept track of him, but he explained yesterday that this was solely because experience had taught him that Central American ex-Presidents were landed by Western sooner or later when they visited this country. So Mr. Offley knew that Zelaya was a guest at the Waldorf, and when he learned that he had departed from that hotel, he told his men to discover where he had gone. When Mr. Wood informed him that Washington had sent orders for Zelaya's arrest, Mr. Offley thought he could pick him up at once in the Hotel Hargrave.

When he went there he found that Gen. Zelaya had departed. As far as he could learn, he said, the ex-President had walked out of the hotel between 6 o'clock and midnight on Sunday, and had not returned. Then Mr. Offley ordered men experienced in tracing Central American refugees to watch for clues. These seemed to lead to Mr. Valentine's apartment, and Mr. Offley became sure that Gen. Zelaya was there. None of the hallboys in the large apartment house would admit that they had seen or heard of Zelaya, though, and, when Mr. Offley demanded the surrender of the fugitive from Mr. Valentine, he had no positive assurance that the ex-President was in the apartment.

Zelaya's friends say that they have no fear of the murder charges if, as reports from Washington assert, they are founded on the deaths of Lieut. Pineda and Dr. Dominguez. Pineda, they said last night, was killed as a result of a scandal in which he was involved, and Toribio was killed by the police. Mrs. C. Alfonso Zelaya, wife of the ex-President's son, said it would be just as sensible to hold against the General the death of some man executed in his term as President of Nicaragua as it would be to accuse the Governor of this State of murder for the execution of a murderer convicted here.

Young Mr. Banks Drops In on Brother for Thanksgiving Dinner.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Nov. 27.—William Banks, a civil war veteran, who is only 87 years of age, and resides at Mount Kisco, N. Y., with his married daughter, Mrs. Cronk, decided that he wanted to eat turkey with his brother Norman and his sister, Mrs. Jerome Reynolds, who reside at Banksville, in this town.

Fearing his daughter might object, he arose at 6 o'clock this morning and started to walk to Banksville, fifteen miles away. He took a circuitous route to avoid meeting any one who might tell on him. At half past 10 he reached his destination. In the meantime an alarm had been sent broadcast by Mrs. Cronk, who was immensely relieved when a telephone message advised her that her father was safe.

"I know I'll be stiff all Winter," said the old gentleman. "I'm kind of sorry for worrying my girl, and if I don't get any sympathy I won't complain."

The combined ages of the two brothers and the sister total 240 years.

ASKS FOR TWO BATTLESHIPS

Yet Daniels's Naval Estimates Are $5,000,000 Below Last Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Navy estimates which Secretary Daniels has sent to the House Appropriations Committee ask Congress to vote $145,000,000 for the naval establishment for the next fiscal year. His estimate is $5,000,000 below last year, and yet he proposed the building of two battleships at $15,000,000 each, eight torpedo boat destroyers, and three submarines. Many of the details of the estimates are along the lines of the last naval appropriation bill. The House Naval Affairs Committee contains large navy and small navy advocates. A one-battleship programme was successful last session.

The Naval Affairs Committee will meet Tuesday to report the Naval Militia Pay bill and the bill for a council of national defense. Both bills were approved by the Naval Committee in the last Congress. Chairman Padgett will urge their passage in the House during the coming session.

The proposed Council of National Defense would be an advisory body in which the Secretaries of State, War, and Navy, Chairmen of Military and Naval Affairs of the houses of Congress, the Chief of Staff of the army, and certain high officers of the navy would be members. Its functions would be to report to Congress on legislation for military defense.

The Militia Pay bill is designed to put the naval militia on the same basis of relation to the navy as the National Guard occupies to the army. It proposes an elaboration of the present naval militia by which the Federal Government would lend aid to the States by appropriations, loaning small ships and detailing naval officers.

PRESIDENT AT MASS HEARS PEACE PLEA

Administration Officials and Diplomats Join in Annual Thanksgiving Service.

MEXICO IN ALL MINDS

Speakers at the Mass and at a Luncheon Discuss the Value of Pan-American Amity.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Peace among the nations of the Western Hemisphere was the keynote of the sermon at the annual Pan-American Thanksgiving mass celebrated to-day at St. Patrick's Church, and the luncheon that followed at the rectory. It was attended by President Wilson, Mrs. Wilson, and the Misses Wilson, the Chief Justice of the United States and Mrs. White, Associate Justice and Mrs. McKenna, Secretary Bryan, and other members of the Cabinet and their wives, the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Clark, ex-Speaker Cannon and Miss Cannon, Admiral and Mrs. Dewey, a host of Senators, Representatives, and other public men, most of them accompanied by their families, and the Latin-American Diplomatic Corps.

At the luncheon, where a large company sat down as the guests of the Right Rev. Mgr. Russell, rector of St. Patrick's, the peace note that had been sounded in the sermon of the mass was emphasized in speeches by Secretary Bryan and others.

The annual Pan-American Thanksgiving mass has become a notable occasion in Washington, and it is customary for the President and most of the high officers of the Government to attend.

To the left of the altar sat his Eminence James Cardinal Gibbons, and beside him the Right Rev. Charles W. Currier, the recently appointed Bishop of Matanzas, Cuba.

The church was elaborately decorated with American and Pan-American flags and an orchestra and chorus rendered the musical programme. A dove of peace holding together in its beak the flag of the United States and that of the Pan-American Union symbolized the peaceful union between the nations of the Western Hemisphere, for which prayers were offered.

In view of the relations between two of the American republics, the United States and Mexico, the sermon of Bishop Currier had a deep significance to those present. He said, in part:

"There are those who regard war as a necessary evil, as the pruning knife, the surgeon's scalpel, the purifying storm. They tell us that it has been a great factor in the work of civilization, that it has removed noxious elements from society by overthrowing despotism, promoting liberty, and freeing the people from the yoke of tyranny. They point to the United States and to the Spanish-American republics as object lessons. Admitting that certain good results have come to man through the instrumentality of war, we nevertheless proceed fearlessly to analyze this terrible remedy, if remedy it be, and its relations to civilization and to the family.

"War is the natural enemy of order, and, therefore, of that which is good, beautiful, and true.

"It impedes the pursuit of knowledge by taking away from nations that tranquillity of mind so necessary for this object and by the ruthless destruction of the instruments of knowledge, such as educational institutions and libraries. It is the enemy of the beautiful. If there is any beauty in war it is accidental, hollow, and fictitious, for in reality of war in itself is the deadly enemy of the fine arts by its wanton destruction of the costliest monuments. If there is beauty in war it is the transcendental beauty that exists in the greatest of evils, even in death, a beauty that rises above a surface beneath which lie horrors inexpressible.

"To form an acquaintance with those horrors, pass beyond the glitter of the moment, the martial music, the brilliant uniforms, the flying banners. Contemplate the sickening sight of the battlefield, with its carnage, its blood, its grim death, its misery upon which only vultures feed. Think of the homes made desolate, of hearts that are bleeding, of wounds that will never be healed. Tell me, after this, can you still love war? Shall we not rather say to the brave men and women who strive to impede it: 'Continue on the path you have chosen; the blessing of Heaven will attend your efforts and the Christ of the Andes shall be no empty symbol.'"

Mgr. Russell presided at the luncheon. Around him sat Cardinal Gibbons, Chief Justice White, Justice McKenna, Secretary Bryan, Attorney General McReynolds, Postmaster General Burleson, Secretary Daniels, Secretary Lane, Secretary Houston, Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President; Ambassador De Gama of Brazil, the Ministers of the Latin-American Republics, John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Bureau; ex-Postmaster General Wynne, Surgeon Blue, Brig. Gen. McIntyre, Chief Judge Knapp of the Commerce Court and many others prominent in Washington.

In toasting Secretary Bryan, Mgr. Russell said:

"When we see the representatives of 167,000,000 people join together here in prayer, and afterward in amiable, cheerful communion around this table, may we not rightly hope for some results in peace, results that will warrant a truer and broader significance to Thanksgiving Day?"

Mr. Bryan made a response, in which the peace note was prominent. He spoke of how deeply he had been impressed by Bishop Currier's sermon. Toasts were responded to also by Cardinal Gibbons, Ambassador De Gama, and John Barrett.

ATTACKS WILSON IN PULPIT.

Rev. Dr. Mackay Says President Should Have Been in Own Church.

The Rev. Dr. John R. Mackay, pastor of the North Presbyterian Church, in 155th Street, between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway, in his Thanksgiving sermon yesterday bitterly attacked President Wilson for attending high mass in Washington instead of going to the service in his own Presbyterian church. The preacher said he personally felt that the action of the President at this time was an outrage.

Dr. Mackay's sermon was preached in the Washington Heights Baptist Church at Convent Avenue and 145th Street to combined congregations, whose members filled every pew. It was the union service of five churches—the Washington Heights Baptist, the St. Nicholas Avenue Presbyterian, the Hamilton Orange Reformed, the Washington Heights Methodist, and the North Presbyterian, which is one of the largest Protestant churches in the city, with 1,300 communicants.

"I had hoped," said Dr. Mackay, "to express as another cause for thanksgiving that our President was at this hour worshipping like us in his own place of worship, but the morning newspapers inform us that he has decided to attend high mass and give as his explanation that President Roosevelt and President Taft having done so, the precedent has been established and he would not like to break it.

"This explanation does not explain. The observance of precedent has formed no part in President Wilson's career. No man more than he has broken through every kind of precedent both in the White House and in Congress. To know there was a precedent for anything seems to him an invitation to break it, and now he pleads its sacredness. This is the President, and not the man that speaks.

"It suits him to go and he goes and at such a time as this I personally feel that this is an outrage when done by a Protestant Christian; and further, we have just listened to the reading of the President's own proclamation in which he asks us to assemble in our own places of worship. Why should he exempt himself? He has a church of his own; a pew of his own; a place where he could worship according to his instincts and the belief of his own heart.

"Why, then, should not he worship there? It pains me to speak thus about our President, but he has gone out of his way and carried himself in a way inconsistent with the general trend of his life to needlessly cause grief to many who hitherto have felt pride in his steadfast loyalty to convictions and his determination to be President of all the people."

Dr. Mackay said last night that his attack on the President was not to be construed as an attack on the Roman Catholic Church, of which he had no criticism to make. He said he felt that President Wilson should have attended his own church, because he not only injured the Presbyterian Church to which he belongs, but also many other Protestant denominations. Dr. Mackay also said that several protests had been made to President Wilson by Protestant ministers of Washington and Brooklyn.

Dr. Mackay's sermon was entitled "God's Past Mercies: a Plea for Present Preservation." Among other things he said to be thankful for were the end of the Balkan war, the success of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations' campaign, and the defeat of Tammany.

"Would that it had been destroyed," he said of Tammany. Then he added that "Barnesism" would have been just as bad.

He said the people are beginning to realize their duty and power and that New York ought to be grateful for Great Britain's action regarding the recent opium situation in India, which he said would benefit the whole world.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Nov. 27.—John B. Grover, a widower, 83 years old, and Mrs. Mary E. Boyd, aged 73 years, were married this evening at the home of the bride's son, Harry Boyd, by the Rev. Dewitt C. R. man of Red Bank, aged 70, and Washington F. Chandler of Bayonne, aged 68, witnessed the ceremony, the combined ages of the six mentioned being 451 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover did not go away on a wedding trip, but have started housekeeping in the bridegroom's house in Irving Place.

Mr. Grover's first wife died three years ago. The couple have been lifelong friends.

BOY HIT BY CAR, DYING.

Chauffeur Surrenders Himself—Victim Ran in Front of Auto.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Santo Confalona, a five-year-old boy of 32 Brookfield Street, is dying in the White Plains Hospital and John W. Smith, a chauffeur, has surrendered himself to the police, following an auto accident here this morning, in which Smith's car ran down and fractured the boy's skull.

Smith is employed by Joseph Uhlman of 1 Walworth Avenue, and he drove his car through Brookfield Street this morning as the boy and his playmates rushed out into the street. Smith was traveling at moderate speed, but the child flashed in front of him so suddenly that he had not time to stop the machine before it had passed over the little fellow's body.

'STOLEN' BOY TRAMP'S CHUM

Wealthy Man's Son Admits He Ran Away with "Saratoga Slim."

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 27.—A supposed kidnapping which stirred Boston more than a year ago was cleared up to-day when Israel Gordon, fourteen years old, son of Louis Gordon, a wealthy jeweler, of Dorchester, Mass., confessed his identity to the police here. He admitted that he had run away from home on May 16, 1912, with a tramp know as "Saratoga Slim." Gordon's father is on the way to Philadelphia to take him back home.

The boy said he wrote a note to his father after he left home. At the dictation of "Saratoga Slim," he said, he told his father that he had been kidnapped and asked him to deposit $50 in a certain place in Barnstable, Mass., as a ransom.

Young Gordon has been all over the West with the tramp.

CURB FOR BUILDING TRADES.

Federation of Labor Would Rebuke the New York City Unions.

SEATTLE, Nov. 27.—The building trades department of the American Federation of Labor to-day decided that a building trades council, representative of the American Federation of Labor and its policies, should be established in New York City as a rebuke to the various so-called central bodies which grant recognition to dual and seceding unions.

John T. Taggart of the International Union of Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers, opposed the move, saying his union would not be bound by the orders of the proposed council. W. J. McSorley, a New York delegate, said that Taggart was without authority to speak for the New York lathers.

I. W. W. MEN FORCED OUT.

International Hotel Workers' Union Bars Them from Membership.

The International Hotel Workers' Union, an independent organization, has by an overwhelming vote, decided not to allow any member of the I. W. W. to remain in its ranks. The fight against the I. W. W. was precipitated by the I. W. W. leaders trying to get control of the organization. Three weeks ago I. W. W. men joined it in some numbers. Most of them later were forced out, and the four or five who held on as a leaven will now be expelled if they refuse to resign at once.

Edward Blochlinger, general organizer of the International Hotel Workers' Union, who led the fight against the I. W. W., has gone to Chicago to organize a local of the union there. The union will not affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, but will remain independent.

DR. JOHN McALLISTER ILL.

It Is Feared Lockjaw May Result from Nail Wound in His Foot.

The condition of Dr. John McAllister of New York, who is at his country home in Hartsdale suffering from a wound received when he stepped on a nail, is considered serious. It was reported in that village yesterday that lockjaw had developed. Members of the doctor's family say that while there is no sign of tetanus as yet, the doctor nevertheless is a very sick man and suffers much pain.

About a year ago Dr. McAllister cut himself while performing a surgical operation. Blood poisoning resulted, and it was necessary to amputate a part of one of his hands.

German Nurses Graduated.

The twenty-fifth anniversary and the graduating exercises of the German Hospital Training School for Nurses were celebrated yesterday in the German Hospital Building, at Seventy-sixth Street and Park Avenue. Twenty-three women graduated after a three-year course. Adolph Kutroff, the President, distributed the diplomas and Dr. Gustave Seeligman, a member of the Medical Board, administered the Hippocratic oath. Miss Evelyn Opitz, '13, made the valedictory address and Dr. Abraham Jacobi addressed the graduates.

J. K. M'GUIRE CALLS CHARGE AN INCIDENT

Ex-Mayor of Syracuse Attributes Indictment to Fight Between Asphalt Companies.

MAY NET MORE "BAGMEN"

Contractors Found by Hennessy Likely to Involve New Men in the Graft Inquiry.

To Have an Effective Answer.

By Cable to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 27.—I am sailing for home to-morrow. My indictment is an incident of the fight between the asphalt companies. I will answer effectively.

Please agitate for reduced cable rates. JAMES K. McGUIRE.

A warrant is awaiting the arrival of James K. McGuire, ex-Mayor of Syracuse, indicted by the Grand Jury on a charge of soliciting a campaign contribution from a corporation. McGuire, as appears from the special cable message published above, will fight the case. His reference to an agitation for a reduction of the cable rate between this country and Porto Rico is due to the many messages he has received from his friends since he has been in Porto Rico, to which he has had to send replies.

McGuire, it is expected, will be prepared to give bail at once when he is arraigned on the charge, which is a misdemeanor.

District Attorney Whitman's John Doe investigation into campaign and road graft will be resumed before Chief Magistrate McAdoo on Monday afternoon, and at that time it is expected that two up-State road contractors will be placed on the stand to tell of the activities of two Tammany "bagmen," who before this have not been involved directly in the graft inquiry. These two contractors are the men whose so-called confessions, according to John A. Hennessy, were obtained on Wednesday.

Mr. Hennessy, when seen yesterday, refused to reveal the names of the newly accused bagmen or the accusing contractors. Mr. Hennessy had expected to see Mr. Whitman yesterday, and was prepared to have the two contractors ready to appear before Mr. Whitman to-day. When he learned that Mr. Whitman would not return from his Washington trip until Monday, he telegraphed the contractors to be on hand early on Monday.

If the new Hennessy information is as important as Mr. Hennessy considers it, Mr. Whitman probably will call the two contractors before the Grand Jury on Monday morning and then allow them to testify in public in the afternoon. Mr. Hennessy said that he fully expected the indictment in this county of two more "bagmen" within a week.

The "bagmen," he said, were "bigger" than Everett P. Fowler and more prominent. One of them, he said, was out of the State, but the other, he said, was within Mr. Whitman's reach. Both, he said, were prominent in Tammany Hall.

Bagmen's Bold Methods.

It is understood that in the case of the two new bagmen there was a much bolder method of getting campaign contributions from contractors than was practiced by Fowler.

One of the contractors, it is understood, will testify that he was "held-up" for a contribution and that he agreed to give $300. The bagman in this case, it was said, ridiculed the contractor and demanded $1,000 as a contribution. A quarrel ensued, it was said, the contractor vowing that he never would pay the money.

"All right, go your own way," the bagman, it is said, remarked, "but if you don't pay that $1,000 not an inch of your road will be passed by the Inspectors, and you'll wait a lifetime for your money."

After trying in vain to have his work passed by Inspectors and after waiting long for payments on his completed work, it is said, the contractor in this case paid the $1,000 to the "bagman." He will bring his check, cashed in New York City, with him, it is understood.

The second contractor, it is understood, was threatened with indictment in an up-State county on a charge growing out of some road work. Mr. Hennessy, it was said, pleaded for him and obtained from him a confession regarding another "hold-up" by another Tammany "bagman." This man, it is understood, gave $300 after he had been threatened.

Whitman Has Highway Reports.

Important documents from the Highway Department, including the reports of hundreds of local Inspectors on State roads, are now in the possession of the District Attorney, W. H. L. Edwards, the lawyer who assisted the District Attorney in the preparation of the Carnegie Trust Company cases, has been engaged to examine these documents thoroughly.

Assistant District Attorneys Clark and Embree and Mr. Edwards were busy at the Bar Association last night inspecting these documents. Arrangements for an organized investigation were made at the Bar Association conference. The work was divided, and from now on each of the three assistants to Mr. Whitman will have a definite programme to follow.

"How long will the investigation last?" Mr. Clark was asked.

"Counting trials and everything else," replied Mr. Clark, "six months would seem to be a conservative estimate just at present."

Mr. Whitman, of course, will continue to give the graft investigation his personal attention. Mr. Clark, Mr. Embree, and Mrs. Edwards, it is understood, will follow wherever the graft trail leads in up-State counties. There will be no attempt to investigate crimes which obviously were committed in other counties, but wherever the jurisdiction is co-ordinate with this county Mr. Whitman will assume the responsibility of prosecuting.

CALLS ALBANY CONTRACTORS.

Subpoenas Demand Their Appearance Next Week.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 27.—Subpoenas have been served upon a number of Albany contractors to appear before Chief Magistrate McAdoo in the graft inquiry next week. Those subpoenaed are Mulderry Brothers, M. F. Dollard, John E. Consalus, and representatives of the Shaughnessy Construction Company and the Kennedy Construction Company.

P. W. Mulderry of Mulderry Brothers said to-night that he had no idea why he had been summoned to appear. He said that he had built parts of several State roads.

GRAY TO PUSH SUIT.

Broker Asserts That Court Proceedings Have Not Been Dropped.

John Boyd Gray, a member of the brokerage house of Fuller & Gray, which figured in the Sulzer impeachment proceedings, called reporters to the offices of his lawyer, H. Randolph Guggenheimer, 60 Wall Street, last night, to object to publications in Thursday morning newspapers that divorce proceedings pending between himself and his wife, Mrs. Jane Sutton Gray, had been dropped.

Mr. Gray said that he did not intend to abandon his suit for divorce against his wife, and added that in view of certain serious allegations on her part against him that he would not consent to allow her to drop her charges until they had been passed upon by a court.

The Grays first were married in 1904. Mrs. Gray got a Reno divorce in 1911 and remarried Gray in Jersey City in 1912. Attorney Guggenheimer displayed copies of legal papers which he said had been filed in the suits between the Grays which bore out Gray's assertion that the first of the present divorce actions was instituted by Mrs. Gray.

MET JOE MILLER'S GHOST.

Shade of Ancient Humorist Buttonholed Purser of the Philadelphia.

J. D. Irvine, purser of the American liner Philadelphia, which will sail today for Southampton with 100 cabin and 900 steerage passengers and mails, was moved by the spirit of the holiday last night to spin this yarn:

"About 6 o'clock," said the purser, "I was passing Twenty-eighth Street and Broadway, when a well-dressed man about 30 years old, who wore a silk hat and seemed to be sober, stopped me and said:

"'Pardon me, Sir; but have you a slice of dry toast in your pocket?'

"I was puzzled by the request, but I explained to him gently that I did not carry dry toast in my pockets as a rule.

"'Well, I'm sorry for that,' my questioner replied, 'because, between you and me, I am a poached egg, and I want to lie down.'

"Before I recovered from my astonishment the man disappeared."

Some of the purser's friends were sure that the mariner had encountered the ghost of the compiler of "Joe Miller's Joke Book."

TO END STRIKE OR RESIGN.

Mayor Shank Will Quit To-day if Unable to Adjust Labor Trouble.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 27.—Mayor Samuel L. Shank said to-night that he would resign at noon to-morrow if he was unable to bring about a peaceful settlement of the labor disputes in this city. He made this announcement when it was learned that negotiations which he had been secretly conducting with a committee of business men and with labor leaders had become current knowledge.

Threatened with impeachment proceedings unless he averted labor troubles in the future, and informed by prominent labor leaders that they could not promise industrial peace, the Mayor was unable to avoid a situation which he said he did not step into of his own accord.

The Mayor points out that a State law provides that in case the Mayor resigns the heads of all departments must resign also.

LAMAR IS LAUDED AT GEORGIA DINNER

TOAST TO THE PRESIDENT

Taft Sends Letter Praising Jurist He Appointed—Hornblower Assails the Judicial Recall.

The annual dinner of the Georgia Society of New York was held at Delmonico's last night. Associate Justice Joseph R. Lamar of the United States Supreme Court, who is a native Georgian, was the guest of honor, and in the course of the evening he heard himself praised as one of the South's greatest lawyers and heard some Georgia yells that must have brought back memories of the real thing, as rendered on the banks of the Savannah in his home city of Augusta.

Both men and women attended the dinner, and the speakers, besides Justice Lamar, were William B. Hornblower, President of the Bar Association of New York; Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick of Georgia, Walter L. McCorkle, President of the Southern Society, and Corporation Counsel Archibald Watson. William H. Black, President of the society, was toastmaster.

Before introducing Justice Lamar Mr. Black proposed the toast to the long life of a man who though not a native Georgian, had spent his earlier young manhood in that State, the man in question being President Woodrow Wilson.

Ex-President Taft, who has spent many of his holidays in Georgia in recent years, was another whose name was applauded every time it was mentioned. As a matter of fact, the Georgians seemed to consider that the ex-President was their own particular property, especially since it was Mr. Taft who as President elevated Mr. Lamar to the Supreme Court.

Letter from Prof. Taft.

Mr. Taft had been expected to attend the dinner, but was kept in New Haven by another engagement. Instead he sent a letter, and this is what he wrote:

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 20, 1913.

Dear Mr. Black:

I have your letter of Sept. 29, in which you invite me to be a guest of your society on Nov. 27, at which Mr. Justice Lamar will be the guest of honor. I cannot tell you how much I would enjoy the occasion, but my engagements are so many more than I supposed before I counted them up, that it is impossible for me to be present to do honor to a man I am proud to have made a Justice of the highest court in the world. Yours truly. WM. H. TAFT.

Justice Lamar, who was the first speaker, devoted much of his speech to Georgia, a State that, he said, now stood third among all the States in the value of agricultural products and one in which the great industries were making strides that were nothing less than marvelous.

He called attention to the fact that the number of Georgians who now resided in other States of the Union was more than 400,000, but, he added, their places had been taken by an even greater number of good citizens from the other States, and of these other States New York had given 9,000.

This movement of the people of one State to another, the Justice argued, offered one of the most interesting studies of the present day, and was, furthermore, doing a wonderful amount of good to all the States concerned.

Mr. Hornblower, the second speaker, told of his first meeting with Justice Lamar some twenty years ago, when he opposed Justice Lamar, then a leader of the Georgia bar, in a case before the Georgia Supreme Court.

Assails Judicial Recall.

The judicial recall was touched upon by Mr. Hornblower, who said that the movement for such an enactment was one of the great menaces of the Republic. The Anglo-Saxon ideal of a Judge, said Mr. Hornblower, was a man who was without fear or favor, one who knew neither majorities nor minorities and who administered justice in accordance with the law as he had learned it.

"I hope and trust," said Mr. Hornblower, "that in this country we will never have judges who will have to keep their ears to the ground to listen for the verdict of public opinion. It will be a sad day for the United States when our judges will have to find out what the majority wants before rendering their decisions. But so long as we have judges of the type of Justice Lamar I do not think we will be afflicted with that menace."

Congressman Hardwick was the next speaker, and the last was Mr. McCorkle.

Among those at the dinner were Miss Angie Holman, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Peters, Dr. Wyatt Aikin, Mr. and Mrs. George Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. James Creelman, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Boone, Miss Marion Briscoe, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Baker, Fulton Colville, Col. and Mrs. John C. Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Cothran, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Evans, James W. English, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Herton, Dr. and Mrs. John A. Harris, Charles C. James, F. J. Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Lawrence, Miss Ruth Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Newcomb, Miss Anita Rivers, Col. Arthur Schermerhorn, William P. Schoen, Mr. and Mrs. W. Irving Twombley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Towns, and Capt. Joseph W. Woolfolk.

CONLEYS ARE RECONCILED.

College Tailor to Drop Divorce Suit Against His Wife.

Herman Conley, a tailor of 11 East Forty-seventh Street, who is said to know more college men than any other tradesman in the country, became reconciled to his wife yesterday and the couple had their Thanksgiving dinner together. They had been separated since early last Spring and a suit for an absolute divorce was pending in the Supreme Court of this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Conley were busy last night receiving congratulations from friends. Mr. Conley began building up his long roll of college acquaintances when he was a tailor in Boston. He married in that city fourteen years ago and shortly afterward came here.

Four months ago he brought suit for an absolute divorce and his wife filed a general denial. Friends made repeated efforts to bring them together and finally a meeting was arranged yesterday. Mr. Conley will drop the suit for divorce.

"Our troubles are at an end," he said last night, "and I wish our friends would forget that there ever had been a case of Conley vs. Conley."

OBEYS VOICE OF CONSCIENCE

Finder Restores Gold Watch Lost Three Years Ago.

Three years ago Mrs. Albert G. Ackerman of 96 Norman Street, East Orange, N. J., lost her gold watch and a purse containing a small sum of money while on a train of the Lackawanna Railroad. Yesterday morning her father, Frank S. Warren of East Orange, received this note, printed on brown paper and wrapped around the watch:

Please return this watch to your daughter. Another soul has found its own.
CONSCIENCE FUND.

Mrs. Ackerman recalled yesterday that her purse, which she supposed she had left in a seat on the train, had contained her card with her address.

WOMEN CAMPAIGN BY WIRE.

Texas Suffragists Bombard Their Congressmen with Telegrams.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 27.—Texas workers for woman suffrage have begun a long-distance campaign, sending nightly telegrams to the Texas delegation in Washington urging "votes for women." A committee of the local suffrage organization began the campaign yesterday with the following message to Representative Henry, Chairman of the Rules Committee of the House.

"The women of Texas wish you a happy Thanksgiving, and we ask you to appoint a committee to help make a Government for the people, of the people, and by the people, for if women are not people, what are they?"

Missing Man's Body In a Pond.

Special to The New York Times.

STROUDSBURG, Penn., Nov. 27.—Late this afternoon the body of Henry J. Kotz, the oldest member of the Monroe County bar, was found in Ackerman's mill pond, about a quarter of a mile from the main street of this town. The body was found by Irwin Bathman, a foreman at the Erie car shops. Mr. Kotz has been missing for more than a month, and a systematic search has been made for him. He was last seen alive on the evening of Oct. 28, after his return from an automobile tour in the country.

DAILY WIRELESS AND CABLE DISPATCHES TO THE TIMES

BRITISH SOLDIERS TO SET FASHION

Guard Officers in London Must Wear Topper and Frock Coat When in Mufti.

NEW ORDER CAUSES STIR

Tendency Has Been Toward Comfort of the Bowler and the Golf Cap for Street Attire.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—At the moment when Ralph Nevill, son of the late Dorothy Nevill, has published a book lamenting the disappearance of the "patrician" classes and the coming of the middle classes, whose "ineptitude and sloppiness of mind expresses itself even in their clothes," a remarkable edict has gone forth from high quarters. The officers of the Guards regiments are commanded, when not in uniform, to wear black frock coats and silk hats when in the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace.

The British officer, as soon as he goes off duty, dons civilian clothes, and, following the tendency toward bowler hats and even caps, which Mr. Nevill deplores in the West End of London, has used a "topper" as rarely as possible. The orders now issued to the Guards officers emanate from Major Gen. Sir Francis Lloyd, the new general officer commanding the London district. The reference to the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace is thought to indicate that King George himself initiated the order, but it is well known that his Majesty prefers the bowler to the topper except on official occasions.

Whatever its origin, the new order is creating an immense stir in British military circles. The question debated is, should a Guardsman be compelled to be a dandy in his own time? Those in favor of the order say a commission in the Guards carries with it social obligations of an exacting nature; that one of the traditions of the brigade is that its officers should be leaders of fashion in times of peace, and that men who join the brigade well knowing these traditions, should be prepared to keep them up. It is also advanced that people look to officers of the Guards to keep up their reputation for smartness both on and off parade, and that to see an officer in London dressed like a chauffeur or groom is a violation of the best traditions of the brigade of Guards.

On the other hand, it is advanced that no laws are unchangeable; that the motor car and the growing popularity of golf have changed all the laws of fashion, and that to insist upon a silk hat in modern London is barely less extreme than to demand a revival of knee breeches, satin coats, lace ruffles, and three-cornered hats. It is also argued that a gentleman looks a gentleman in any garb; that your true Guardsman is a Guardsman in shirt sleeves, and that there is quite as much distinction and fashion to be got out of a tweed suit, cap and mackintosh as out of a silk hat and frock coat, which now do little more than mark the shop assistant.

MUSTN'T HONOR ROOSEVELT

Colombian Ministers and Consuls Ordered to Snub the Colonel.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27.—A dispatch from Bogota says:

"The Republic of Colombia has issued orders for all its Consuls, Ministers, or other resident officials in other South American States to take absolutely no part in the reception to Col. Roosevelt. Such was the nature of the orders that in several cities the Colombian representatives are said to have gone out of their way to snub the man who 'took Panama.'

"Colombia is bitterly jealous of the attentions showered upon the former American President, and the Bogota papers daily publish caustic editorials and news articles denouncing him. Several cartoons display the Colonel in the act of annexing all South America to the United States.

"As an indication of the feeling on the part of the populace, an art store which displayed a Roosevelt picture was wrecked by a mob several nights ago. Several gendarmes who tried to restore peace were badly beaten by the crowd, and the picture of Roosevelt, with the head cut off, was nailed up-side down to a post."

Col. Roosevelt Back in Santiago.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 27.—Col. Roosevelt, after passing a few hours sightseeing here yesterday, returned to Santiago, and will leave there to-morrow for Talcahuano on his way to Lakes Llanquihue and Nahuelhuapi. He will afterward proceed to Argentina to follow out the original programme of his journey.

FORMOSA MASSACRE PLAN.

Plot to Raise Army of 100,000 and Restore Island to China.

TOKIO, Nov. 28.—Confirmation has been received of the conspiracy in the Island of Formosa to overthrow Japanese rule there.

The plot was widespread, and the instigators planned to organize an army of 100,000, massacre the Japanese, and restore Formosa to China.

ADMITS HOME RULE PARLEY.

Asquith Took It Upon Himself to Invite Interchange of Views.

LEEDS, Nov. 27.—Premier Asquith's speech to-day at the meeting of the National Liberal Federation, which had been eagerly awaited because it would, it was expected, throw light on the question of how far the negotiations for a settlement of Irish Home Rule by agreement had been successful, disappointed those who were sanguine of a peaceful issue.

"I should be deceiving myself," the Premier declared, "if I said that I saw at this moment a prospect of agreement. But I cannot concur with those who say that time has been or is being wasted."

The Prime Minister declared that there was no foundation for the statement that on this or any other matter the Cabinet was divided, which the Conservative press had been proclaiming for the last few days. With regard to a possible settlement by consent, he held that it should be carried on beyond the reach of electoral or Parliamentary vicissitudes; otherwise the Irish question would continue to be a "football of party politics," to the infinite injury of both Ireland and the United Kingdom as a whole.

It was in this spirit, said Mr. Asquith, that he took it upon himself to invite, not a conference of party leaders, but a free and unprejudiced interchange of views and suggestions. He had no reason to despair regarding the acceptance of the invitation by the leaders of the Opposition. The Government was not going to make, either on its own initiative or on the suggestion of others, any surrender of principle, but it had not closed any door on a reasonable way to peace.

There was no ground, whatever, the Premier declared, for the demand made by the Conservatives for a general election. It could not be fought on the single issue of home rule, and could not result in a settlement of the question. So far as he was concerned, he would not advise any such course. The Government was determined to give home rule to Ireland and was not going to be frightened or arrested by menaces of civil war.

The Prime Minister also disappointed those who had been expecting some pronouncement from him indicating a prospect of a decrease in the vast expenditure for armaments, concerning which much dissatisfaction has recently been expressed among the Liberals.

He, and every one of his colleagues, he the Government, he said, lamented as much as any man in the assembly the huge diversion all over the world of national wealth into non-productive channels. A Ministry which, out of wantonness or levity, in a burst of vainglorious rivalry, added as much as a pound to the expenditure for that purpose was committing a national crime. They could not plead guilty to that reproach. They were charged with a solemn trust, and in its performance it was their duty to maintain the vigilant watch on what the rest of the nations were doing and to be constantly ready. He thought the problem could be met by the co-operation of the great powers of the world, brought about by the demands of the people.

A WONDERFUL NEW GUN.

The Invention of Col. Lewis, an American, Is Tested in England.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A new automatic machine gun, the invention of Col. Lewis, United States Army, (retired,) was exhaustively tested to-day at Bisley in the presence of a distinguished gathering of English army officers and foreign military attachés.

The new gun resembles a large rifle in appearance, with an outer jacket covering. The barrel weighs only twenty-seven pounds. The action is totally automatic. The gun is capable of firing 800 rounds a minute.

With a Lewis gun mounted on a Grahame-White aeroplane, Lieut. Stellingwelf of the Belgian army scored eleven hits in fourteen shots from an altitude of 600 feet on a target of white sheets twenty feet square.

Those present were greatly impressed by the demonstration.

RELIGIOUS CONFLICT IN CHINA IS BITTER

League Formed to Combat the Plan to Make Confucianism the State Creed.

YUAN FOR THE OLD BELIEF

Mandate Issued Yesterday Indicates That Pro-Confucian Movement Has President's Approval.

PEKING, Nov. 27.—A league for the purpose of opposing the adoption of a State religion in China was organized here to-day at a meeting at the Young Men's Christian Association. The league is composed of representatives of Mohammedanism, Taoism, Buddhism, Roman Catholicism, and Protestantism, who are determined to combat the adoption of Confucianism as the Chinese State religion.

The Constitution adopted by the Chinese Parliament made no provision for any State religion, but a Presidential mandate promulgated to-day evidently anticipates the selection of Confucianism, of which the adherents have been laboring sedulously for some time to induce the taking of this step by the President.

The Confucian revival movement has been led by Dr. Chen Huan-Chang, a Doctor of Philosophy of the University of Columbia, and a member of the Han-Lin Academy of China. He expresses the conviction that if China is to be saved from political ruin and moral anarchy reverence for the country's sages must be restored.

President Yuan Shih-kai, whose mandates are now regarded as approximate to the Imperial edicts of the former era, describes the sayings of Confucius as "a doctrine of unequaled wisdom, which is recognized as such by many foreigners as well as by Chinese;" "deep as the ocean," "sufficient although the ages change," "permanent as the sun and the moon that cross the heavens and as the rivers that flow on the earth."

The American Chargé d'Affaires in Peking reported to the State Department in October that a movement to restore Confucianism was on foot. He told of the formation of a great Confucian Society led by Dr. Chen Huan-Chang, one of China's most learned young men, who had gathered around him many distinguished scholars, and said that these had held a national convention at the birthplace of Confucius.

From other sources in China came news of the Confucian upheaval fostered by Dr. Chen Huan-Chang and his associates. At the same time it was reported that great efforts were being made to influence the members of the Chinese Parliament to insert Confucianism in the constitution as the State religion.

DEBATING $260,000,000 LOAN

French Government, It Is Thought, Has Safe Majority in Chamber.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day began the debate on the new loan of $260,000,0000 to cover the budget deficit. It is expected that a vote will be reached by to-morrow night or Saturday.

The debate was somewhat delayed by M. Jaurès, the Socialist leader, who moved that no loan should be considered until the Government had satisfied the Chamber that it would adopt an active pacific programme. He urged that the Government take the initiative in proposing universal arbitration by the Powers of the world in all international controversies.

The Premier, M. Barthou, replied that such a step was foredoomed to failure, because the Triple Alliance during the Balkan crisis had refused to consider arbitration when France proposed that the Balkan question be submitted to The Hague. It was impossible, he said, for France to begin again.

The motion was rejected by a vote of 439 to 148, and the Chamber then passed to the discussion of the loan.

It is generally considered that the Government will have a safe majority when the question comes to a vote, and if the measure is actively pushed in the Senate, it is hoped that the loan will be issued before the end of December.

TO ADMIT "CLERGYWOMEN."

Synod of Canton of Neuchatel Decides in Favor of Innovation.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—The Synod of the Canton of Neuchatel has decided by 74 votes to 22 to admit women to the Faculty of Theology.

This means that women who have obtained the necessary degrees at a university will be admitted as "clergywomen" by the Church.

There is already one popular "clergywoman" in Switzerland.

GLUCK MS. SOLD FOR $1,100.

Wolsey and Louis XIV. Autographs Also Included in Sotheby Sale.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A trifle more than $5,000 was realized to-day at the opening of the sale of a collection of autograph letters and manuscripts at the rooms of Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge. The collection comprised letters and manuscripts of famous musicians, including Beethoven, Gluck, Mozart, and Schubert; a collection of autograph letters, manuscripts, drawings, and engravings, relating to Robert Burns; a series of twenty-three letters of Pope and rare letters and autographs of Calvin, Cardinal Wolsey, Sir Walter Raleigh, and others.

The highest figure at the opening day's sale was brought by a large folio of Gluck, addressed by the composer in Vienna in 1769. A collector paid $1,100 for this, after much spirited bidding.

A fine letter to the Town Council of Grimma, written by Philip Melanchton, the friend of Luther, in 1545, brought $105, and a letter written by Elizabeth Goethe, mother of the German poet, was sold for $130.

A philosophical manuscript in Latin written by Charles-Marie Bonaparte, father of Napoleon I., and dated May 8, 1764, sold for $65, while a letter written by the Empress Josephine brought $45. Some verses written by Elizabeth, sister of Louis XVI., when she was about 10 years old, were sold for $60.

A disappointing price was realized for a letter written by Louis XIV. to King Charles II. of England in 1678. It was thought that this letter would bring a large sum, but it was knocked down for $100.

A letter written by Catherine de Medici to the Duc de Montpensier, referring to a violent quarrel between the Duc de Nevers and the Duc de Montpensier and written in 1581, brought $125.

A letter of Schiller brought $135.

An interesting letter written by Thackeray to W. Elwin in 1855, in which the novelist referred to his visit to America and in which he introduced James Hannay, father of Canon Hannay, the playwright who is now in New York, brought $60. Another letter by Thackeray to the same person brought $80.

A letter by Mrs. Gaskell on the subject of Charlotte Brontë's engagement to Mr. Nicholls was sold for $60.

The only signed manuscript by Bach which has been offered for sale in many years brought $125, and a signed letter by Beethoven went at the same time for $225.

A letter by Chopin to his publishers, written in 1841 relative to the composition "Tarantelle," in which he gave several passages of music to illustrate his points, sold for $100.

An original manuscript by Mozart consisting of twenty-seven bars, composed about 1772 and containing his autograph, brought $125, and a letter signed by Schubert in 1816 sold for $250.

A letter signed by Richard Wagner in 1878, referring to his "Rheingold" and "Die Walküre," brought $77, making a total for the day of $5,470.

There was also offered for sale today a collection of Japanese color prints, chiefly by the most famous masters of Japan. The prints were from the collection of an American artist now living in London. In this sale a print by Harunobu, showing a geisha going to an engagement at night, brought $400

A print of two women by the Chidori Tama River, by Shunman, and another of a young girl and a woman, by the same painter, brought respectively $305 and $155. These two belong to a set of six Tama Rivers, in which the figures are all in graduations of gray, the only other touches of color being in the landscapes.

A "Night Festival on the Sumida River," by Utamaro, containing the figures of many women, brought $610, the highest price paid at this sale, and made the total for this collection for the day $6,080.

At Christie's sale of modern paintings, also held to-day, $18,355 was realized for six pictures.

All the sales will be continued to-morrow.

ITALY GETS PROMISE OF MANY REFORMS

King Victor Opens Parliament —Socialist Leaders Take the Oath in His Presence.

FULLER RIGHTS FOR WOMEN

Sweeping Changes in the Educational System—"A New Epoch of Italian Life!" Declares the King.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ROME, Nov. 27.—King Victor Emmanuel's speech at the opening of the new Parliament to-day created general satisfaction owing to its marked democratic tone.

A large part of the royal address was devoted to the Libyan conquest and the obligations arising therefrom both on account of Italy's more weighty influence in international affairs and the need of greater efficiency in every branch of national activity.

His Majesty linked an appeal to Italian patriotism to a reaffirmation of the Government's policy of placing the burden of fresh taxation on the shoulders of the wealthier classes.

A remarkable announcement in the speech concerned projected reforms in elementary, secondary, and university education as well as in technical and industrial instruction, so as to level up the moral, intellectual, and practical standards of the entire nation.

The civil and commercial codes are to be so revised as to give to Italian women the full legal rights they clamor for in the changed conditions of contemporary society.

Amid thunderous cheers from every part of the Senate and House Italy's democratic monarch declared: "This day what we here inaugurate is not merely a new Parliament, but a new epoch of Italian life!"

ROME, Nov. 27.—Brilliant ceremonial attended the opening of Parliament by King Victor Emmanuel to-day. The King, accompanied by Queen Helena and the royal princes, drove from the Quirinal through streets lined by immense crowds to the Senate.

Signor Biasolati-Bergamaschi, leader of the Reform Socialists; Prof. Ferri, Independent Socialist, and Signor Deli 'Acqua, Republican, took the oath in the presence of the King, a proceeding unprecedented in the Italian Parliament, where Socialists and Republicans hitherto had always stayed away from the opening.

The King in his speech from the throne announced that many reforms were to be introduced, and alluded to the intention of the Government to "give Italian women their rightful place."

Concerning the Church, his Majesty said that the most ample religious liberty would be given, but that the Church would be prevented from interfering in State affairs, as the Government regarded itself as the only representative of Italian subjects, and could not admit any limitation of its sovereignty.

ROME, Nov. 27.—Thomas Nelson Page, the United States Ambassador, observed Thanksgiving Day by giving a dinner to the members of the Embassy staff.

At the American College a dinner was given to the students. Among the guests were Mgr. Donato Sbarretto, Secretary of the Congregation of Religious Affairs; the Right Rev. Dennis J. Dougherty, Bishop of Jaro, Philippines; the Rev. Thomas C. O'Reilly, Chancellor of the Diocese of Cleveland, and the Rev. J. T. O'Connell of the Diocese of Toledo.

SHOT BY BROTHER HUNTING

Atlanta Boy Accidentally Killed—Another Shoots Himself.

ATLANTA, Nov. 27.—Two boys were killed and a third seriously wounded here to-day through careless use of firearms.

Charles Bridewell, 11 years old, was accidentally shot and killed by his fifteen-year-old brother, Braisel Bridewell, while the boys were hunting. John Garst, 14, shot himself through the stomach with a rifle while hunting and died shortly afterward. Charles Howell, 13, was accidentally shot in the hip by his brother. It is believed he will recover.

POLICE KILL FIVE HINDUS..

Another Affray with Strikers in Natal—Several Volleys Fired.

DURBAN, Nov. 27.—Five East Indians were killed to-day in another affray between the strikers and the police. It occurred on the Bleckburn sugar estate in the Mount Edgecombe district, about fourteen miles to the north of Durban. The most important sugar crushing mill in Natal is located there, and nearby is a large American mission station.

The police were obliged to fire several volleys before they succeeded in quelling the rioters.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The advices received to-day from Durban are symptomatic of the grave results likely to follow the embitterment produced in the minds of the South African Ministers by the speech of Lord Hardinge, Viceroy of India, at Madras yesterday. In this speech he sympathized with passive resistance by the Natal Indians to "invidious and unjust laws," and demanded an impartial inquiry into these laws.

The Viceroy's speech is variously explained here as an unfortunate indiscretion and as the result of grave feeling in India, calling for such outspoken sympathy. There is little doubt, however, in the minds of those who have studied the situation that it will encourage the Indians in Africa to violent resistance.

MARQUIS'S SISTER WEDS.

Married Privately in a London Church to Harry Paravicini.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Another "secret" wedding was sprung on London society to-day when Lady Eva Cholmondeley, sister of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, was married to Harry Paravicini at Christ Church in the presence of five persons, including the bride's brother.

Members of the Cholmondeley family have shown no partiality to wedding ceremonies on a grand scale. Lord Rocksavage, a nephew of to-day's bride, married Miss Sassoon at the registry office. Lord George Cholmondeley's wedding with Mrs. Sterling the American actress, also was unostentatious.

Report About Prince Denied.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A suggestion that the Prince of Wales should attend the official opening of the Panama Canal is under consideration by King George, according to The Liverpool Courier, but the Hon. William George Cadogan, aid de camp to the Prince, replying from Oxford to a telegraphic inquiry, says: "As far as I know there is no truth in the statement."

RAGAMUFFIN PRANKS GET BOY VICTIMS

Children's War Dance Stops When Young Sonwell Is Burned in a Bonfire.

FIREMAN'S AID TOO LATE

Companions in Terror Flee When Another Child Catches Fire—Auto Runs Down Masquerader.

The still lively tradition of the city that on Thanksgiving Day the children should go out on the streets as tatterdemalions brought with it yesterday the familiar list of serious injuries. In the Bronx, two children were burned badly when they danced in their ragamuffin garb about Thanksgiving bonfires.

There was a bonfire late yesterday afternoon in the lot adjoining the home of six-year-old John Sonwell of 1,327 Southern Boulevard. The boy was one of a dozen who played about it with all the shrill cries of the children's war dance. The boy had donned a dress of his sister's, and the flying skirts caught the flames of the bonfire. There was a flash of fire and the other children scattered in dismay as the little boy rolled on the ground and screamed with terror and pain.

His cries were heard by Lieut. Alexander Stapleton of the Fire Department, who happened to be walking by, and as he ran toward the child he stripped off the coat of his uniform to use as a blanket to smother the flames. This was effective, but the help came too late. The boy had been burned mortally, according to the physicians who took charge of him at Fordham Hospital a little later.

Earlier in the afternoon 4-year-old Joseph Donohue of 1,122 Lebanon Street also was taken to Fordham Hospital. He, too, had been dancing about a bonfire in a lot near his home, and in his case, also, the costume of the day was responsible for the accident. The flimsy cotton stuff was fine fuel for the flames, which spread quickly over his body, and, as in the other case, the children who were with him were too young to know what to do.

They ran screaming out of the lot, and again it was the coat of a uniform that put out the flames, for Patrolman Kingston of the Bronx Park station was the first to bring aid. They carried the child home, but the family physician found the burns so serious that an ambulance came to take him to Fordham Hospital. There the physicians said there was small chance of his recovery.

At Rockaway Beach a little boy was run down by an automobile as he and a troup of strangely togged children were crossing the Boulevard. He was 4-year-old Frank Walsh of 8 South Grove Avenue. His left leg was broken. The boy is in Rockaway Beach Hospital. The driver of the automobile was held to answer to the charge that he had no chauffeur's license. He was 18-year-old David Jacob of 18 Wygand Place, Rockaway Beach.

Thanksgiving Observed with Games and Gayety by Our Warship's Crews

NAPLES, Italy, Nov. 27.—Many Italian Army and Navy officers to-day visited their colleagues of the American battleships Arkansas and Florida, now at this port, and the officers and crews made Thanksgiving Day here one of rejoicing.

The merriment in the Bay of Naples was accentuated by the arrival of the steamship Princess Irene with a large contingent of Americans waving the Stars and Stripes.

This afternoon the officers of the American warships gave a brilliant tea. All the vessels in the harbor were illuminated this evening.

Although nothing official was arranged for Thanksgiving among the sailors of the American battleships Connecticut and Kansas, now as Genoa, the officers and men observed the day gayly.

NICE, France, Nov. 27.—A baseball game between teams from the American battleships Utah and Delaware, which are visiting Villefranche, was played here to-day, the Delaware nine winning by a score of 4 to 0. The match was witnessed by a large and interested crowd.

NO HUNGRY ONES ON THANKSGIVING DAY

Turkey Served in Prisons, Missions, Hospitals, and Lowly Tenements.

ZELAYA DINED IN TOMBS

Alimony Club Feasted in Jail, but the Down-and-Outs Fared as Well.

Father Knickerhocker leaned back replete with satisfaction last night after his annual Thanksgiving feast and found cause for gratitude in the fact that the weather man had proved himself a poor prophet. No showers materialized to mar the day, although chill winds and an overcast sky caused holiday pedestrians to muffle themselves up in real Winter fashion when they went forth to walk off impending attacks of indigestion.

The day was appropriately observed in all of the institutions under the charge of the Departments of Correction and Charities, and the inmates of municipal prisons, refuges, and hospitals and other wards of the city were served with turkey dinners—all except those in the Tombs.

At the penitentiary on Blackwell's Island a vaudeville entertainment, with twenty-four numbers, was given in the morning under the B. F. Keith circuit management. The 1,200 prisoners, including eighty-seven women, were divided into two audiences of 600 each, one in the chapel and the other in the assembly hall upstairs. Two shows were given simultaneously.

Among the stage people who made the trip to the island as guests of Warden Hayes were Charlie Ross, Jack Wilson, Nora Bayes, Adele Ritchie, the Dagwell Sisters, Cantwell and Walker, Diamond and Brennan, Marie Elizabeth, Robert Keane, and Clark Verdi. Among the prisoners in the audience were former Police Inspectors Sweeney, Hussey, Murtha, and Thompson.

At the City Prison in Queens there was a vaudeville performance given by volunteers from the White Rats, under the direction of the Rev. John E. Grisewald, who has conducted such entertainment annually for many years past.

About 12,000 persons are now in institutions under charge of the Department of Charities, and in all these religious services were conducted before the turkey dinner. Special entertainments were given at the City Home, the Metropolitan Hospital, City Hospital, the New York Children's Hospital and Schools on Randall's Island, and the Municipal Lodging House in East Twenty-fifth Street, near the East River. At the Lodging House a long line of ragged human derelicts stood in line patiently for several hours before noon to get into the place and partake of the free Thanksgiving dinner which was served to 1,500 men.

It was "Big Eats Day" on the Bowery, and every lodging house furnished its hungry quota to the long lines which gathered in front of the various missions hours before the doors of these institutions were thrown open. Turkey and cranberry sauce were served.

In the afternoon a Thanksgiving dinner was given to fifty members of the Brotherhood of the Bowery Mission by Horace Sandler of the advertising department of John Wanamaker's. In the evening 2,000 men received their Thanksgiving dinner in the mission. The men were fed in relays of 500 each, and the distribution lasted from 7 until nearly 10:30 o'clock. Exercises were held on the main floor. The principal speaker was State Senator R. L. Gledhill of Brooklyn. Marcus Brissel, who up to six years ago conducted a leather finding business for forty-two years at 39 Bowery, came over from his home, in Ridgewood, N. J., to participate in the festivities and say a kind word to the men.

Hundreds of baskets, each containing a substantial Thanksgiving dinner for a poor family, were distributed in the tenements of the lower east side.

In many of the missions and settlement headquarters Barnard College girls and students from Columbia University worked side by side as volunteer waitresses and ushers. As a general thing pipes and tobacco were provided for the guests after they had risen from the tables.

At the Bowery Branch of the Y. M. C. A., Supt. H. W. Hoot provided 800 dinners. In celebration of the successful termination of the $4,000,000 building fund campaign which ended on Wednesday night, he announced that celery and mince-pie had been added to the menu. This was received with cheers. Although it had been stated that the doors would not open until noon and that the dinner would not be served until 6 o'clock, there were more than 400 persons in line as early as 10 o'clock in the morning. A special table was reserved for homeless women and about eighty of these unfortunates were fed.

One of the largest food lines was that which gathered in front of St. Andrews One Cent Coffee Stand headquarters at 31 West Eighth Street, in which men, women and children stood waiting for their holiday dinners or for baskets of food. Four hundred baskets were distributed to holders of tickets to be taken to homes in which the bread winners were either ill or in prison. In the long, narrow dining hall more than 1,600 men and women were fed during the afternoon in squads of 100.

At the Bowery Mission, 227 Bowery, 2,000 men were fed during the afternoon, and 150 baskets of food were distributed by Supt. J. G. Holliming and Manager J. T. Hunt to poor and deserving families in the neighborhood. At God's Providence House, 590 Broome Street, 500 persons got a hot turkey dinner, and 200 baskets were sent out to destitute families. In this place a score of Normal Preparatory School girls acted as waitresses.

For some reason, which no one in authority was able to state, the 663 prisoners in the Tombs did not get the usual turkey dinner of former years. Neither were Thanksgiving cigars distributed to the male inmates. Instead of turkey the prisoners, 601 men and 62 women, got roast chicken or fish, as they preferred; a small mince pie each, coffee, and the choice of an apple or an orange. Gen. José Santos Zelaya, former President of Nicaragua, had the prison fare for his Thanksgiving dinner, and so did Hans Schmidt, the murderer.

In the Yorkville Police Court yesterday morning a feeble, gray-bearded man arose from one of the rear benches and told Magistrate Nolan he was William Graham, 62 years old, with no home or relatives. He said he had served three successive terms of six months each in the workhouse on Blackwell's Island, and was released two days ago. He said he was a vagrant, and asked the Court to commit him to the Island again.

"I was last sentenced on May 27," he said, "and by right I should have been detained until after Thanksgiving. I wanted to stay over on the Island and get a turkey dinner, but I was discharged last Tuesday."

Magistrate Nolan imposed a sentence of six months, and Graham was led back to the court prison, where he joined fifty other prisoners at dinner. Chaplain Thomas Copping provided cigars for the men, and Commissioner Patrick Whitney of the Department of Corrections sent a large hamper of good things to help out the prison menu.

In Ludlow Street Jail twelve members of the famous Alimony Club feasted at the expense of New York County. Friends of these civil prisoners had been requested not to send food to them yesterday, as all the holiday luxuries had been provided. The menu included roast turkey with chestnut stuffing, prime ribs of beef, cranberry sauce, baked sweet potatoes, mashed potatoes, broiled chicken, asparagus, fruit salad, mince pie, apple pie, ice cream, coffee, and cigars. At the conclusion of the feast the members of the club arose and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," in honor of Warden Johnson, and "Home Was Never Like This," in honor of Chamberlee.

The officials of the New York Catholic Protectory provided 1,800 pounds of turkey for their 2,500 juvenile charges and 1,000 pounds of roast chicken. At the Fordham Hospital 187 patients gathered around the table, and at Lebanon Hospital 200 convalescents dined. At Lincoln Hospital 300 patients had a regular Thanksgiving dinner, and at St. Francis's Hospital and St. Joseph's Hospital similar dinners were served. At Bellevue, New York Hospital, Flower Hospital, and other public and semi-public hospitals special menus were provided for the various wards, and candy was distributed to juvenile patients.

At St. Luke's Hospital the Rev. George F. Clover conducted special services in the chapel before the holiday repast. In Washington Heights Hospital twenty patients had a Thanksgiving dinner, and in the Harlem Hospital 200 convalescent patients dined on turkey.

Several hundred invited guests saw an exhibition battalion drill of the boys of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, after which the 1,525 parentless little ones sat down to a bountiful repast. After dinner the boys' band gave an outdoor concert.

On Ellis Island 1,700 future citizens had their first glimpse of an American holiday and their first taste of the American turkey. A special Jewish caterer was on hand. Owing to the fact that Ellis Island was officially closed yesterday 475 third-class passengers on the Oceanic and 800 on the Greek liner Ioannina were held on board those ships. In the immigrant missions on State Street, facing the Battery, scores of new arrivals from Europe got their first taste of Thanksgiving fare.

At the feast which is provided annually by William Waldorf Astor at the Newsboys' Lodging House 1,000 urchins of all nationalities sat down in the big banquet hall at William and Duane Streets last night in four relays of 250 each. After dinner there was an excellent vaudeville entertainment, and then a basket ball match between teams representing the Newsboys' Lodging House and the West Side Boys' Home. The game ended in a draw; score 0 to 0.

A dinner for 1,000 friendless children was served at the Five Points Mission by women from the congregations of several Methodist Episcopal Churches, who acted as waitresses.

At the Brooklyn Navy Yard 2,600 bluejackets and marines had a special holiday dinner. At Raymond Street Jail in Brooklyn the weeping wife of one of the prisoners, with two little children clinging to her skirts, appeared, and was taken into the womens' section, and got the regular chicken dinner provided for the inmates after she had admitted that she was destitute and that the children had nothing to eat. The Warden and the prison attendants made up a purse for her.

NO LONELY GIRLS AT FEAST.

Montclair Invitation to New Yorkers Brought No Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 27.—Miss Anna Rodgers of 14 Trinity Place, wearing a pink chrysanthemum, waited in vain at the Lackawanna station here to-day for the arrival of Adele and Anna Steinberg of 117 Varet Street, Brooklyn, who, she expected, would come to Montclear to eat the Thanksgiving dinner which she had provided for lonely New York girls who dwell in furnished rooms. The girls, in a letter to Miss Rodgers, had asked to be included among the guests. They were the only ones who responded to advertisements in New York papers.

The girls could not have failed to identify Miss Rodgers, for the big chrysanthemum that she wore made her conspicuous. At last Miss Rodgers left the depot and returned to the restaurant where she had planned to give the dinner to the girls, and arranged with the proprietor to delay the feast until she could bring to the place a mother and three children from Newark, who, she had heard, were in destitute circumstances.

HOBOES ARE ENTERTAINED.

Speakers Discourse on Spugs and Strikebreaking.

There was an entertainment at the Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth Street, yesterday, for the benefit of the hoboes in the Brotherhood Welfare Association. Part of the proceeds will go toward the purchase of food and clothing for the unemployed, and part toward a fund to open a free employment bureau for hoboes.

The Rev. Irwin Tucker of the Church of St.-Mark's-on-the-Bouwerie, addressed the hoboes and said that a protective association is being formed, consisting of members of labor unions and the Brotherhood Welfare Association, the main object of which is to be co-operation by which the hoboes will not act as strikebreakers during strikes. Several Socialist speakers who addressed the meeting denounced the S. P. U. G. movement, declaring that it was not useless giving to assist people who could not get work and wanted to work.

GERMANY OUR TWIN AMONG THE NATIONS

Ambassador Gerard Links Them as Leaders of the World's Commerce.

BOTH REVERE BUSINESS

Men Here Without Profession Considered Bad Americans, He Tells Thanksgiving Guests.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMBURG, Nov. 27.—Ambassador James W. Gerard bracketed Germany and America as twin nations which dignified business, in a speech he delivered to-night at a Thanksgiving celebration held by the American colony here under the Chairmanship of Consul General Robert P. Skinner.

Two hundred persons attended, among those present being the first and second Burgomasters of the city, the President of the Senate, the diplomatic representatives of Russia and Prussia and personages distinguished in shipping, financial, and commercial life. After toasts to the Kaiser and to President Wilson had been proposed by Consul General Skinner he introduced Ambassador Gerard as the guest of the evening.

Mr. Gerard said he was glad to be in the queen city of the world's sea commerce. Hamburg, he said, owed much of its early greatness and modern prosperity to its trade with the United States. It was Hamburg and the other Hanseatic cities which in the midst of the wars that raged during the Middle Ages had upheld the torch of trade for posterity to carry.

Germany and America were nations which revered business, continued Mr. Gerard. In the United States a man who had no profession or business was considered a bad American. The two countries must be rivals in the world's markets, but at the same time they could be friends. America would not be urging Germany to participate in the San Francisco Exposition if Americans were not anxious to meet Germans in honorable competition in the great unexplored fields of trade toward which the Panama-Pacific Fair would direct the world's attention.

Mr. Gerard's sentiments were warmly echoed in subsequent speeches by the official representatives of Hamburg. All the speakers dwelt on the loss Hamburg was about to suffer in the promotion to Berlin of Consul General Skinner.

The evening's festivities closed with a programme of songs by Mr. and Mrs. Francis MacLennan, an American couple who are winning laurels at the Hamburg State Opera.

VIENNA, Nov. 27.—Thanksgiving Day was celebrated in Vienna by a great banquet organized by the American Medical Association. It was attended by several hundred persons, and speeches were made by University Professors Fuchs, Politzer, Lorenz, and Alexander, and by American Doctors McCallum, Kuth, and Lange. The banquet was followed by dancing.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—The American Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Stovall gave a Thanksgiving reception here to-day. Among those present were Admiral Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Victor F. Lawson, the Swiss Minister to Washington and Mrs. Paul Ritter. Geneva contains the largest American colony in the country.

MANY THANKSGIVING SERMONS

The Rev. Dr. Van de Water Grateful for the Income Tax.

Thanksgiving Day was observed with special services and musical programmes in nearly all the churches. At St. Patrick's Cathedral the annual Thanksgiving memorial mass of the Catholic Benevolent Legion was celebrated. The Rev. Father James J. Talbot delivered the sermon. He said in part:

"We look about us and believe that the Church has a struggle for existence in foreign lands. That is true, but we have also a struggle in our own land. The great question to-day is what kind of a faith should the followers of the Church have? We have the answer here to-day in this splendid organization. Your name is truly legion. You have paid out in charity and good works $33,000,000 in the thirty-three years of your existence. Your Legion stands for goodness and kindness, and so long as we have that kind of faith among us we can look forward to continued triumphs for Mother Church."

Trinity Church held many hundreds of worshippers yesterday morning. "America" and other hymns were sung by the congregation, and the choir sang a festal Te Deum and anthems appropriate to the occasion. The Rev. Stuart L. Tyson of Sewanee, Tenn., preached the holiday sermon, taking for his text the words of St. Paul: "In All Things, Give Thanks."

An impressive sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. John W. Jowett at the Thanksgiving services in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. He spoke upon the "Spirit of Thanksgiving," which he said was the antithesis of moral uncleanness.

At the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, Thirty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, the Rev. William L. Sullivan, associate pastor of All Souls' Church, delivered the Thanksgiving sermon. He drew a picture of the struggles and privations of the Pilgrims who landed at Plymouth Rock and who originated Thanksgiving Day. In his sermon he alluded to the impeachment of Gov. Sulzer and the attendant disgrace to New York State, saying:

"In the heroic struggle and glorious self-sacrifice of the Pilgrims there is something which stirs up our devotion to the Commonwealth. When we are shocked at the failure of a State Executive to live up to the trust reposed in him, the fact that exposure and disgrace was his punishment should help to make our faith in the Commonwealth more strong."

The Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Harlem, in his Thanksgiving sermon reviewed the reasons which should make the American people grateful. Among the things he mentioned were the revision of the tariff downward, the constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States Senators by popular vote, an income tax which puts the burdens of government on those best fitted to bear them, more kindly relations between Japan and the United States, the acquittal of Beilis in the so-called Jewish ritual murder case in Kieff, recent gifts to the Metropolitan and other museums, the $4,000,000 building fund of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., the increased gifts to Christian missions, improved relations between capital and labor, suppression of disease on the Isthmus and the completion of the Panama Canal, control of big business by the Federal Government, putting local thieves in jail and keeping them there, the overthrow of Tammany Hall, and the victory for good Municipal Government.

The Rev. George R. Lockwood, the new pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, Harlem, was the preacher at a union service in the Harlem Presbyterian Church in which seven Protestant congregations participated. He enumerated reasons why New York should be thankful. So did the Rev. Wilton Merle Smith at the Central Presbyterian Church. Both of them mentioned the recent defeat of Tammany Hall as a cause for general congratulation among good citizens.

The Rev. Dr. J. W. Brougher of Los Angeles preached at a special Thanksgiving service in Calvary Baptist Church. At a union service of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, the West End Presbyterian Church and the Hope Baptist Church held at Grace Church, the Rev. Charles Stolzle spoke with grave concern of the decline in the ratio of Protestant communicants to the population of the United States; of the growth of intemperance and of divorce.

Thanksgiving services with a special musical programme were conducted in Calvary Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, where the Rev. Theodore Sedgwick delivered the sermon; in Grace Church, Broadway and Tenth Street; the Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and Twentieth Street; the Brick Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street; Grace Episcopal Church, 10th Street between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues, and in the Washington Heights Baptist Church, where the congregations of five churches on the upper West Side met for a union service. In addition to these an impressive musical service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Black of Union Theological Seminary at the Madison Avenue Reformed Church.

NEWPORT NEWSBOYS DINE.

Cheer Mrs. F. W. Vanderbilt, Who Gives Thanksgiving Feast.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt attended her twentieth Thanksgiving dinner in Masonic Hall this afternoon for more than 300 news and messenger boys.

To the strains of a march, the boys were seated, passing Mrs. T. Fred Kaull, representing Mrs. Vanderbilt, assisted by members of the Kings Daughters, in which Mrs. Vanderbilt has long been prominent. The Rev. Dr. Franklin G. McKeever struck the popular chord by telling a story of a news boy and his rise to Brown University. Then the pastor led in prayer, thanked the boys' benefactor, and when the prayer ended the clergyman asked the boys to give Mrs. Vanderbilt three cheers, which they did with a will.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by Mrs. Kaull, walked about the hall and met the boys. The boys sang "On the Mississippi," and as each left for home he received a box of candy with oranges and apples.

Commodore and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James entertained a Thanksgiving day house party at Beacon Hill House, including Mr. and Mrs. E. Hayward Ferry of New York.

Mrs. Vanderbilt gave a dinner at the Breakers to-night, for her son-in-law and daughter, Count and Countess Szechenyi.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Van Beuren gave a Thanksgiving Day party at Sunnyfields Farm.

Here's a Good Resolution:

"I Will Begin My Christmas Shopping TODAY!"

"It's better for me, because I have much more room to shop in, the first pick of all the pretty Christmas things, and salespeople who have time to give me their whole attention.

"And besides, I can choose APPROPRIATE things—instead of rushing madly around at the last minute, and buying that 'SOMETHING to give' without regard to its beauty, usefulness or price.

"And it's better for the stores, for it helps them to give the accurate service they WANT to give, and does not put such a strain on their faithful, busy workers."

Why not make this resolution, and act on it THIS MORNING?

WOMEN BEAT MEN RAISING $4,000,000

In Harlem Their Committee Obtained Five Times as Much for Y. M.-Y. W. C. A. Fund.

THE TEAMS' COLLECTIONS

George W. Perkins Says Eight or Nine Handsome Buildings Will Be Erected.

That women are better money raisers than men is suggested by the campaign for the $4,000,000 building fund of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, which ended so successfully on Wednesday night with an oversubscription, according to the revised figures, of $52,561.

The final official figures for the campaign were issued yesterday by the Auditing Department. They show that with the exception of the Executive Committee, composed of ten men and eight women, through which most of the unusually large contributions were made, the Women's Committee led all the others with collections totalling $698,497. The Executive Committee, headed by George W. Perkins as Chairman, Miss Grace H. Dodge Vice Chairman, and Henry P. Davison Treasurer, took first place with $751,081.

The total collections of the men and women of the Harlem committee offer a better basis for comparison. The women of that committee collected $47,039, or more than five times as much as the men, whose total was only $8,512.

Of the men's committees, the Kingsley aggregation holds the record with $236,280, while the Clark committee is a close second with $211,522. The surprise of the total collections is furnished by the Colored Committee, which got $41,444, thereby gaining sixth place and beating out both the Bronx and the Kunz committees, whose collections were $28,136 and $23,644 respectively.

The keen competition between Mr. and Mrs. Francis Louis Slade, Captains of Teams 1 and 22 respectively, also ended with the woman in the lead. Mrs. Slade's team collected $140,782 to her husband's $104,744. Mr. Slade, however, set the high water mark for the Kingsley Committee teams, while Mrs. Slade was beaten by Team 21, captained by Mrs. E. R. L. Gould with $182,869.

Third place on the teams of the Women's Committee went to Miss Dorothy Perkins, Captain of Team 25, with $123,253. Team 19 of the Clark Committee, whose Captain was Cleveland A. Dunn, led the other teams of the same committee with $72,838, while of the two teams on the Kunz Committee, Team B, captained by F. C. Pinkham, collected $20,428, to $3,208 obtained by Team A, captained by L. H. King.

The total official collections of the three leading committees by teams are as follows:

George W. Perkins made these comments yesterday on the campaign:

"I don't think the people of New York realize that the buildings to be erected from part of this fund will not be places where girls can hang around and loaf. They are to help girls who want to help themselves. It is a mistake to think that the buildings will be charitable or philanthropic institutions when they are to be made as nearly self-supporting as possible. This money will be expended on eight or nine handsome buildings, and will form a number of centres in different parts of the city that are convenient and easily accessible.

"There will be one building for the colored women's branch, which will afford up-to-date advantages for physical, social, educational, and religious work. There will be another building on the east side above Twenty-third Street where young women who are strangers in the city can live and study their various professions; and still another in Harlem for a similar purpose. Then there will be several boarding houses for girls who are studying stenography and the practical sides of business life. Then there will be one building for trained nurses in some convenient centre where they can secure rooms and board at reasonable rates while they are practicing their profession.

"Some of the money will be used to meet the expenses of these various undertakings as they become more and more self-supporting, while other portions of the money will be used to equip the buildings of the associations and adjust increases over estimates in other items of the budget.

"There have been comments that the campaign for this fund will hinder other campaigns for similar purposes. I think this is a mistake, too. I believe that the more people give the more they will want to give. In this direction our campaign has been an educational one in that it has shown that people can give, and also has shown them how to give; and I believe that when once aroused they will give even more than they would have given otherwise in other and similar campaigns."

"Many attacks have been made on New York," Mr. Perkins continued. "We have been told again and again that we were a community of dollar chasers; that wealth was our only goal, and that we had become callous to all the finer things of life. The criticism was launched on us that we lacked spirituality; that we lived in 'lobster palaces,' looked on Wall Street as our happy hunting ground and regarded our churches chiefly as centres of fashion.

"Any one who had served as I did, as Executive Committee Chairman of the Y. W. C. A.-Y. M. C. A. whirlwind campaign, must have come to the conclusion that those who criticised New York in the former ways were wrong. In the two weeks during which we raised the $4,000,000 plus which has been obtained for the two Christian Associations I saw thousands of instances of deep feeling and wide liberality on the part of New Yorkers. Case after case came to my attention in which dwellers in this city in all walks of life proved their ability to give unselfish devotion to a great purpose. I had occasion to note the broad generosity of women like Miss Grace H. Dodge, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard and others whose gifts to the fund ran into six figures.

"I also learned of many self-supporting women and small-salaried men who doubtless deprived themselves of comforts to aid the cause. There were wives of wealthy men who drew big checks payable to the Joint Campaign Committee. There were women in moderate circumstances who gave their time as well as their money to active work in obtaining subscriptions. There were shop girls and factory workers who subscribed for dollars, dimes and even nickels.

"The fact is that the big Christian Association campaign resulted in the awakening of the city to what it owed to its young womanhood and young manhood. It was a practical, profitable, human revival—a glowing contrast to the old-fashioned revivals which consisted largely of ardor and bore little fruit of achievement. The gigantic uplift movement for the young women and young men of the city leads to the conviction that when broad-gauge, two-fisted, substantial philanthropy is needed the place to seek it is our own good old generous New York."

DANIELS APPLAUDS CAMPAIGN.

Secretary Says $4,000,000 Fund Makes Thanksgiving Notable.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department made this Thanksgiving statement to-day:

"The specific achievement which has made this Thanksgiving notable is the success of the movement in New York to raise $4,000,000 for the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association. This is not significant so much because of the large amount of money raised as because it emphasized the fact that these associations are appraised at their true value. It is a matter for sincere thanksgiving that the leaders in the churches recognize the need of reaching young people and of employing this new and modern agency."

HUNT RABBITS WITH BELLS.

Farmer Shows New York Sportsmen How to Drive Them from Cover

Special to The New York Times.

MONTVILLE, N. J., Nov. 27.—Edward Van Riper, a farmer living a few miles west of here, has originated a scheme for hunting rabbits that is winning approval and dollars for him from some wealthy New Yorkers who hunt in this neighborhood. A number of fine hunting lodges are maintained in that section, but while game has been reported plentiful in all other rural sections of New Jersey, these men have had little or no luck, particularly with rabbits.

This morning three Nimrods, togged out in the best hunting suits that money could buy, and with three fine beagle hounds at their heels, walked across the Van Riper meadow toward the corn crib in which the farmer was doing some work. The meadow is part of hundreds of acres leased for shooting by a New York club.

"Any luck this morning, boys?" inquired the farmer.

"No," replied one of the party. "We've hunted since daylight, and haven't seen a rabbit."

"That's funny," said Van Riper. "There's a bunch o' rabbits in that meadow, but they're a layin' close. You jest wait a minute and I'll stir some up for you, and I won't need a dog, either."

Calling a farmhand, Van Riper got a long rope and strung cowbells and sleigh bells along its length.

"Now you fellers follow me, and we'll git ye some rabbits," remarked Van Riper, and led the way into the meadow. Van Riper took one end of the rope and the farmhand the other, and they shook it as they went along, making the bells jangle loudly. Here and there cottontails jumped up from their beds of matted grass, and the guns of the Nimrods were kept busy. Inside of fifteen minutes sixteen rabbits were bagged. The hunters gave $2 each to Van Riper and his helper and went away happy.

Wyoming Leads So Far in Struggle for Navy Championship.

The superdreadnought Wyoming, flagship of Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, is leading in the struggle for the target championship of the navy, according to figures filed with the Navy Department. Owing to the conditions in Mexico some of the ships have been kept in Mexican waters, and this has delayed their work on the ranges. The figures compiled so far show that the Wyoming is in the lead with the superdreadnought Arkansas, flagship of the First Division of the fleet, and the battles Rhode Island, flagship of the Fe Division, close behind her. Here are official figures:

2—Arkansas	40.937	12—Kansas	21.841
3—Rhode Isl'd	40.870	13—Maryland	21.800
4—No. Dakota	39.818	14—New Jersey	18.109
5—Delaware	36.628	15—Vermont	17.734
6—Idaho	31.707	16—Georgia	17.590
7—Utah	30.776	17—So. Carolina	15.642
8—Florida	29.225	18—Connecticut	14.757
9—Pittsburgh	25.979	19—Nebraska	11.919
10—Ohio	23.830	20—Virginia	10.780

These figures show that the ships that have completed target practice are very close together, and so the results of the Spring practice will be of greater interest, as by them will be determined the possession of the gunnery trophy for the year. That trophy is now held by the battleship Idaho. The ships that have not had their Fall practice are the battleships Louisiana, New Hampshire, and Michigan, and the armored cruisers California and Saratoga.

PROBATION FOR ANNOYERS.

Capt. Price's Son and Walsh Were Kept in Jail a Week.

After spending six days in jail awaiting the decision of Magistrate Appleton, James K. Price, son of the late Ponce Capt. James K. Price, and Charles Walsh, his chum, were placed on probation for one year in the Morrisania Court yesterday. They were arrested on a charge of annoying the two young daughters of Lieut. Ernest L. Von Diezelski of the East Twenty-second Street Station in a Third Avenue elevated railroad train.

Magistrate Appleton imposed as the terms of the probation that each must abstain from the use of liquor for one year and keep away from saloons, and in the case of Price that if he ever went out nights on pleasure bent he must be accompanied by his wife.

Lieut. Von Diezelski and his wife, with their two daughters, were returning from a reception about 3 o'clock on Thursday morning of last week. In a Third Avenue elevated train the two girls had to take seats apart from their parents, and the complained that Walsh and Price had made offensive remarks to them. On the Tremont station Von Diezelski arrested the two men pointed out by his daughters.

AIR CURE FOR BURNS.

Skin Grafting Impossible, Patient Is Saved by an Experiment.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—With 200 square inches of flesh burned from his body and his life despaired of, Harry F. Stabler, 23 years old, after undergoing a new treatment at a hospital here, is now able to walk about the hospital courtyard.

Stabler was taken to the hospital on Oct. 4, unconscious from the burns caused by boiling tar.

Skin-grafting was deemed impracticable, and physicians at the hospital decided to try the effect of chemically-treated air on the burns. As a result seventy-five square inches of surface have healed.

A special framework of pliable wood was designed to fit securely about the body of the patient from the mouth to the waist. The burned surface from the chin down was exposed to the air that filtered through chemically-treated gauze stretched on the frame.

KNOW YANKEE GIRLS BY EXPRESSIVE EYES

Foreigners, Says Ruckstuhl, Rarely Make Mistakes in Picking Out Americans.

TO SEE GIRL OF TO-DAY

Artists Show Keen Interest in The Times Christmas Number with Special Rotogravure Section.

The distinguished artists who acted as judges in the selection of the typical American girls and "The Girl of To-day" from the hundreds of photographs sent in response to the invitation of THE NEW YORK TIMES, are looking forward to the appearance of the Christmas number, containing the special rotogravure section with the keenest interest, judging from the comments heard during a succession of visits to their studios. The Christmas number, which besides the rotogravure section devoted to "The Girl of To-day" and types of American girls, and the regular pictorial supplement which follows closely the news of the day, will contain a colored section in which the famous frieze of John S. Sargent, "The Prophets," in the Boston Public Library, will be produced in the three colors of the original. It will be published on Dec. 7.

One of the artists, in discussing "The Girl of To-day," remarked yesterday that in his opinion no foreign artists could portray correctly a typical American girl. "I believe a painter is bound to put something of his own nationality into the picture of any woman he paints, and a Frenchman invariably will put something Parisian into the face of an American woman he paints, and a German will be bound to give her countenance a Teutonic tinge. As for an Englishman, he simply cannot paint an American girl.

"On the other hand, I think the average American painter could not portray faithfully an English girl. I cannot, I am bound to make her look like an American. When I was studying in Paris, I often tried to paint French girls, yet there was always something I could not get into the picture that a French artist would have done, some touch I failed to give that would make the portrait look really French."

F. W. Ruckstuhl, a well-known artist, was relating the other day some experiences which, in his opinion, demonstrated conclusively that the American type was recognizable by any European, even though the subject under discussion had been born in another country.

"I hold that anybody who has lived long enough in this country to have become a part of the life here acquires something that is not to be found elsewhere," he said. "Everybody can tell an American girl abroad, and anybody over there can tell an American man, even if the latter was born a citizen or a subject of some other country.

"I myself was born in Alsace of French stock, coming to this country with my parents when I was a baby. Some ten years ago, while in Paris, I walked up to a kiosk to buy a paper. It happened to be a French paper that I wanted. Now I did not have a stitch of clothes on that I had not bought at the Bon Marche; my beard was trimmed in the French fashion. I did not open my mouth. But as I got to the stand the old woman in charge pulled down an American paper and handed it to me, with a 'Voila, Monsieur'! (There it is, Sir.)'

"'How do you know I am an American?' I demanded.

"'Ah, you have the American eye, all right,' she replied.

"A shrewd Arab, on my trip up the Nile, in 1900, also spotted me as an American. I tried to pass myself off as an Englishman, but it would not work. Then I protested that I was born in France.

"'No matter, master,' he replied, 'you have de eyes what is American.'

"The chief distinguishing element in the Girl of To-day in America is her eyes, and the expression of Americanism that radiates from them. Europeans who are jealous of her call it 'Americanitis.'

In the special rotogravure section of the Christmas number there will be presented twenty-nine of the pictures of typical American girls selected by the jury of artists—that of the Girl of To-day covering the entire front page of the section. The remaining sixty-one of the pictures of typical American girls selected will be published on the Sunday following the date of the publication of the Christmas number.

FINE AUTOGRAPH QUILT.

Signatures of 840 Noted Persons—To be Sold at Church Fair.

A remarkable autograph quilt is to be on exhibition and afterward sold at the Fair in the Manhattan Congregational Church, Broadway and Seventy-sixth Street, on Wednesday and Thursday, next week. It is composed of forty-two pieces, each containing twenty autographs, which have been overrun in fast-colored thread to render them indelible.

The autographs are from well-known persons in all parts of the world. The Washington block, for example, contains the signatures of President and Mrs. Wilson, Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, and all the members of the Cabinet with their wives. In the South African block are the signatures of Sir Francis Oates, Chairman of the Directors; Alpheus Williams, the general manager, and other officers of the De Beers diamond mines in Kimberley, and Sir George Allen, Sir Lionel Phillips, and others in the management of the Rand gold mines. The Egyptian square contains the names of Mahmoud Soublie of the Imperial Ottoman Bank, and his brother, a professor in the Cairo College, and Andrew and Margaret Watson, for fifty years American missionaries in Cairo. The United States Army square has Gen. Wood, Gen. Porter, Gen. Thomas and many other officers. The Navy is represented by Admirals, Rear Admirals, Commodores and lesser officers. New York State has Col. Roosevelt, the late Mayor Gaynor, Ambassador Gerard, Francis Burton Harrison, Governor of the Philippines, and John Hays Hammond; also railroad presidents and many officers of the better known women's clubs.

Connecticut has ex-President Taft, Gov. Baldwin, Judge Edwin S. Thomas, and from many other States are the signatures of scores of the more prominent public men.

The quilt will be of especial interest to autograph collectors, and to all who read character in handwriting, as the signatures are guaranteed genuine. It will be sold without reserve for the highest offer made for it.

Anti-Snuff Law Held Valid.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 27.—The North Dakota law prohibiting the sale of snuff passed at the last session of the Legislature is Constitutional, according to a decision of the State Supreme Court. The plea that the law singles out a certain alleged vice without abolishing others, the court says, is unsound, as "no criminal should be allowed to escape punishment because some one else is more of a criminal or more dangerous to society than he."

SHIPWRECKED MEN LOSE THEIR TURKEY

Sailors from the Brookline Not Allowed to Land from Ship That Brought Them Home.

CITIZEN PAPERS LOST

Now They Must Wait Until Agents of Their Line in Boston Certify That They Are Americans.

When the steamship Christopher of the Booth Line arrived yesterday at the foot of Fulton Street, in Brooklyn, six seamen from the three-mastered schooner Brookline, which was wrecked off St. Phillips, Barbods, on Nov. 11, offered up prayers of thanksgiving at being safe in port once more. Their happiness was dimmed somewhat by the fact that five of the six men were not permitted to land because they had no citizenship papers. They will be held on the Christopher until the agents of the wrecked vessel vouch for them.

The Brookline is a vessel of 485 tons, and is owned by Herbert W. Splaine of Boston. Her crew consisted of Capt. John Kerrigan, who stayed in Barbodos to direct the work of salvage, and the six men who arrived yesterday. They are Patrick Welsh, mate; Harry Barber, steward; Ludwig Johnson, John Harley, Alfred Carlson and William Lilligeborg, deck hands. The crew all shipped from New York. The Brookline sailed from this port on June 24, loaded with hard coal. She stopped at Halifax and continued to Limerick, Ireland, from where she sailed in ballast for Barbodos.

The trip was uneventful until the Barbados was sighted. When off St. Phillips the vessel ran into a heavy current and a calm. Owing to the lack of wind she drifted slowly toward shore and struck a submerged rock, which tore a hole in her bottom. Water flowed into the hold and all hands manned the pumps. For thirty-six hours the struggle was kept up, but the water gained so fast that Capt. Kerrigan decided to beach his boat. This was done in shallow water at a considerable distance from shore. It was decided that it would be easier to don life preservers and swim ashore than to launch the lifeboats. The men did not figure on the heavy current, and when they got in the water found that they were in danger of drowning. According to Mate Welsh several hours elapsed before all succeeded in landing.

As the men lost all their belongings, they were compelled to ask the Consul at Barbados for a passage back to New York. The Consul obtained quarters for them in a place known as the Sailors' Retreat. The recollection of this place, the sailors said, made them shudder. Capt. Davis of the Christopher gave the shipwrecked men clothes and quarters on his boat, and they prepared to go to the homes of relatives in this city and dine on turkey and plum pudding. The hardest shock of the whole trip was encountered when the men tried to quit the vessel. Harley was the only man in the crew who had clung to his citizenship papers. He was permitted to go, but the vigilant Government agents ordered the rest to stay on the Christopher until they could prove that they were entitled to land. Their Thanksgiving dinner was confined to the fare provided for the ship's crew

CLARK ART CASE REVIVED.

Pictures Intended for ex-Senator Figure In Another Suit.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 27.—A suit was filed in the United States District Court to-day to require Eli P. Clark of this city to show cause why he should not deliver twelve paintings, said to be the work of William Hogarth, to Frank McKay, trustee for the bankrupt art concern of Tomlinson-Humes, Inc., of Chicago. While Clark is acknowledged as the owner, McKay, as petitioner, asks that they be ordered back to Chicago in fulfillment of a contract with Tomlinson-Humes to sell them.

The pictures were involved in litigation last Summer when it was alleged that the paintings, originally purchased in Buffalo for $60,000, were transferred to E. P. Clark with the understanding that Tomlinson-Humes would undertake to sell them to William A. Clark, former United States Senator, for $480,000.

WILEY FOR HEALTH HEAD?

City Hall Hears Mitchel Wants ex-Chemistry Chief.

When Mayor-elect John Purroy Mitchel returns from his vacation he will offer the place of Health Commissioner to Dr. Harvey W. Wiley of Washington, ex-Chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry, according to a report heard at the City Hall yesterday. Mr. Mitchel, it was said, had taken up the matter with Dr. Wiley, and expected to receive a definite answer from him by Jan. 1.

Ernst J. Lederle, who is now Health Commissioner, was appointed by Mayor Gaynor in 1910. Early in his administration the Commissioner was criticised, but the Mayor stood behind him firmly. The Commissioner could not be found yesterday, but his friends said that they did not believe Mr. Mitchel would remove him. Mr. Mitchel and the Commissioner, they said, had long been friends.

NAVY FOOTBALL TEAM HERE FOR BATTLE

MIDDIES GO TO BED EARLY

They Will Limber Up on Hotel Roof This Morning and Drill at Polo Grounds in Afternoon.

The Navy football squad, accompanied by the coaches and several academy officers, arrived last night and are at the Hotel Vanderbilt. With the party came the Navy goat, the midshipmen's mascot, which will amble up and down the sides of the gridiron to-morrow and try to get across to butt the Army mule. The football squad is in charge of Lieutenant Commander Roger Williams, while the head coach, Lieut. D. L. Howard, has charge of the 'Varsity players. Other coaches with the team are J. J. Reilly, field coach, Jack Cates and Herman Olcutt, former Yale players; Prof. Paul Dashiel, Ensigns Loftin, Hall and Shaw, the team's physician, Dr. R. W. McDowell, and Scotty McMasters, the trainer.

As the Navy team trooped into the hotel they looked like an army of giants. Eight of the Midshipmen are over 6 feet tall. Howe and Brown, the two massive guards, towered above the other players. Howe weighs 205 pounds and Brown 204 pounds, and both are 6 feet 2 inches in height.

The players are all in good physical condition, and none of them shows any signs of the season's campaign aside from a few scratched faces. Trainer McMasters sent the players to their rooms as soon as they arrived, and they were all tucked away for the night at 10:30 o'clock, with orders that they should not be disturbed until 7:30 A. M. This morning the players will take a little exercise on the roof garden of the hotel, and early in the afternoon will go to the Polo Grounds, where there will be an hour's secret practice. The Navy will finish practicing at 2:45 o'clock, when the Army will begin practice for an hour.

There was a big gathering of local Navy men at the hotel to greet the visitors, and long after the players retired the officers and coaches chatted about the chances of the team against the Army. Although the Navy is rather confident of victory they are not holding the Army cheap. The fact that the Army season has had a few disappointments has driven the soldiers to greater efforts, and if the Navy men are willing to give odds on to-morrow's game, the money will not go begging.

The battalion of midshipmen will leave Annapolis on Saturday morning. The cadet corps from West Point will also arrive a short time before the game. A large number of visitors for the game are expected at the hotels to-night. Army and Navy decorations are already seen in the hotels and shop windows, and the city is ready to act as host for the Government's two service schools in their first football game played in this city.

Other arrivals with the Navy party last night were Lieut. Commander H. Osterhaus, Lieut. and Mrs. T. C. Kinkaid, and Lieut. Commander A. P. Fairchild, Secretary of the Navy Athletic Association, and Mrs. Fairchild.

Although the real inrush of Army and Navy men and their wives and daughters is expected not to assume large proportions until this morning, a good-sized number have arrived for to-morrow's game.

Rear Admiral William H. Emory has arrived at the Waldorf, where Mrs. Emory is expected to-day. At the Waldorf are also Rear Admiral G. Brocklinger, Commander and Mrs. C. B. Price, and Pay Director and Mrs. J. A. Mudd. The Army is represented at the same hotel by Col. M. Gray Zalinski and Lieut. and Mrs. Franklin Babcock.

SEND-OFF FOR THE NAVY.

Middies Assemble and Cheer Team as It Leaves for New York.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNOPOLIS, Md., Nov. 27.—The Navy football team left for New York this afternoon, accompanied by a final expression of confidence from the brigade of midshipmen. Not one of the midshipmen doubts that the Navy will win on the Polo Grounds on Saturday, making the fourth consecutive victory for that branch of the service.

One body of midshipmen escorted the players from Bancroft Hall to the electric cars at Sampson gate this afternoon, where the main crowd had assembled. Individual yells were given for the players from Capt. Gilchrist down and the cars started amid a final outburst of enthusiasm. At Odenton, sixteen miles above Annapolis, a train of the Pennsylvania Line was taken for New York. The party consisted of thirty-three players, Manager Hayler, Assistant Manager Thomas, and about twenty officers, coaches, and attendants. Lieut. Commander Williams has general charge of the party and Lieut. D. L. Howard, head coach, direct charge of the players.

ARMY TEAM AT ITS BEST.

Coach Daly's Squad Will Come to New York This Morning.

WEST POINT, Nov. 27.—West Point football enthusiasts got their last look at the Army team in its final workout on the "plains" this morning in preparation for the Navy game in New York on Saturday. Head Coach Daly had things all to himself this morning and put on the finishing touches to the cadets in a twenty-five minute drill.

The head coach gave out his lineup at the conclusion of to-day's practice as it will face the middies Saturday. It is as follows:

The squad of forty men, Coaches Daly, Boyers, Graves, Hammond, Stillwell, Sultan, Fullen, Hayes and Stearns, Trainer Harry Tuthill and his attendants, and one medical officer, will leave to-morrow morning over the New York Central for New York. They will depart at 8:30, returning to the post on Sunday at noon.

WOMAN HUREL FROM AUTO.

Instantly Killed by Fall and Child in Her Arms Is Injured.

WRENTHAM, Mass., Nov. 27.—With her four-year-old child in her arms, Mrs. Joseph Smith of West Somerville, Mass., was thrown from her husband's automobile when the machine skidded to-day and was killed instantly. The child escaped with a broken arm.

Mrs. Smith rose to her feet as the machine skidded and was hurled to the ground when the car stopped with a jerk.

Girl Killed by Work Car.

Special to The New York Times.

SCARSDALE, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Phoebe Williams, a domestic of Bronxville, was instantly killed here this afternoon when she stepped in the path of a work car of the Westchester Street Railway Company. The girl had visited with her sister Lucy, who is employed in the home of Charles K. Carpenter of Park Road, Scarsdale, and was returning to Bronxville when she was killed. She stood by the trolley tracks awaiting a car. The work car and two autos came along at the same time. Bewildered by the car and the machines, the girl in avoiding the autos stepped in front of the trolley and was instantly killed.

HEARST ASSAILS WILSON.

Says President Was Nominated by Railroads—Fling at McReynolds.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 27.—In a letter to The Boston Post that recently published an interview with Charles S. Mellen, in which the latter dwelt on the control exercised by Wall Street over the New Haven and other railroads, William Randolph Hearst pronounces Mr. Mellen's statements "an authoritative exposition of the evils and abuse of railroad monopoly."

"It locates the blame for the deaths of many unfortunate passengers and damage to business interests of New England upon the actually responsible individuals—the great speculative bankers of Wall Street," Mr. Hearst asserts. Referring to Attorney General McReynolds, he continues:

"It remains to be seen whether the special railroad representative of a railroad Administration will proceed against the individuals clearly shown to be responsible in the Mellen interview."

Mr. Hearst attacks the Wilson Administration on its railroad attitude, saying that "the Wilson Presidential boom was conceived in the veto of the Railroad Safety Crossing bill by Mr. Wilson when he was Governor of New Jersey; that the Wilson boom was definitely delivered at the Baltimore Convention under the leadership of Mitchell Palmer, attorney for the Pennsylvania Railroad, and that since the election of Mr. Wilson the Administration has done its best to show its appreciation of the railroad support which elected it."

Mr. Hearst instances in support of his contention the final reorganization plan of the Union and Southern Pacific Railroads, and the Attorney General's "specious Federalistic plea" made before the United States Supreme Court, in "an attempt to deny to the Railroad Commissions of Minnesota and Wisconsin the right to compel the railroads to do their duty to the citizens of those States," and the Administration's support of the plan to compel the coastwise shipping of the United States to pay tolls through the Panama Canal. He adds: "Undoubtedly, if the railroads can secure a canal toll on the intercoast shipping, they can impose the same additional charge on the intercoast railway transportation and recoup themselves for expenses involved in electing the present Democratic Administration."

SEES A WILSON SLUMP.

Penrose Also Scouts Talk of Roosevelt as Republican Moses.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27. — The principal cause for thanksgiving that this country has, from a political point of view, according to Senator Penrose, is that it will have an opportunity before long to vote the Democratic National Administration a lamentable failure.

"The Wilson Administration," the Senator said to-day, "is unpopular. All you have to do is to walk down Chestnut Street and enter a bank or drop in on merchants to learn that. Every election held recently has shown that the voters are displeased with the trend of affairs at Washington."

The declaration of a writer in a current number of a widely read publication that President Wilson's popularity from the Atlantic to the Pacific was immense, and that Old Guard Republicans would be obliged to shelve their dislike for Col. Roosevelt and back him for the Republican nomination for President as the only man behind whom the anti-Democratic opposition could rally with any prospect of success, was characterized by Mr. Penrose as "academic dope."

"Candidates for Governor, Supreme Court Justice, and even lesser nominees in these days of primaries are the result of prolonged consideration and evolution." This being Senator Penrose's opinion of State political conditions, he scoffed at the "presumption of political writers who are boosting Col. Roosevelt as the Republican Moses of three years hence."

TURKEY UPON THE WATERS.

Harrington Doesn't Know Who Cast It There, but He Got It.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—John J. Harrington, who said he came by freight train from Syracuse, was trying to be thankful, though hungry, on Commercial Wharf to-day, when he saw a market basket floating by. More because he had nothing else to do than because he expected to make a haul, Harrington got the basket, and nearly fainted when he pulled in a family-size Thanksgiving dinner.

Apparently some one had dropped a Salvation Army basket off Charlestown Bridge, for the handle was broken. It was a good dinner, but it was not cooked. Harrington had a bright idea. Entering a shabby looking tenement he found a poor Italian family about to dine on macaroni and cheese. By graphic sign language he struck a happy bargain and some time later was presiding over an enthusiastic turkey dinner party.

NO THANKSGIVING PAROLE.

Pittsburgh Prisoners Don't Get Released in Time.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 27.—Eighty prisoners in the Western Penitentiary here, who have been waiting since Monday for the cheering news from the executive officers in Harrisburg that they were to be released on parole in time to spend Thanksgiving outside the prison, were disappointed this morning when the postman failed to leave the coveted papers.

The applications were passed upon by the State Board of Pardons, but it was understood at the penitentiary that the clerical work required, before they could be submitted to Gov. Turner for his approval was so great that it could not be completed yesterday.

LUNN CALLS CONFERENCE.

Schenectady Mayor Seeks to End General Electric Strike Trouble.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 27.—The sole development of importance in connection with the walkout of 15,000 employes of the General Electric Company to-day was the calling by Mayor George R. Lunn of a coonference of men and company officials for to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

It is expected that the proposition of putting all the employes on part time will be formally considered.

Thirty special patrolmen were sworn in by the city to-day to be ready to act in case of trouble to-morrow morning when the gates at the plant will be thrown open again.

NEWS ITEM CAUSED TROUBLE

Philadelphia Paper Told of His Taking a Young Woman to a Hospital in That City.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 27.—Sheriff Robert N. Heath is awaiting the return of Freeholder Wendell J. Andreas of Teaneck so that he can serve on him papers in an action for divorce. Andreas has been absent from his home since last Friday. Harry A. Shuart, clerk of the Board of Freeholders, said to-day that Andreas told him he was going to visit his coal mines in West Virginia, but would be back for the regular monthly meeting of the board on the first Monday in December.

The complaint in action is very brief. It avers that Andreas was guilty of improper relations with a young woman unknown to Mrs. Andreas at the Chateau des Tourelles at Long Beach, L. I., on Aug. 22 and 23.

Mrs. Hattie Andreas, the plaintiff in the action, is a daughter of the late Supreme Court Justice Charles H. Van Brunt of New York. She is living temporarily with her mother and sister at 210 West Eighty-first Street, Manhattan. The couple were married by the Rev. David H. Greer at 108 East Forty-sixth Street on April 8, 1901. They have one child, a girl, 12 years old.

The couple separated about six weeks ago, when Andreas is said to have taken a young woman to a hospital in Philadelphia. A Philadelphia newspaper at that time contained an item to the effect that a Bergen County Freeholder had placed his wife in the hospital there for medical attendance. A member of the board saw the item, Andreas was identified with it, and then the matter became a subject for general gossip.

Andreas's mother is a wealthy widow. She is at present at the Hotel Hargrave, in Manhattan, and knows nothing of the trouble between her son and his wife, other than that they have separated. She has extensive coal mining interests in West Virginia, and travels a great deal. She lives with a younger son, Frederick, who is in the coal business at Broadway, Manhattan.

At Andreas's extensive estate at Teaneck, valued at about $50,000, and known as West Englewood, the foreman in charge said he had no idea where Andreas had gone.

"He promised to phone me of his whereabouts, but as yet I have not heard from him," he said, and added: "I really expected him home for Thanksgiving."

Andreas, when first chosen Freeholder to represent Teaneck Township, started in to reform the Republican Party, and the Teaneck Republican leaders later decided to run George A. Sipp as their candidate to succeed him. Andreas accepted an independent nomination and then engaged Capt. Hugh Coleman and his daughter, Miss Mary Coleman, both lawyers of New York, to visit Teaneck and tell the men and women there what they knew of Sipp's reputation in New York. Sipp was then running the Baltic Hotel in Harlem. Later he became a Curran witness. The Colemans caused many a blush in their Teaneck auditences, and, a more sensational campaign was never waged there. Andreas was re-elected as a result of their disclosures, and then Sipp sued the Colemans for criminal libel, but the suit was never pressed to trial.

On Nov 4 last Andreas was defeated for election, and it is believed that his own family trouble contributed largely to this end.

HELD FOR SHOOTING OFFICER

Holyoke Police Arrest Alfred Garipay After a Struggle.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Nov. 27.—Alfred Garipay, accused of shooting Michael J. Driscoll, a police officer of this city, early this morning, was arrested by the Holyoke and Chicopee police to-day.

The accused man and his brother, Joseph Garipay, who, the police allege, was with him when the shooting took place, were located near Willimansett, a suburb of Holyoke. After a struggle, in which revolver shots were exchanged, the two men surrendered. The police say both have bad records.

Driscoll is in a hospital in this city, and is regarded as in a critical condition. He was wounded in the right lung while trying to place Alfred Garipay under arrest.

HUSBAND SEEKS MALE FLIRT

Several detectives and, incidentally, an athletic husband are on a keen lookout for a male flirt, who is described as being tall, of dark hair, a small mustache, high-cheeked bones, and a pale complexion. He is wanted for following a young married woman about, accosting her, and sending a note to her at the Hotel Imperial. The husband is particularly anxious to meet the man, and he promises in that event to leave nothing for the detectives to do.

The young woman was first annoyed by the man several days ago. She went to call upon a friend living on the upper west side, and as she alighted from a taxicab the man got out of another near by. Immediately she came to the conclusion that he had followed her, and in her confusion she went up the wrong flight of steps, the man immediately behind her. Discovering her mistake, she descended, and found the correct number, the man following her up the second flight of steps. As she rang the doorbell, he touched her on the arm.

She was wearing some valuable jewelry, among other things a pair of earrings, which had been an heirloom, and her thought was that the man was a thief. At his touch she screamed, and just then a servant opened the door, and the woman rushed into the hall.

At this the man said, "There is no reason to disturb yourselves, ladies," and walked quickly down the steps.

On Thursday afternoon the man turned up at the Imperial, and as the young wife passed through the Red Room he pointed her out to a maid stationed there and asked that a note he held in his hand be delivered immediately to her. The maid suggested that he take the note to the desk and send it in the regular way, but he said he was in a hurry to get it delivered, and the maid did as she was told.

The note was written on Waldorf-Astoria paper and in an unmistakably foreign hand. It inclosed a stamped envelope addressed to "Clinton S. Fisher, General Delivery Post Office, New York." The note was full of misspellings and read:

My honorable young lady:

All my efforts have to my regret proven unavelling, to succeed in having the extreme pleisure of being introduced to you. You will forgive unusuel privledge in transmitting my message to you in this manner, which, if my note reached you, is the result of hard and untiring work, to merely have you know, that someone is very anvious to be favored with an interview.

I respectfully solicit your consent, to give me the opportunity to say, just a few words to you, if you are in a position to grant me my plel. A short reply in the enclosed envelope will reach me and owing to the uncertainty of the delivery of this note to you, I take liberty in proposing a luncheon at the "Hotel Astor" at 1 o'clock on Monday next. If my interview is granted, I look to you to suggest any other arrangement you may prefer. If you are prevented from granting me my request, I so respectfully propose, I will be thankful to have you reply to my note.

I beg you to take this event in the brightest view of life and humbly beg your pardon for my extreme liberty. Respectfully yours, CLINTON S. FISHER.

The luncheon appointed for yesterday did not come off. The lady turned the note over to her husband, and it was sent to the District Attorney's office, whence it was returned yesterday with the recommendation that it be turned over to the police.

LOOPHOLE FOR SALOON MEN

Fight Iowa Ruling on a Girl's Notarial Commission.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 27.—Saloon keepers whose places were closed by the decision of the Supreme Court Saturday, have applied for a rehearing and permission to reopen their places until the case is finally settled.

Attorneys for the saloon men gave nineteen reasons for a rehearing. Issue was taken with the court on the contention that Bessie Cohan, a stenographer, who failed to ascertain whether her notarial commission had been renewed, was disqualified from receiving the affidavits of those who signed the petition on which the saloons had been operating for two years.

Counsel for the saloon men contended that Miss Cohen's act had been legalized by special act of the Legislature.

SHOT FOR REFUSING $2 TOLL TO GUNMAN

Henry Street Knew Doxalovitch Had Just Sold His Coffee House for $75.

ATTACK SEEN BY PATRONS

The little Polish coffee house far down on the east side at 90 Henry Street was sold yesterday by Paul Doxalovitch to Samuel Chervia of 65 Canal Street, and while the deal was closed in the morning it was arranged that the restaurant should not change hands until to-day. So Doxalovitch, as he poured out the coffee for the fifteen men who sat at his bare tables early last evening, had $75 deep in one of his pockets, and was accordingly merry—and cautious. For Henry Street knew he had had the windfall, and he himself knew he would probably be visited by some of the younger gunmen of the neighborhood who would expect to exact tribute.

The small shopkeepers and restaurant men of that part of town have to carry the burden of the loosely organized gangs who sell peace for a consideration and who are particularly hard on the coffee-house keepers who are known to sell a little liquor now and then without having paid the State for the privilege. The toll is usually not more than a dollar, but there are not many dollars in in Henry Street.

So Doxalovitch kept an uneasy eye on the door as he dispensed coffee to his patrons, and he scowled when finally a youth sauntered in and peremptorily bade him hand over $2 out of his roll. He balked at first, and finally, as his customers were straining their ears to catch the details of the talk between the two men, he announced flatly that he would not give more than $1.

The single bill was produced grudgingly and handed over to the visitor who stowed it away in his pocket and then said:

"Is that all I get?"

Doxalovitch said that was all and turned as if to go on pouring coffee. At that the young man pulled a revolver out of his pocket, leveled it at the other man's head and fired. Doxalovitch went down between the rows of tables with a bullet wound in his right temple and the young man with the gun jumped out into Henry Street and fled. As he still had his gun with him, nobody followed.

The commotion among the patrons brought Patrolman Schnitzler from his post at the corner, and a little later the wounded man, unconscious, was on his way to Gouverneur Hospital, where the doctors said he would die before many hours. Meanwhile Lieut. Farley and Detective Morris of the Madison Street Station were getting what they could out of the customers who had been held in the coffee house as witnesses. From them came the account of the dialogue before the shooting, and from this source, also, the detectives obtained the description of the young man with the gun. Then they went out to look for him. He was not more than 20 years old and wore a peaked cap.

New Jersey Farmer Digs Up Iron Box Containing Coins and a Ring.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. J., Nov. 27.—While digging post holes on the border of his farm here to-day Edward Hildebrandt uncovered a small iron box about eight inches by ten inches in size. He pried it open and found inside a chamois bag, still in a good state of preservation, in which were an old-fashioned gold rope ring set with amethysts and some English coins of the date of 1713.

It is believed that some eccentric settler in these parts buried the money for safe keeping two centuries ago and died without revealing its hiding place.

FIGHTING AGAINST CONTAGION IN CITY

Dr. Lederle Reviews the Work Done to Prevent the Spread of Disease.

WE ARE ABREAST OF SCIENCE

Modern Methods, Improved Hospital Personnel, and Application of Science Are Keeping Down Death Rate.

In announcing a few days ago that hereafter "loose" milk of the grade sold in restaurants, soda-water fountains, lunch rooms, and hotels must be either pasteurized or certified, Health Commissioner Dr. Ernst J. Lederle pointed out as one reason for increased vigilance in watching the milk supply that during a recent typhoid fever epidemic on the east side the source of contagion for a whole district was found to be the milk sold "loose" in a certain store.

It is not generally known that the first actual provision for the hospital care and segregation of contagious disease in New York City was as late as 1855 when a hospital was built on Blackwell's Island. Since that time the work has grown, keeping pace with modern methods and increased learning. In the beginning of its hospital service the department found typhus to be the disease second in importance, so far as numbers were concerned, and first in importance in regard to death rate, with which it had to deal. The treatment in this disease was then, as now, purely symptomatic in character.

The one thing that the hospitals regarded as absolutely essential in preventing its spread was isolation and positive quarantine. The authorities worked upon a knowledge that the same measures that seemed to prevent the spread of smallpox seemed also to prevent the spread of typhus. The cause of the disease was unknown. It was not until the discovery was made of the way by which the disease could be transmitted that the sanitarian obtained knowledge which is effective in its control.

In 1885 the death rate from diphtheria was appalling and the treatment unsatisfactory. This year marked the beginning of the department work for the special care of diphtheria, scarlet fever, and measles cases. The Willard Parker Hospital was erected for the special care of diphtheria cases. In the latter disease various local applications in the form of antiseptics and the inhalation of the vaporized salt of mercury were employed, for the most part ineffectually.

Early in 1894 the reports of Von Behring, Roux, and Yersin suggested that a specific treatment for diphtheria would soon be available. Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, then director of the bacteriological laboratories of the Department of Health, visited the Institute for Infectious Diseases in Berlin, where Von Behring's experiments were being carried on. In the Summer of 1894 Dr. Biggs became convinced of the value of the new method in the treatment of diphtheria, and on his return presented a report to the board with a strong recommendation that an immediate appropriation be requested for the purpose of producing and using the new remedy.

The formal reports of the results of the treatment by Von Behring were not presented until October, 1894, but the department was then already engaged in the inoculation of horses for the production of the serum, and on Jan. 1, 1895, the first active antitoxin produced in this country was available for use both in the hospitals of the Department of Health and in the tenement houses. The authorities say that the results obtained by the use of this remedy were wonderful. They are now a matter of general knowledge. The death rate in uncomplicated diphtheria which had formerly been very high is now practically negligible, when antitoxin is administered early in the disease.

It was in the hospital laboratory, now the Research Laboratory, on the grounds of the Willard Parker Hospital that the first high grade antitoxin was produced, and it was in this same laboratory that the perfection of antitoxin by concentration and purification was first obtained. The Willard Parker Hospital for contagious diseases was therefore closely associated with these great advances in medical science.

In 1887, according to the Department Bulletin, Dr. O'Dwyer first published his article describing the operation of intubation, and it was in the hospitals of the Department of Health that it was most thoroughly demonstrated that this procedure was the means of saving many lives that otherwise would have been forfeited to laryngeal diphtheria.

The prevalence of broncho-pneumonia was so great in the Willard Parker Hospital in 1896 that the physicians in charge were forced to the belief that it was directly communicated from patient to patient. In an attempt to adopt measures of isolation a ward containing glass stalls was provided so that each patient, while in the same ward with others, was still separated from his neighbor. The results were so satisfactory that in a large percentage of the wards provided for contagious diseases this form of construction has been used.

Much experimental work of a research character has been carried on in the hospital laboratory. In regard to the cause of measles. The actual cause of this disease, the authorities say, has never yet been ascertained, but in 1910 from blood obtained from a case Drs. Anderson and Goldberger of the Hygienic Laboratory at Washington were able to produce the disease in monkeys. The occurrence in the City of Washington of an epidemic of measles since this experiment gave opportunity to verify their findings, and another step toward the discovery of the cause of the disease was taken.

In the wards of the contagious disease hospitals every method of attacking scarlet fever that offered promise of discovery has been employed. In 1904 Dr. Mallory, following in the footsteps of Guarnieri's pathological researches involving the cornea of experimental animals, found in the skins of scarlet fever patient's bodies of a protozoan type, which he considered the cause of the disease. His work was repeated and a careful study made of patients in the scarlet fever hospital at the foot of East Sixteenth Street, but beyond the fact that the bodies were present in the skin, nothing further was proved.

When, in 1875, the Riverside Hospital was transferred from the Department of Charities and Correction to the Department of Health, the cases treated there were solely smallpox. At that time, the Bulletin points out, the treatment of this disease was primarily preventive, that is, it consisted in vaccination. The treatment of a developed case was purely symptomatic without any idea of curing the disease.

The Health Department Bulletin says: "After Pfeiffer's experiment which demonstrated the germicidal effect of a specific serum, it was thought that possibly there might be in the blood of animals recovering from vaccinia a specific serum which would produce the desired effect. In 1894 Dr. Erasmus Wilson, pathologist of the Kingston Avenue Hospital, then under the Department of Health of the City of Brooklyn, experimented with this method at the hospital and reported to the Board of Health of that city that he believed he had succeeded in modifying the course of a confluent case. Previous to the use of the serum, the prognosis had seemed absolutely hopeless, and, subsequent to its employment, the patient had made a rapid and complete recovery with considerably less than the usual amount of pitting.

"At about this time this method of treatment was also in use in France, but the enormous amount of serum necessary (500 to 1,000 c. c.) precluded its general adoption. When Finsen reported the wonderful effects produced in lessening the pitting by the exclusion of the violet light rays, his method was adopted in the smallpox service of the contagious disease hospitals. Red panes of glass and red shades were provided in the smallpox wards. The results, however, were of a negative character.

"During epidemics, considerable difficulty was formerly experienced in differentiating cases of variola (smallpox) from cases of varicella (chickenpox). In 1903, by inoculation with material furnished from the smallpox wards of Riverside Hospital, Dr. Park, the Director of the Research Laboratory then called the Hospital Laboratory, succeeded in producing the typical lesions of smallpox in monkeys. As these animals are known not to be susceptible to infection with the virus of chickenpox, there was thus supplied an easy and ready method of confirming the diagnosis."

The department boasts that while better buildings and more improved methods of treatment were progressively employed in the hospital service, the personal service to the patients has also improved. In the beginning helpers of a low grade and trusties were in charge of the unfortunate victims of contagious diseases. A little later Sisters of Charity helped to raise the hospitals from this condition, and as soon as the services of specially trained nurses could be obtained they were employed. Now the term "pest house" is almost forgotten, and parents seek to have their children admitted to contagious disease hospitals that they may receive the benefit of the treatment, of long experience and leave their homes free from the dangers of infection.

GATHERS IN 800 ALCOHOLICS

Salvation Army Gets Forty Pledges at Drunkards' Service.

Forty wagon loads of east side saloon frequenters, described by those who knew as "intoxicated, more intoxicated, and drunk," were gathered up by the Salvation Army yesterday afternoon and taken to the headquarters, 120 West Fourteenth Street, to listen to speeches on temperance. It was the first "drunkards' service" the Army had had in years, and some 800 attended. Adjt. George Cook presided, and was aided by "Father" Duffie, a convert of thirty-two years' standing. The meeting was a great success and there was no disorder.

At the close about forty of the down-and-outs pledged themselves never to touch another drop. These men were immediately sent to various institutions maintained by the Army. They will have a chance to earn money and to rehabilitate themselves.

The Rescue Society, which maintains a mission and settlement in the old Chinese Theatre at 5-7 Doyer Street in Chinatown, spread wooden plates heaped with turkey for 1,400 last night. There were many women present, but not a single Chinaman partook of the American feast. All the streets of Chinatown were lined with applicants, and it was nearly midnight before the last of the hungry was fed. T. J. Noonan, Superintendent of the mission, was in charge of the dinner.

PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO OUR SURGEONS

Australian Physician Says Their Work Is of the Highest Excellence.

IS MAKING A WORLD TOUR

Saw Some "Bungling" in Paris—Marvels at Research Studies of the Rockefeller Institute.

Dr. R. S. Bowker, an eminent Australian surgeon who left New York yesterday for Philadelphia after ten days in this city, is making what he calls a "surgical tour" of the world. Dr. Bowker is not performing any operations, but he is engaged in seeing what the foremost surgeons of the world are doing, and in ten days in New York he has spent most of his time watching the work of some of the most skilful surgeons here. He is enthusiastic over the methods of American surgeons.

Dr. Bowker is senior surgeon and Director of the Sydney Hospital. He spent considerable time in Paris and in London and other English cities, but he said he practically had no time to do any sightseeing. Dr. Bowker says the word "graft" in Australia has an entirely different significance from its application here, and several times during his stay in New York he had to check himself, for fear of giving offence by calling a man a "grafter," or mentioning that he was "grafting."

"I should say that a 'grafter' in the Australian sense is about the same as a 'hustler' here," said Dr. Bowker at the Bresiin yesterday. "When we speak of a man 'grafting his way,'" we mean he is doing the finest sort of work, and intimate that he is bound to arrive. So you can imagine that having learned the American use of the word, and being in the habit of using it a great deal in the Australian sense, I have been on the point many times of giving unintentional offense in an attempt to express my admiration of some one of your distinguished surgeons.

"I have visited the Rockefeller Institute and seen something of the really wonderful work that is being done there. Certainly the research work that is being done there is of the greatest service to the world. Most of my time I have been watching operators in the various hospitals. As we would say in Australia, the surgeons here and in England are 'on the ball,' that is a football term. In the matter of hospitals Paris is behind.

"One thing that impresses the seeker for information is the great amount of money that is behind the hospitals here. It struck me that the Mount Sinai, the Presbyterian and others I have seen, are very heavily endowed. As for the Rockefeller Institute, certainly Mr. Rockefeller could not have done a better deed for humanity than to endow that institution in the way he has.

"Radium is being used a great deal in London. We have quite a big supply of radium, comparatively speaking, in our hospitals in Sydney, and when I get back I propose to go in for using it extensively. Some of the London surgeons, I found, are getting good results with it. Sir Alfred Pearse Gould's work, some of which I saw, is very wonderful, as is that of Dr. Glendening of London. I am taking back some of the serum discovered by Prof. Werner of Heidelberg for cancer.

"There is a good deal of cancer in Australia in proportion to the population. You see, we have only about 5,000,000 inhabitants, but almost a fourth of these are settled in the two cities of Melbourne and Sydney, and most of our people crowd into towns.

"The Radium Institute in London I found them doing fine work with superficial cancer, but the general surgeons are accomplishing wonderful results with the more dangerous forms of the disease. The Radium Institute now owns $400,000 worth of radium, in our hospitals in Sydney we have about $20,000 worth. Pitchblende exists in Western Australia at a little place called Pilbarra, but only a very small quantity of radium is produced.

"It would be difficult for me to single out the work of any of your surgeons as exception," said Dr. Bowker, in answer to a question. "I have found so many here who are doing remarkable work. One thing about English surgeons is that they are not fond of learning what surgeons of other countries are doing. They think they are doing the best work, and they try to argue you into feeling so. Here they keep an eye on what is going on in surgery everywhere, and keep an open mind; so if somebody elsewhere finds out something that is really worth while, they are keenly interested in it and are willing to admit its good points.

"The point of view of some English surgeons is very much like that of the average English bootmaker, whose father and grandfather never were accustomed to make half and quarter sizes, and who thinks too much of the traditions of his trade to stoop to such a thing. He will make your shoes just so, and if they don't fit, that's your concern, not his.

"I find a great many points in common between America and Australia, I must say, that as far as I have seen them, I look upon your surgeons here as great men, and that is why surgeons from all over the world make pilgrimages to see their work, as the Mohammedan from the remotest corner of the world goes to Mecca—if he can get there. Such operations as I have seen here could not be performed better, and that I think is the highest tribute I can pay. In Paris, while there are one or two excellent men, there are not so many as here or in London. In the former city I saw several operations where there was bungling."

WATCHUNG HOUNDS RUN.

Several Riders Come Croppers in Twenty-Mile Ride.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 27.—A large number of riders turned out this morning at the Baltusrol Golf Club for the annual Thanksgiving Day run with the Watchung Hounds. The chase, which covered a distance of more than twenty miles, was full of thrills and excitement not alone for those in the field but for the many farmers and their families over whose farms the line was laid, and who viewed the run from their housetops, as well as for many auto parties that followed along the near-by highways, from where much of the fencing could be seen.

At one time or another during the run Beverly Brown, C. E. S. Bellows, H. L. Finch, and Miss Marjorie Dana and Jacques Cartier of New York came to grief, but fortunately, with the exception of Mr. Brown, all escaped with nothing more than a shaking up, and were able to continue.

The hounds were cast in on the Golf Club grounds, and made a straight line for Mountainside on the Springfield road, where they were checked for the first time. They were taken up again and cast in near by on the Miller estate, going in the direction of Garwood, and checking at the old Fair Acres race track. The hounds were taken up again and cast in for the final line near Westfield, crossing numerous farms, and finishing at the Plainfield Country Club.

Those in at the finish were R. C. Finch, M. F. H., L. E. Smith, R. H. Towner, H. A. Bourne, H. L. Finch, Miss Gertrude Noe, S. D. French, E. R. Finch, H. S. Hollis, Miss Marjorie Dana, Gordon Douglass, Jacques Cartier of New York, and Huntsman Harrison.

Collier Hounds Out for Run.

RED BANK, N. J., Nov. 27.—For eight miles over hills and dales in Middletown and Holmdel Townships the pack of hounds from Robert J. Collier's kennels at Wickatunk gave the Monmouth County Hunters a lively chase after the elusive fox that withdrew from cover to-day in the woods of Mrs. Charles H. Bennett's farm near the Middletown Railroad station.

Many high fences and broad ditches were encountered by the huntsmen, and during the drive W. L. Herbert, Master of the Hounds, and Miss Margaret Tompkins were unseated, but neither was injured and remounted, finishing with the others. After circling about on the Bennett farm the fox finally eluded the hounds by ducking into a thick piece of woods near the Village of Holmdel, where it went to cover. On the return trip two more foxes were drawn out of cover, but the huntsmen did not give chase. During the greater part of the chase Miss Mary Jones, mounted on the high-bred jumper Coronation, was in the lead.

Others in the hunt were William Stonebridge, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, on Silber Buck; Miss Rachel Field, the Misses Mary and Grace Conver, Miss Helen Hughes, Mrs. L. L. White, Mr. Jones, Walter McClure, on Clermont; W. L. Herbert, on Handy Boy; Thomas S. Field, and three whips. About fifteen automobile parties followed along the highways.

The next hunt will be held Saturday, the start being made from Lincroft. The December schedule of the Monmouth County Hounds follows: Wednesday, the 3d, starting from kennels, Wickatunk; Saturday, 6th, Red Bank; Wednesday, 10th, Marlboro; Saturday, 13th, Fox Hunt, Middletown; Wednesday, 17th, Holmdel School; Saturday, 20th, Wickatunk; Wednesday, 24th, Shrewsbury; Saturday, 27th, Red Bank.

HESTER STREET'S BAD NAME

Jewish Immigration Bulletin Protests Against Calumination.

Under the caption "The Metamorphosis of a Street" The Jewish Immigration Bulletin for the current month contains a vigorous defense of Hester Street and a protest against keeping that east side thoroughfare in the category of streets mediaeval and un-Occidental, in which it has been pigeonholed by untold numbers of writers and speakers ever since it began to lay its narrow child-strewn way through the narrow, child abounding East Side.

"It is true that the physical appearance of Hestar Street leaves much to be desired," the writer, concedes, "but that is hardly the fault of the residents of that street. Writers have delighted in pointing to it with the finger of scorn, and taken all in all Hester Street has had to live down a reputation none too good. Hester Street never did anything bad, and the people there are decent, law-abiding citizens, but it pleased sociologists, reformers, investigators, and all sorts and conditions of men to decry it. Hester Street dwellers cared very little about what was being said concerning them. They went their way, and behold, their street has undergone a metamorphosis, showing that the men and women and the young men and the young women and the boys and girls have soul.

"Primarily Hester Street is a business thoroughfare. It is a mart, not merely a pushcart market, but a street of stores with electric signs and beautiful goods displayed in the show windows. Hester Street has the most beautiful public school building in the city, denoting that the street is not so mean as some would have us believe."

The writer then describes one of the new tenements erected on Hester Street, with electric lighting, steam heat, pleasant interior and exterior workmanship, and all that in another neighborhood would make it an apartment house.

"The changes that have taken place in Hester Street," says the article, "could only have been possible through the will and the determination of those who dwell therein. If the opinion of the outside world would have been considered and since 'give a dog a bad name and you might as well hang him' is still a proverb holding good even in these days of altruism, Hester Street would never have undergone and never would undergo any transformation.

"Hester Street has been evolved from within, and what will the picturesque and the bizarre writers do now? Like 'Hamlet' without Hamlet the ghost finds his occupation gone."

Boxes for Game Unsold.

The New York Baseball Club sent out a notice last night that many of the $5 and $100 boxes for the Army and Navy game to-morrow at the Polo Grounds were still unsold. There are four seats in each box. This makes the box seats now on public sale cheaper than tickets agencies are asking for seats in the stands and bleachers. The New York Club posted this notice at the Hotel Imperial last night, where reserved $5 seats are offered at as nigh as $40 a pair. At some of the other hotels tickets are being offered at these high prices. Several of the ticket agencies are offering high prices for tickets for the game.

WOMEN SLEUTHS CATCH A FUGITIVE

Trail Man Sought for Fourteen Months to a Flat Where He Lies Ill.

HE GOES TO A HOSPITAL

Wolf Charged with Stealing $10,000, the Savings of Years, from a Woman in a Stock Deal.

Accused by a woman of having stolen more than $10,000 from her in the course of a stock transaction and trailed by the police ever since he departed from this city fourteen months ago, Frank Wolf was arrested last evening, on the day of his return to New York. He was arrested in the apartment of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Wilhelmina Schaper when detectives, two women and a man, from the personal staff of Police Commissioner Waldo closed in upon the apartment house at 1,575 Franklin Avenue, the Bronx.

The woman who accuses Wolf is Mrs. Francesca Grodinert of 380 Hopkins Avenue, Astoria, and the money she says she lost in this stock deal with Wolf is said to be the savings of many years. Her story was told to Chief Magistrate McAdoo, and he issued a warrant charging Wolf with grand larceny.

Commissioner Waldo had heard intermittently of Wolf in the fourteen months of his absence from New York, and in keeping track of the fugitive he was assisted by Mrs. Isabella Goodwin, a graft detective, and by Lieut. Costigan. Mrs. Goodwin's search for the missing man had taken her far from New York. When the news came yesterday that Wolf had come back, Mrs. Goodwin, accompanied by Adele Preiss, a police matron assigned to detective work, and Detective Jessup, went to the Franklin Avenue house.

Mrs. Goodwin and Jessup took up their stand in the hallway of the apartment house, and the other woman was sent upstairs to investigate. She was admitted to Mrs. Schaper's apartment, and asked to see Wolf. He was lying on the divan in the dining room, wrapped in a bathrobe. She saw that he was the man the police wanted, and, apologizing for having come to the wrong house, hurried downstairs and in conference with Jessup and Mrs. Goodwin. Then the latter went upstairs and arrested Wolf.

Wolf proved to be had returned to New York seriously ill and very tired. He said that when they send him to a hospital instead of a cell, so an ambulance surgeon was sent in from the Tremont Station and Wolf was taken to Fordham, where he stayed last night as a prisoner.

According to Mrs. Grodinert's story as it was told to the Bronx last night, she met Wolf through the introduction of a fortune teller who had recommended investments under his guidance.

FREIGHT WRECK AT SUFFERN

Passenger Engine Hits Wreckage Later and Two Firemen Are Injured.

Special to The New York Times.

SUFFERN, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Two west bound freight trains were in collision here early this morning, delaying other trains for many hours. Train 83, in charge of Engineer Crane and Conductor Jones, ran into the rear end of an extra freight train, plowing through fifteen cars, setting fire to the débris and blocking three tracks.

At 3:45 P. M. the westbound passenger track was supposed to be clear, and as train No. 7 passed the wrecked engine their cabs met, carrying the steam dome from the large freight engine and tearing out the steam pipe of the passenger engine. The two firemen of the wrecked freight engine were severely scalded.

She had sent her brother a wireless message, as he did not expect her on the Oceanic, but he did not receive the message. When he learned of his sister's detention Mr. de Vengoechea went at once to the immigration authorities and obtained her release. Then he took his sister to the Hotel Gotham, where he lives.

AUTO KILLS CYCLIST.

Andria Ran Directly Into Strohmeier's Car on Viaduct.

Jennaro Andria, 22 years old, a printer, who lived at 172 Bleecker Street, spent yesterday bicycling in Hudson County, New Jersey, with Dominick Capuzzo of 77 Macdougal Street. Late in the afternoon they were coming over the viaduct leading from West Hoboken to Hoboken. At the bridge there is a sharp turn and Andria ran directly into an automobile coming up the viaduct. It was driven by Frederick W. Strohmeier, who owns a chain of butcher shops in Hudson County and lives at 432 Monoestry Street, West Hoboken.

Andria was killed instantly. Mr. Strohmeier left [illegible] wife and daughter, and after the accident he surrendered to the police in Hoboken. He was arraigned before Acting Recorder Hensel of West Hoboken and paroled for a hearing to-morrow.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The $33,000,000 project for flood control in the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys in California will be considered by the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors at a hearing to be held on Dec. 6.

A California commission has been urging the need of a Federal appropriation to stop floods and advocating a total of $33,000,000, of which the State would provide $22,000,000.

There are also pending projects for flood control in the Mississippi Valley.

DO NOT NAME FURS.

Retailers Cite Reasons for Change—Say Description Is Unnecessary.

A diversity of opinion exists among the retail furriers on Twenty-third Street as to the reason for the non-appearance of descriptive matter on the cards placed on fur pieces displayed in the windows. The price and the claimed real vaule only are given, while in other years it was the custom to name the furs.

One dealer said yesterday that the custom of naming the furs on these price cards had a deteriorating effect on the trade. He said that if furs displayed in a window bore the name of the particular skin on the price card the desire to obtain something in that particular fur was firmly fixed in the would-be customer's mind, and that if was difficult to interest the purchaser in any other kind.

"The similarity of many furs is misleading to customers," said this retailer, "and if the style and quality of the article appeal to them the name of the fur is secondary.

Another retailer asserted that his reason for omitting the names and descriptive matter from price cards was the fact that the public were so well acquainted with the various kinds of fur that it was a waste of space and time to describe them. When asked why the majority of the prominent department stores described the furs on their display cards he said that the inexperienced selling forces in department stores made it necessary for each piece to be named, otherwise the sales girls would not know what to call them. This, he said, was no reflection on the selling forces in the various stores, because different pelts were dyed and changed to such extents and so many new furs were coming out all the time that it almost necessitated an expert to judge them correctly in any case. The stock in his store contained no tags, he said, because his selling force was efficient and his stock was not so large that they could not know it thoroughly.

Another fur dealer on Twenty-third Street said that descriptive names on the fur tags were unnecessary because every piece of fur in his store was plainly marked as to grade and quality, and that customers were at liberty to examine these stock tags before making selections.

The buyer of the fur department in one of the big stores said that it was good business policy to name furs on price cards. Customers know, in the first place, that if the store shows a card bearing the name of a fur that the fur really is the variety claimed for it. The large variety of furs shown and named also adds to the prestige of an establishment. Customers like to be shown evidence of their supposed knowledge of furs by saying to the saleswoman: "Would you mind showing me a collar and muff similar to that model in mink that you have on display?" Giving the whole story, or as much of it as possible, on the limited space of a price card instills confidence in the customer, and everything conducive to confidence should be carefully utilized in these days of retail merchandizing.

GIANT MINE LOCOMOTIVES.

Two of Them, Weighing 30 Tons Each, Bought by Coal Company.

The Carnegie Coal Company has recently installed at its Charleroi, Penn., mine two of the largest mine locomotives ever built. These locomotives weigh thirty tons apiece, and are of the Baldwin-Westinghouse "barsteel" type. It is estimated that each locomotive can haul 100 cars, each loaded with three tons of coal, over the local grades.

The reasons for using such large engines are as follows, according to The Coal and Coke Operator: The Carnegie Company recently acquired the Charleroi mine, which is of considerable size and is well developed. A large production was desired from it, but the haul was about two miles long, with the grade largely against the load. Therefore, the average haulage locomotives of from fifteen to twenty-five tons were insufficient to keep the mine's production up to the estimated tonnage.

The newly purchased locomotives possess a number of interesting features. Each engine consists of two separate units which can be separated and used as fifteen-ton locomotives if desired. This use of two units in tandem is advantageous in such large machines because the weight is distributed over eight wheels instead of four. The locomotive therefore has greater tractive power, and its also easier on the track than if the weight were more concentrated.

The "barsteel" construction represents the most modern type of design. The frames are not built up of plates, but are formed of a grid of steel bars of heavy cross-section. The side frame of each unit is cast separately, forming a strong rigid construction. The openings in the frame give ready access for inspecting, oiling, replacing brakeshoes, and also provide thorough ventilation for the electrical apparatus, so that its all-day efficiency is higher than if the frame were partially inclosed.

PANAMA ENJOYING A GOLDEN AGE

Ninety-second Anniversary of Her Independence Finds Her in Great Prosperity.

HISTORY ONE OF STRIFE

Her Shores the Mecca of Pirates Until Spain Built a Costly Wall Around the Capital.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 20.—On Nov. 28 Panama celebrates the declaration of its independence from Spain, for on that day in 1821 it broke away from European rule and until Feb. 9, 1822, was an independent state. Then it became the Department of the Isthmus of the new Republic of Colombia, and its troubles, far from being over, continued almost without check until 1903, when the independence from Colombia was effected. The period of Colombian rule was one of strife, for when Colombia happened to furnish a capable and kindly Governor the Panamanians themselves waged an internal row.

The civil war in Colombia in 1828 and the war with Peru a year later both made matters worse for Panama. In the latter trouble Peruvian frigates sailed into the Panama harbor and destroyed most of the Panamanian ships.

Several times Panama attempted to cut loose from Colombia, but the revolutions were always put down and the revenge was sure and swift. From 1842 until 1903 there were twenty-two distinct revolutions in Panama. Many of them were settled in one battle and only three of them lasted more than a month or two. The Panamanian is brave and a fighter and every revolution meant bloodshed and more suffering for the Isthmus. Americans built a railroad, the French attempted to dig the canal, and other nations became interested in the little strip of land, but still the Panamanians fought with Colombia or among themselves.

In 1903 the United States attempted to deal with Colombia in an effort to build the Panama Canal. In the Fall of that year it became apparent that the Government at Bogota, the capital of Colombia, would not ratify the treaty allowing the United States to construct the waterway. Then followed the bloodless revolution of November, 1903, when, with the assistance of the United States Panama became independent of Colombia.

Treaty Ends Trouble.

On Feb. 26, 1904, Panama signed a treaty with the United States which practically ended its troubles for all time, for then it became a protectorate of the United States which since then has assisted largely in choosing its Presidents, cleaned up its cities, and contracted to pay it enough money to make it the most independent country, financially, in the world.

Panama has no bonded debt upon which to pay interest. It has invested in gilt edge mortgages in the United States $6,000,000, bringing in an income yearly of about 4½ per cent. There is $300,000 on deposit to guarantee the parity of its currency, and, after this year, the United States will pay a perpetual yearly rental of $250,000 for the canal. The income from taxation amounts to about $5,000,000 yearly, and there is no army, no navy, and no expensive courts to keep up. All money is available for improvements, and Panama is the only nation collecting interest on its own money instead of paying out interest on loans.

There is one school to every 165 children of school age in Panama, and nowhere in the country are there enough unemployed laborers to supply the demand for workers, and the large mining, agricultural, and timber interests are forced to import labor to operate their plants.

The country is rich in gold and hard woods. There is a fine field for agriculture and cattle raising. The United States has made the cities clean and healthy, and the interior of the country always was so. And so, after hundreds of years of strife, Panama has come into its own.

Famed for Its Fish.

The waters of the Pacific Ocean at Panama abound in splendid fish, and there is a tradition that the name Panama was the old Indian word for "place of abundance of fishes." At all events, after the execution of Balboa in 1519, the Spaniards began to explore the Pacific Coast and found a small fishing village called Panama, and on Aug. 15, 1519, Gov. Pedrarias announced that the place would be the site of his future capital, and established the first permanent settlement in the new world. Two years later a royal decree made Panama a city, and it became the seat of a Bishop.

For thirty years expeditions were sent out from Panama in search of gold and from here, in 1524 were started the voyages of Pizarro and Almagro, which ended in the discovery of Peru and the vast wealth of that country. On April 3, 1527, an expedition went overland through the divide at Culebra and sailed down the Chagres River to the Atlantic, traversing exactly the same route which the ships will take when the canal is finished.

This established a highway over which the wealth of Peru was transported to the Spanish treasure ships in the Atlantic, and even to-day small paved roads are found by the American engineers through the jungle from Old Panama to the head of the Chagres, which were built in 1534.

Panama was far from being a quiet place. Whenever the ships came in from Peru laden with gold and jewels there usually was a fight for some part of it. Pirates and contrabandists harassed the isthmus, but the city of Panama grew, and before 1550 the place had some 5,000 inhabitants with about as many more in the outposts, and a cathedral had been built.

Harried by Pirates.

This period saw the rise and decline of Panama. Spain's own decadence played a great part in the fall, as did the attacks of the English and French on the trade of the Indies and the inability of Panama to develop its own resources as the transisthmian trade decreased. But the pirates and buccaneers did more than anything else to wreck the country. Morgan and Drake and the others burned the towns, killed the inhabitants, and stole the plunder which had been brought up from the south. In 1671 the old city of Panama was destroyed and a few years later the present city, a few miles away, was founded in what was believed to be a safer place. To shut out the pirates and the enemies of Spain a sea wall was built around the new town in 1674, and it was successful. This wall, which is still standing, cost so much money that the King of Spain said that he did not understand why he could not see it by simply looking to the west out of the windows of his palace. Actually the wall is about thirty feet high and of the same width. It is built of stone and earth.

The milestones in Panama, after the independence from Spain in 1821, are the completion of the Panama Railroad (1855) and the start of the construction of the Panama Canal, in 1881. The first seventy years after the new town was built were quiet ones, marked by good government, but still years in which Panama was prostrate, because of the abandonment of the trade route. Then came ninety years of internal strife, and finally, on Nov. 28, 1821, came the declaration of independence from Spain. Panama was the last of the South American colonies to declare independence. The social movement, in Europe epitomized by the French revolution, made headway on the Isthmus slowly. When the other colonies were deserting Spain Panama remained loyal, the loyalty being based largely on incompetence. The lack of ethic unity on the Isthmus, of economic independence, distrust of Bogota, with whom her revolutionary destinies must be placed, and the presence of strong garrisons, all had an influence on that loyalty, and the home Government in 1814 conferred upon the Panamanian cities the title of "Faithful."

Why 20c a Quart for Milk?

What grade of milk do you buy for your table—for your children? You know all milk is graded. Some sells for 8c and some for 9c and some for 12c and some for 15c a quart.

What makes this difference in price? The quality and the richness of the milk have much to do with it. But the difference in price is due mostly to the amount of care taken with the milk, and the cleanliness of the hands and garments of the milkers and handlers of the milk.

Mothers of Babies, do you want your children to drink milk that is in the slightest degree short of the best and the cleanest? Thousands of babies being reared on milk produced to sell at a price will live and thrive because Nature is strong. But not all little infant bodies can day after day keep well and thrive on milk that is not up to the Briarcliff standard.

That is why there are mothers who pay 20c a quart for

and they know why they do it.

They do it because Briarcliff Milk is clean—so clean and pure that there is no need of anything being done to the milk to purify it or preserve it. It is fresh from the farm to you.

There is absolutely nothing spared, no precaution overlooked, and no little detail of sanitation disregarded to make Briarcliff Milk the sweetest, purest, cleanest milk that you can put to your lips.

Two Unique Features in the Christmas Number of The New York Times Sunday, December 7, 1913

"THE PROPHETS"

John S. Sargent's Famous Mural Paintings in the Original Colors.

THESE paintings are a feature of the Boston Public Library. They will be reproduced in the original colors on heavy paper, by the same process which was used when Abbey's "Holy Grail" and the Morgan pictures were issued by The New York Times. The complete frieze, as reproduced from a Copley print, copyright by Curtis & Cameron of Boston, is in three parts, 55 inches long and 10 inches wide. It will be suitable for framing, as there is no printing on the back. The picture is equal to anything ever offered in Christmas publications costing fifty cents and a dollar.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY

TO reproduce these photographs the new German rotogravure process will be used for the first time in an eight-page section of an American newspaper. The 29 photographs were selected by seven well-known artists from hundreds submitted after The Times asked its readers for pictures of young women whom they considered typical of the American girl. So many attractive photographs were found by the judges that it was decided not to limit the choice to the 29, as originally planned. The artists selected 90 altogether. The remaining 61 will be reproduced in a second rotogravure section on December 14—one week after the Christmas number. Soon after the beginning of the year the rotogravure process will be used in all the regular pictorial sections of The Times.

The two special Christmas sections will be given to Times readers in addition to the regular pictorial supplement. As an illustrated newspaper edition, the Christmas Number will be unique. There has been no other publication like it.

Christmas Number of The New York Times Sunday, December 7, 1913

WARNING: In issuing previous Special Editions The New York Times urged its readers to place their orders early, but thousands disregarded the warnings and failed to get the editions. The Christmas Number of this year (Sunday, Dec. 7, 1913,) will be sold out far in advance. The only way to get a copy is to order at once.

POMERANIAN BEST IN DOG SHOW --- CORNELL BEATS PENN --- RIVERS DEFEATS CROSS

POMERANIAN BEST IN TOY DOG SHOW

British-Bred Park Neuk Blackthorn Leads All Breeds at Waldorf-Astoria.

RESERVE FOR PEKINGESE

Close Competition for Blue Ribbons Before Big Crowd of Society and Dog Lovers.

British dog breeders again triumphed at the closing session yesterday of the eleventh annual show of the Toy Spaniel Club of America in the Astor Galleries at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, when Miss Marion Kennedy's black champion Park Neuk Blackthorn was declared the best dog in the exhibition. It was a clean-cut victory and emphasized the result of the Danbury show, when the English judge, George Raper, placed Miss Kennedy's Pomeranian reserve to Thomas W. Lawson's bulldog champion Centaur as the best of any breed. The reserve ribbon went to Mrs. M. E. Knight's Pekingese Tye See of Egham, which also captured the award for the best bitch of all breeds in the show.

With the completion of the regular classes, Judge H. W. Lacy began his task of selecting the winners in the special or unclassified division. The East Room, in which the judging was held, was filled with society folk and dog lovers, and unusual interest was centred in the final awards on account of the winners of the various breeds being apparently evenly matched. Ten of the leading representatives of the various breeds shown during the past two days were carried into the judging ring, and each had its little coterie of admirers, who lost no opportunity to show their partiality for their favorite breeds. The dogs were carried in weight from a few ounces to 15 pounds, and each was the best of its breed.

The result was somewhat foreshadowed by the decision of the judge in a preceding class, for the Mrs. Howard Gould Cup for the best toy dog under 12 pounds, when champion Park Neuk Blackthorne was placed first and Miss C. D. McGill's Japanese spaniel Cio Cio San received the reserve. In the unlimited weight class there was no change in the premier award, but Tye See of Egham showed to the best advantage for the second ribbon. That the award was generally approved was shown by the applause that followed the announcement.

The winning dog was acknowledged the best of its breed in England when it was imported to America for the Westminster Kennel Club show last February, when it won the championship. Park Neuk Blackthorne is an exceptionally good black Pomeranian, with unusual texture of coat, weighing about five pounds. It is short and thoroughly typical of its breed. While superior to its kennel mate, Invercwick Beauty in texture, it lacks somewhat the soundness in color of the latter.

The reserve dog, Tye See of Egham, has been the sensation of the show, beating several noted champions in the earlier classes, and its quality was demonstrated later, when the judge added to his reserve ribbon that of the best bitch in the show.

The holiday attracted another big crowd, which filled the galleries from morning until after 10 o'clock last night, when the final award was made in the unclassified specials. Society and prominent toy dog exhibitors were on hand in numbers, among them being:

Robert Goelet, Mrs. Benedict, Mrs. L. E. Estler, Mrs. Fred Edwards, Mrs. R. E. Colgenshaw, Mrs. Daniel W. Evans, Mrs. Aronstein, S. W. Adams, Miss Rose L. Freeth, Mrs. Clifford B. Bowers, Walter Burgess, Miss Clarice Lithauer, Miss Ellen P. Lattin, Miss Dorothy Ludlow, Miss Christine C. Whitney, Arthur Gorme, Miss Hosea Hirschmb, Miss Daisy Hall, Mrs. M. Koerlin, Mrs. R. E. Knight, T. Prentice Kellogg, Mrs. Arthur L. Holland, Miss D. Holland, Miss M. D. Harders, Mrs. Anna Hungerford, Mrs. M. E. Harby, Miss Mildred Holmes, Miss Ida Jacobsen, Mrs. Charles Halloway, Mrs. W. D. Hutton, Mrs. C. Heitermeyer, Mrs. W. W. Hadley, Mrs. C. H. Hallis, Mrs. P. Hewitt, Mrs. A. Taylor, Mrs. Orville H. Tobey, Mrs. Malcolm Strauss, Mrs. Arthur C. Scott, Frederick Phillips, Mrs. Frank S. Ogilvie, Mrs. Wilbur F. Parker, Miss Edith D. Stone, Mrs. J. G. Voorhees, and Mrs. John Jay Young.

The Boston terrier classes brought out some very good dogs, the bitches outclassing the dogs in quality. Friar Tuck, a puppy, took winners, coming from the brother puppy, Vermont. Winners in the bitch class went to Princess Iris, owned by Samuel Doran of Philadelphia. She is a grand specimen, and should in the near future carry the prefix of champion. Reserve winners bitch was Gloria's Betsy, owned by the President of the Woodmere Kennel Club. The toy Bostons were a fair lot, exhibited mostly by women.

Mrs. Fred Edwards Parsque Babette went through for the puppy to winners for French bulldog bitches, defeating one of the best puppy classes seen at a specialty show. The winner was bred by the exhibitor, and carries all the best points of her breed. Another new puppy, Mrs. Malcolm Strauss's Ganuquet, made an auspicious debut, and showed marked improvement over her previous display in the ring. She was a trifle thin, but an exceptionally good bulldog.

Competition in the Maltese terrier classes was on the whole poor. Several exhibitors took exception to the winner, Champion MacLeod's Little Sweetheart, on account of the condition of the teeth, but length and color of coat counted largely in the winner's favor. The same owner won again in the bitches class with MacLeod's Aneta.

The unpopular fawn won in Chihuahuas, both in dogs and bitches. The absolutely true type failed to find favor with the judges, who placed McGovern's Lady Vita first in bitches and Mrs. Owen's Concourse Wee Gold Nugget on top in dogs. The awards:

ANOTHER NO-SCORE TIE.

Fordham Ends Poor Season in Fruitless Game with Mt. St. Mary's.

In a nip-and-tuck battle at Fordham Field yesterday Fordham and Mount Saint Mary's fought to a no tie. Both elevens were evenly matched as regards ability and gameness, although the Mountaineers had the advantage in weight and brawn. Stiff defensive work on both sides prevented any chance of a score.

The Maryland collegians came up to Fordham with a formidable list of victories to their credit, and ruled favorite over the shattered team of the local college. For the first few minutes of play, however, all the fear of Fordham vanished, and it was the Maroon team that was the aggressor during the greater part of the game.

Mount Saint Mary's won the toss, and L. McMann kicked off. McDonough caught the pigskin at the 10-yard mark and dodged back thirty yards before he was downed. On the next play Robbin penetrated the line defense and carried the ball forty yards. A series of line plunges gave Fordham first down on the 12-yard line. After three chances against the line had failed, Quarter Back O'Connell called "Bud" Wynard back for a kick from placement. Keenan blocked the attempt and returned the ball to the 35-yard mark.

Fordham gained the ball again on downs, only to lose it when Kelly fell on a fumble. Mount Saint Mary's held the ball for the rest of the quarter and advanced to midfield by the aggressive line charging of Mahoney. Carroll proved the visitors' best ground gainer in the second period, making two 30-yard runs. After the first few minutes the ball see-sawed back and forth, gradually coming nearer the Fordham goal posts. In the last minute, with the ball in Fordham's possession, Wynard made his second attempt from placement on the 30-yard mark. The goal failed only a margin of less than a yard.

Mount Saint Mary's kicked off again at the beginning of the second half, and Sutton recovered the ball on the 20-yard mark, when Robbin fumbled. On the second down Conklin intercepted Mahoney's attempt at a forward pass. Three successive penalties for holding cost the Marylanders 45 yards.

Shortly after the opening of the last period the visitors made an attempt from placement. Dowdle dropped back to the 30-yard mark. He booted the low, however, and Robbin brought the ball back to midfield. The line-up and summary:

SYRACUSE WINS EASILY.

St. Louis University Overwhelmed by New York Football Team.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 27.—Before a crowd of 10,000 persons the Syracuse University football team this afternoon literally carried the St. Louis University team first across one-half of the gridiron and then across the other half, defeating the locals 75 to 0.

Johnson, quarter back, and Castle, left half back for Syracuse, gained more ground and scored more points for their team than did all the other visiting players together. Each made four touchdowns and Castle kicked eight out of ten goals. Added to this he brought a storm of applause by a spectacular run of 70 yards for a touchdown after successfully evading half a dozen opponents.

The St. Louis team was in better condition than at any time during the season, and put up the best fight of the year, but it was outweighed by the Syracuse team more than ten pounds to the man.

Farber, whose knee was sprained during the last quarter, was the only man to be injured during the game.

CORNELL SPRINGS SURPRISE ON PENN

Big Red Team Crushes Quakers Second Time in 21 Years—Score, 21 to 0.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 27.—Cornell closed her erratic season this afternoon by defeating Pennsylvania for the second time in the twenty-one years the two teams have met in football contests. The score was 21 to 0. It was a glorious victory for the Ithacans and it was joyously celebrated by the thirty-six hundred students who came down from Cornell to see the annual battle. Cornell's only other victory against Pennsylvania was in 1901, when the big red team won by the score of 23 to 6. In 1906 the teams played a scoreless tie.

With the exception of punting and forward passing, Cornell showed superiority in every department of the game. Her ability to advance the ball through the line and her quickness in fathoming Pennsylvania's intricate plays surprised the followers of the Quakers. The home eleven tried everything it had in the way of new and old football and Cornell was always there to stop it, with one conspicuous exception. This was in the third period, when Capt. Young of Pennsylvania ran 42 yards after receiving the ball from Chester Minds on a delayed pass. It was the longest sprint of the game.

Cornell played a powerful offensive game, especially in the first period, when the New York State eleven scored two touchdowns. Getting the ball in about midfield, Cornell twice took it over by straight football smashes against Pennsylvania's centre and tackles, and by short dashes outside of tackles. The second touchdown was made on more or less of a freak play. Cornell had taken the ball to the ten-yard line, where Barrett tried a field goal. He booted the ball low and it struck several Pennsylvania players and bounded over the goal line, where a Cornell man fell upon it. There was a conference among the officials and Cornell was allowed the score.

The final touchdown came toward the end of the last period. Cornell secured the ball on her own thirty-yard line and rushed it half way to the Pennsylvania goal. Then Fritz dashed around the right side of the Quaker line without interference for the touchdown.

At no period of the game was Cornell's goal line in serious danger. Pennsylvania once had an opportunity for a field goal, but a forward pass was tried for a possible touchdown, but it was not a success. Fritz and Barrett played dashing football and both showed ability. Despite his injured shoulder, Minds played his forward passes were long and well directed, but the receiving end of the play was slow in getting up to the ball.

After the game the Cornell students took possession of Franklin Field and performed the snake dance, afterward marching into town behind a brass band playing the tuneful Cornell song, "The Big Red Team." The line-up:

Cornell.	Positions.	Pennsylvania
Shelton	Left end	Mudock

Cornell Wild Over Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Cornell students went wild this afternoon when the returns indicated that their team was driving Pennsylvania to the woods. Immediately the "Big Red Team," which had been discarded as an ill-luck song after the Pittsburgh game last October, was brought out again. The bright reflection of the victory can be seen for miles around Ithaca from the huge bonfires built at different places around the campus, and the yells can be heard about as far. When the final score was flashed in the Cornell armory, where the returns were being received, the students snake danced about the campus and downtown, where they made things merry. Two night special police and the firemen are restraining the students, as were, to prevent damage by the boisterous undergraduates. During the hilarity in the armory Prof. T. F. Crane, who was Acting President while President Schurman was in Greece, was forced upon a platform, and he made a speech which inspired the students to more yelling. There was not a smooth voice on the campus late to-night.

AMERICAN SAILORS PLAY.

Connecticut Battleship Tars Win from Kansas at Genoa.

GENOA, Nov. 27.—A football match at the Stadium to-day between teams from the United States battleships Connecticut and Kansas attracted a great crowd, including many Italian military officers. The Connecticut men won the game by a score of 17 to 0. Martin, one of the Connecticut team, suffered a fracture of the right arm, and was sent aboard his ship.

Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty, Commander of the Fourth Division of the Atlantic Fleet, was presented with a gold medal as a memento of the occasion, and twenty-two gold medals were presented to the players.

W. and J. Defeats Bucknell.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 27.—Before a crowd of 5,000 spectators in a field of mire, the powerful Washington and Jefferson team defeated the Bucknell aggregation of gridiron warriors by the score of 52 to 0. The game was cleshiy played, only one penalty for holding being inflicted, and none for rough work. When the game began a drizzling rain was falling on College Field at Washington, while the lowering clouds rendered the day the darkest for the football year. Spiegel and Fleming, the sensational W. and J. half backs, were the shining lights of the contest. Spiegel's work was dazzling. He scampered through and around Bucknell on all kinds of formations. Bucknell's puzzling forward passes were of no avail. Topham, Gadnele, and Cruikshank starred for the visiting team.

LAFAYETTE 'SUB' TRIUMPHS.

Williams Carries Ball for Touchdown That Defeats Dickinson.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 27.—In one of the most thrilling games ever played on March Field, Lafayette closed her 1913 season with a victory over Dickinson by the score of 7 to 0. The day was cold and snow fell throughout the game.

The Dickinson team played much better ball than the score indicates. Dunn, the giant full back of the Carlisle team, with a little help by Wilson, played the entire offensive game for Dickinson. This combination made almost twice as much ground as the entire Lafayette team. The victory can be attributed directly to Williams of Lafayette, a freshman, heretofore ranked as a substitute player. He made Lafayette's touchdown in the early minutes of the game by a brilliant run through the whole Dickinson team for forty yards and a touchdown. All through the game he was in the limelight by virtue of his magnificent running with the ball.

The Lafayette defense was powerful at critical moments. Twice they stood within the ten-yard line, after Dickinson had consistently carried the ball over half the length of the gridiron. The game ended in a series of brilliant forward passes by Dunn to Sheeren and Goldstein, interspersed with plunges through Lafayette's opened up defense, which again brought the ball into the shadow of Lafayette's goal. The whistle averted a score. The line-up:

Lafayette.	Position.	Dickinson.
Furry	Left end	McWhinney
Beyer	Left tackle	Trego
Luhr	Centre	Hornberger

Substitutes—Lafayette, Woodward for Kelly, Blackburn for Scheeren, Fehr for Kennedy, Scheeren for Blackburn, Freeman for Gulick, Kethledge for Fehr, Gulick for Freeman, Pani for Gulick, Shilling for Pardee. Stamford Claims a Championship.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 27.—Stamford High School football team closed its season to-day by defeating Bulkley School of New London, Conn., 21 to 6, thus virtually winning the State championship, an honor which has been claimed by Stamford during the past three or four seasons. Off-side play and holding were largely responsible for Bulkley School's touchdown, the only one scored against Stamford this year. Stamford used the forward pass with a fair degree of success. Bronstein of New London broke his wrist in the fourth quarter period. Both De Witt Clinton and Morris High have declined to play Stamford this year, but steps are to be taken to offer a trophy for an annual game between Stamford and the champion school team of New York City. The line-up:

Stamford.	Position.	Bulkley School.
Rich	Right end	Gaffney
Grogan	Right tackle	Mulcahey
Elliott	Right guard	Noonan
Cook	Centre	Leary
Geary	Left guard	Heran

Pittsburgh Wins Close Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 27.—State College was defeated here to-day by the University of Pittsburgh in the final game of the season, the score being 7 to 6. Capts. Miller and Wagner both completed their football careers to-day and each was anxious to win. Unfortunately for the State Captain, he made a poor shot at goal after Clark had made a touchdown. A few moments later Williamson made a spectacular run of 67 yards aand ran over the line for Pittsburgh's touchdown. He also kicked goal. In the second part of the game the Center County boys made substantial gains on some beautiful forward passing, but the Pittsburgh line always held when their goal line was in danger. The game was played in a fog and on a field that was a quagmire of mud. The line-up:

Pittsburgh.	Position.	State.
Cowell	Left tackle	McDowell
Smith	Left guard	Benoit
Shapira	Centre	Wood
Reese	Right guard	Sayre
Jones	Right tackle	Lamb
Wagner	Right end	Barren
Bell	Quarter	Miller
Dillon	Left half	H. Clark
Williamson	Right half	Barryman
Peck	Full back	Tobin

Substitutions—Pittsburgh, Thornhill for Cowell, Soppit for Reese, Egbert for Peck. State—J. R. Miller for Bebout, Bebout for J. R. Miller, Welty for Tobin, Tobin for Welty, Welling for McDowell, Oberle for Welling, Bogg for Morris. Touchdowns—Williamson, Clark. Goal from touchdown—Williamson. Referee—J. A. Evans, Williams College. Umpire—Mr. McCarty, Germantown Academy. Head linesman—Mr. Rafferty, Princeton.

Bradhurst Beat Bronx C. C.

The Bradhurst Field Club football team defeated the Bronx Catholic Club at Manhattan Field yesterday afternoon for the championship of Harlem. The game was closely fought, the only touchdown being made by Schwartz of the Bradhursts, just before the close of the game. Austin kicked the goal. The score was 7 to 0.

Victory for Johns Hopkins.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 27.—In a drizzling rain which made the field soggy and the ball slippery, the Johns Hopkins eleven defeated St. John's College of Annapolis, 14 to 3, today. Hopkins scored a touchdown and goal in the first period, and again in the third period. St. John's kicked a field goal from Hopkins's twenty-five-yard line in the second period.

Dakota Sailors Lose at Football.

Special to The New York Times.

CLINTON LOSES TO COMMERCE, 26 TO 3

Crowd of 20,000 Spectators Witnesses Spectacular Game at the Polo Grounds.

Springing a cleverly planned variety of new, open football, the High School of Commerce overran De Witt Clinton's eleven at the Polo Grounds yesterday and won by a score of 26 to 3. "Bruno" Gunther, the speedy quarterback of Commerce, waged a winning campaign against Clinton from the start, and with a bewildering series of punts, forward passes and deceiving criss-cross plays, had the Clinton defense badly muddled. At times the Commerce backs plunged through their opponents' lines for big gains. Not once did Clinton make a first down by rushing the ball. Commerce attempted fifteen forward passes.

A crowd of over 20,000 students and friends of both schools saw the game and displayed more enthusiasm than has ever been seen at a high school game here. Clinton was massed in the stands on the north side of the gridiron and Commerce rooters, who were in the majority, turned their noise loose on the south side of the field. School songs and cheers rolled across the gridiron for half an hour before the game, and each rush by both teams was greeted with unbounded enthusiasm. The cheering sections had leaders, and both sections of noisy boys and girls were well organized.

The scene was like a college game in miniature. The orange and blue of Commerce vied with the red and black of Clinton in the afternoon's display of color. Flags and pennants and colored sweaters made the picture one of bright animation. Rosy-cheeked girls and loud-voiced boys showed no restraint in the enjoyment of the day's game. There is no love between Commerce and Clinton, and they barked back and forth across the field at each other angrily.

Toward the end of the game when Commerce was sure of victory the boys swept down upon the field and the game had to be delayed while the gridiron was cleared. Commerce had a goat which wore a blanket on which a sign read: "This is Clinton's Goat." The goat, to add a great reception to the Clinton custodian of the "Nanny" ventured across the field and displayed the animal to the Clinton crowd. Then there was a small-sized riot.

In a good-natured way, but not without more or less earnestness, the two crowds of boys pledged each other, and had it not been for old rough-and-tumble scrimmage like boys have in the school yard, Commerce was bent on protecting the life of that frightened goat. They rallied around it in its peril and defied Clinton to lay a damaging hand on the innocent animal. When the fray was getting a little too exciting, half a dozen of the Dougherty military policemen jumped into the uprising and separated the boys.

It was a fast exciting game and gives Commerce its second successive victory in two years. Last year Commerce won by a score of 6 to 0. At the conclusion of the game the Commerce students went wild with joy and made the vicinity of the Brush Stadium ring with their cheers until they finally disappeared in a joyous parade down Eighty-Eighth Avenue. Clinton had won this game the school would have had a claim on the interscholastic championship, but their hopes were rudely shattered by the Commerce team.

De Witt Clinton's only score was made early in the game and was made possible by a costly Commerce fumble. Five minutes after the game started, Grunow punted from the 45-yard line to Quinn, who caught the ball on his 15-yard line. Gunther tried to smash through the line, but was thrown for a loss and then Clapp, the Commerce full back, took the ball. He was thrown so hard that he fumbled and the ball was recovered by Clinton on the 8-yard line. Clinton tried hard to make a touchdown. McKenzie and Huston smashed against the Commerce line for a couple of yards gain, but on the next try the orange and blue line of husky youngsters which was like a rock and refused to fall back. Then Thomas dropped back to the 15-yard line and kicked a pretty field goal. Clinton's hopes ran high at this first score, but the field goal proved only a flash in the pan and from that time until the end of the game Commerce had the ball most of the time and galloped over their opponents roughshod.

Steady rushing and a successful forward pass enabled Commerce to push the ball down the field. Commerce backs plunged through the 8 and 10 yards at a clip until Gunther was jammed over the line for a touchdown. Quinn failed to kick the goal. Commerce played a running game which took Clinton completely by surprise. On a fumble Quinn carried the ball from pretty run Quinn carried the ball from midfield to Clinton's 25-yard line. Once Commerce was penalized 15 yards for off side play and after unsuccessful forward passes lost the ball. Clinton tried a forward pass, which was recovered by Hooper. Then Quinn shot two long passes in quick succession for long gains to Gunther and Schneider, and from the 15-yard line Quinn hurled another pass at Gunther, who ran over the goal line with it for another touchdown. Quinn again failed to kick goal.

After a lively outburst of school songs during the halves, the game was resumed. Then the most spectacular play of the game happened. On a deceptive criss-cross play, such as Carlisle uses, Quinn took the ball on a double pass and ran 35 yards through the Clinton team for a touchdown and kicked the goal, making the score 19 to 3. Just before the end of the third period Quinn, from the 15-yard line, shot a forward pass, which was grabbed behind the goal line by Foster for another touchdown, after which Quinn kicked the goal, making the score 26 to 3. The lineup:

Commerce.	Position.	Clinton.
Montgomery	Left tackle	Christgau
Parks	Left guard	Grunow
De Boer	Centre	Stanton
Wagner	Right guard	Moore
Hagemeyer	Right tackle	Gilmore
Hooper	Right end	Fitzpatrick
Gunther	Quarter back	Snow
Parker	Left half back	Huston
Quinn	Right half back	Thomas
Clapp	Full back	McKenzie

Touchdowns—For Commerce, Gunther (2,) Quinn, Foster. Goals from touchdown—Quinn (2.) For Clinton, field goal by Grunow. Referee—Mr. Levine, Pennsylvania. Umpire—Mr. McElroy, Cornell. Head linesman—Dr. Newton, Williams.

Substitutions—For Commerce, Foster for Schneider, Schneider for Foster, Worth for Hooper, Wittner for Gunther, Gunther for Wittner; for Clinton, Norton for Fowler, Pitt for Stanton. Time of periods—Four of fifteen minutes.

ERASMUS BEATS POLY.

Mayor Kline Kicks Off the Ball at Game at Ebbet Field.

A stirring victory over the Poly Prep football eleven by the score of 6 to 0 yesterday afternoon gave the Erasmus Hall High School team the Brooklyn championship in schoolboy football. The contest was decided on the gridiron at Ebbets Field before some 5,000 followers of the sport, and the game was one of the most exciting of the series. Mayor Ardolph Kline opened the game by kicking off the ball to Poly, netting twenty yards against the wind. It was

YONKERS ROAD RUN---TRAP SHOOTING---HOLIDAY GOLF---LONG ISLAND POINT-TO-POINT RACE

CANADIAN BEATEN BY YONKERS GREEK

Gianicopolis Leads Good Field in Fifteen-Mile Race of Mercury A. C.

With an international aspect given to it through the competition of Percy Wyer, a youngster from Toronto, the annual long distance footrace held by the Mercury A. C. of Yonkers developed into a hard fought contest, despite the fact that counter attractions of a similar nature cut a big swath in the matter of lessening the list of nominations.

It remained for one of the home talent, a Greek named Nick Gianicopolis, formerly aligned with the Mercury's, to account for the winning honors, over the route traveled, fifteen miles, in 1 hour 33 minutes 42 seconds, with the youthful Canadian second 48 seconds further back. Harry Hellawell of the New York Athletic Club, the Paterson lad who performed so well for America in the last Olympic games across country, finished in third place.

A number of ambitious pedestrians started in the contest which was decided within the confines of the City of Yonkers, with the many hills eventually putting a temporary check on the aspirations of probably a dozen, who fell by the wayside before half the route had been covered.

The event proved of sufficient importance to attract thousands from the city and its environs and all along the course the streets were thronged with spectators, most of whom knew the various contestants and aided the runners with encouraging cries.

That it was a contest in which a strong man had the best chance was attested by the fact that the mightiest man in frame was ultimately returned the winner, and it is doubtful if there is a long-distance runner in this part of the country with greater stamina for the grind than Gianicopolis, who has made wonderful progress at the sport during the last year.

The race was a scratch affair, with prizes valuable enough to satisfy the most exacting runner in this departure of the Mercury. Mayor Vance T. Lennon fired the gun which sent the field on its journey, which led away from Hollywood Inn and north on New Main Street.

The first man to show after the mad dash in an advantageous position was a native, O. S. Weeks, a 50-year-old "lad," and the second oldest registered athlete in the metropolitan district, who has notches in his stick registering wins over youngsters of less than half his age. Mr. Weeks who showed the way to the men who were later in the race destined to practically run over him in the rush to the better going along South Broadway.

In his wake were Wyer, the Canadian; Frank Masterson and Hellawell, both of the Winged Foot organization, and the ultimate winner, the Greek. By the time the leaders had reached McLean Avenue, Gianicopolis and Masterson had assumed command, and they raced with alternating pace along various thoroughfares until Saxon Hill Road was reached, where the Greek virtually said good-by to the New Yorker, dashing into the lead, which he did not relinquish.

His knowledge of the course stood him in good stead, and by the time he had arrived at Warburton and Manhattan Avenues, about three miles from the finish, he had an advantage of an eighth of a mile on Masterson, who was fully a half mile to the good of Wyer and Hellawell, who were almost racing as a team.

Masterson's efforts in attempting to keep the Greek within hailing distance appeared to have sapped his strength, and, although he seemed to have second place assured, he slowly but surely "came back" to the nearest men to him, Wyer and Hellawell, with the result that when the trio reached 261st Street and Riverdale Avenue, a mile from the end of the race, they were all on a par.

As far as the winner was concerned, it was all over but the shouting, and Gianicopolis was never really extended during the last mile. It was during this period of the race, however, that by far the best brush was seen, with Masterson, Wyer, and Hellawell the participants. The youthful Canadian, who probably scales only 100 pounds, carried his opponents along at a merry clip, and proved to have plenty in reserve by disposing of the pair, eventually coming home full of running, 48 seconds after the winner, with Hellawell 10 seconds behind, 10 seconds later, in the elapsed time of 1:34:40.

Masterson filled fourth position in 1:36:30, and was apparently far from being in good shape at the end. Willie Rozette of the Irish-American A. C. was the next man home, but he failed to show anything like as good form as he displayed in the same race last year. Weeks finished in ninth place, in the announced time of 1:47:40, while among those who came along in the rush was a former Harvard runner, Howard Edwards, who came across the line as though he had just started. The summary of the leaders whose times were taken follows:

RIGBY BEATS BIG FIELD.

Unattached Runner Leads 200 Men Over Staten Island Course.

Two hundred distance runners of the metropolitan district took part yesterday in the "twelve"-mile road race held over a course on the northern part of Staten Island, and under the auspices of the Benton A. C., the winner of which was R. W. Rigby, running unattached, in 1 hour 2 minutes. F. Zuna, Irish-American A. C., was second, in 1:02:51, and T. Dwyer, Mohawk A. C., third, in 1:03:08.

The team trophy was won by the quintet of the Mohawk A. C. of the Bronx, who aggregated 34 points. The Bronx Church House five finished second with 92 points. No such field of runners has ever been seen in Richmond County, and the race attracted much attention from the inhabitants of Staten Island, who poured in from all points in an endeavor to witness the contest.

The eventual breaking away of the lead made the best possible use of their early pace and soon drew away from the majority of the men who seemed content to make a waiting race of the contest. Almost from the start Rigby, Zuna, Dwyer, Syce, and Cullen had the pace between them, but at six miles the first three named cut loose from the others and were never afterward in seeming trouble.

Rigby finally won by slightly over an eighth of a mile from Zuna, who led Dwyer about one hundred yards. Nye made a good fight during the latter stages and disposed of Galvin in the last furlong, finally winning fourth place by a dozen yards. The order of finish of the first twenty follows:

R. W. Rigby, unattached, 1:02:00; F. Zuna, I.-A. A. C., 1:02:51; T. Dwyer, Mohawk A. C., 1:03:08; H. Nye, Mohawk A. C., 1:03:10; W. Galvin, I.-A. A. C., 1:03:20; B. O'Toole, Mohawk A. C., 1:03:55; V. Voteritsas, Greek-American A. C., 1:03:57; F. Ruggerio, Bronx Church House, 1:03:59; A. Savage, Mohawk A. C., 1:03:58; J. L. Williams, unattached, 1:05:37; E. White, Holy Cross Lyceum, 1:05:58; R. Mallory, Mohawk A. C., 1:06:15; C. Erickson, unattached, 1:06:25; G. Becker, Royalton A. C., 1:06:32; E. Byrne, Bronx Church House, 1:06:36; C. Pores, Sheridan A. C., 1:06:40; A. Harder, Federal A. C., 1:07:28; A. Lindquist, Mohawk A. C., 1:07:30; R. Kelly, Long Island A. C., 1:07:55; F. Carroll, Long Island A. C., 1:07:42.

Penn Freshmen Win Race.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—The University of Pennsylvania freshmen cross country team defeated the Cornell first year men in their annual race to-day by the score of 19 to 45.

SOCCER ON MANY FIELDS.

Columbia and Montclair A. C. Play to a Tie—Other Matches.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 27.—Championship soccer between teams of Columbia University and the Montclair Athletic Club was the attraction on the grounds of the latter here to-day. Capt. Colquhoun of the collegians did not accompany his team, so that there was a material change in the line-up, Shanholt taking his place at centre.

All things considered, therefore, the visitors did well to tie the game at 2 goals for each side. At that they had a narrow escape in the latter part of the second half, when a penalty was given against them. As luck would have it, Winpenny missed the try for goal. The line-up:

Columbia.	Position.	Montclair A.C.
Krefeld	Goal	Mills
Mazes	Right back	Malmaley
Laguardia	Left back	Dogg
Mason	Right half	Kidde
Hamilton	Centre half	Winpenny
Schwartz	Left half	Gilbertson
Collingwood	Outside right	Vervelet
Peck	Inside right	Paterson
Shanholt	Centre	McWhinnie
Welling, Cramp.	Inside left	Hampson
C. Day	Outside left	Raetzer

For the first time since the opening of the annual championship competition of the Field Club Soccer League this season the eleven of the Central Y. M. C. A. of Brooklyn met with defeat at Bay Ridge yesterday, the Crescent A. C. team winning by the score of 3 goals to 1. It was exceptionally fine soccer that produced the victory for the New Moon representatives, who were on their mettle against the leaders from start to finish. Dell, a former Princeton player, figured in the inside left for the winning team. He shot the third goal and proved a very useful addition to the team. The line-up:

Crescent A. C.	Position.	C. Y. M. C. A.
Cyplot	Goal	Reuss
Dodwell	Right back	Duffin
Maclennan	Right half	Brown
Armstrong	Centre half	Crawford
Watson	Left half	Crozier
Jeffers	Outside right	Kirkpatrick
Taylor	Inside right	Walters
McClelland	Centre	Baird
Dell	Inside left	Henry

Referee—F. Davies. Linesmen—Messrs. Macphee and Barclay. Goals—Maclennan (2,) Dell, Crescent A. C.; Baird, Centrals. Time—Halves of forty-five minutes.

English-born soccer players had to bow before their Continental rivals in the International match of the New York Footballers' Protective Association at Lenox Oval yesterday. Ten of the winning players were members of the German Football Club, with a St. George F. C. man in goal, so that they practically played together as a team in full training. The Continentals, or Germans, won by 9 goals to 1. The outstanding feature of the first half proved to be very even, the Continentals establishing a lead therein of only 2 to 1. Upon resumption the Continentals had it all their own way, and four more goals were added, while the English merely looked on. The line-up:

English.	Position.	Continentals.
Hallwell	Goal	Dillman
Dearns	Right back	M. Vandeweghe
Haskell	Left back	Glaser
Molyneux	Right half	Reichwagen
Bruce	Centre half	Hagar
Blatchford	Left half	C. Meyer
Whitehouse	Outside right	Bleich
Laurie	Inside right	A. Vandeweghe
Woollard	Centre	Mannborg
Welsh	Inside left	J. Vandeweghe

Referee—J. Manning. Umpires—A. Vandeweghe (2), Mannberg (2), J. Vandeweghe, W. Meyer, Continentals; Molyneux, English. Time—Halves of 45 minutes.

A postponed New York State League game between the Brooklyn Celtics and the Rangers of Brooklyn was played off at Edison Field yesterday, the Celtics winning by 3 goals to 1, Carey making the scoring for the Celtics and McBride equalized. O'Halloran placed the Celtics in the lead by 2 to 1 before the close of the first half. O'Halloran added another in the second period. To-morrow the Celtics will play at Ackerly Park, Long Island, with the Philadelphia Hibernians at Philadelphia.

Well matched teams of Commercial and Morris High schools played P. S. A. L. soccer championship game at Prospect yesterday, and, although Commercial won by 1 goal to 0, it would have ended in a tie but for a partial misunderstanding right at the start of the game. The referee, believing the Morris were entitled to take out time when one of the forwards was hurt, failed to play to the whistle and ceased activities long enough to allow Seiglie a chance to score from a pass by McMahon. In the second half, Commercial was allowed a penalty, but Peltin made a fine stop of Fabricant's kick for goal. In the mix-up that ensued, Saltaformaggio, who was active all over the field, saved the Morris goal from penetration.

Two thousand people witnessed the American Football Association Cup tie game between the Thompsonport City and the Marquette Oval, in Brooklyn, yesterday. By taking the New Englanders into camp to the tune of 2 goals to 0, the Brooklyns, who had possession of the ball practically all of the time, though they were unusually poor at shooting for goal, advanced into the third round of the competition. Ten minutes from the start, Black, who played the star game for Brooklyn, scored from a pass by Miller, who was also a prominent figure in the victory. It was not so much to the credit of the visitors as to the bad shooting of the home players that there was no further scoring until ten minutes of time, when Hynds suffered a penalty for Brooklyn. This made the crowd of rooters breathe somewhat more freely and the agony was over. Clark played a good game at centre half, but Pennell had nothing to in goal. Thorpe, the visiting custodian, on the other hand, was overworked, but acquitted himself in great style. McLaren and Robinson also showed up well.

At Van Cortlandt Park yesterday, Stuyvesant, "coming back" strong, defeated Commerce in a P. S. A. L. soccer game by the score of 3 goals to 1. Commerce took the lead in the first half by accidentally scoring off a pass from the left wing. They were not destined to find the opposing goal again, however. Stuyvesant, on the other hand, turned three good shots by Rannow, their centre forward, to account and thereby won by a handsome margin.

On the same field, the Metropolitan League and New York State League teams of the Overseas Wanderers tried conclusions with the result that the Metropolitans came out by 4 to 1, thanks to superior combination work and the heavy kicking of their backs. McKickard shot three goals for the winners and Puxti one for the State team. Nilson, of the latter team, deflected the ball into his own net, thereby giving the other side their fourth point.

Y. M. C. A. Runners Best.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 27.—By a margin of two feet, Wilson I. Adams of the Montclair Y. M. C. A. failed to win a trophy donated by his father, W. I. L. Adams, to the winner of a cross-country run here today, in which teams from the Y. M. C. A., the Bloomfield High School, the Essex A. C. of Montclair, and Caldwell A. C. competed. Eddie Garlick, Captain of the Bloomfield team, was the winner of the race, finishing the three-and-a-half-mile course in 19 minutes, with Adams second. J. Cook, a team mate of Garlick, was third. The Y. M. C. A. team was the better balanced entry and won the point trophy with 27 points. Bloomfield High was second with 37 points. The first twelve to finish were as follows: E. Garlick, Bloomfield High; W. I. Adams, Montclair Y. M. C. A.; J. Cook, Bloomfield High; W. Fletcher, Montclair Y. M. C. A.; L. Dorothy, Bloomfield High; W. E. Scheffler, W. Collis, Arthur Scheffler, and Andrew Pansini of the Montclair Y. M. C. A.; L. Temple, Bloomfield High, and F. Weisenstein and John Freeman, Montclair Y. M. C. A.

Century Road Club Races.

The New York Division of the Century Road Club of America staged two contests yesterday morning over a course of one mile to the line on the Pelham Parkway. The races decided were a two-mile novice and a one-hour team event. In the first-named contest P. T. Thielman made pace for the greater part of the way, but near the finish he gave way to Alexander Palma, one of the newcomers in the sport, who won by two yards in 6:49 4-5. Arthur Morgan and his mate, Joe Naphtal, won the team race of one hour, with 18 miles as the distance ridden. Sylvain Segal and Harry Naphtal were second, a length to the bad.

Perry Wins Kansas City Race.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 27.—Perry of Missouri University won the five-and-one-quarter-mile run here to-day given under the auspices of the Kansas City Athletic Club. His time was 29 minutes 6 3-5 seconds. Finley of Missouri University finished second, Dewalt, a seventeen-year-old lad of Kansas University, who finished third, led the field for five miles.

New England Cross-Country Run.

CAMBRIDGE Mass., Nov. 27.—Plodding at a consistently fast pace over ten miles of hill and dale, Clifton G. Horne of Haverhill today won the New England amateur cross-country championship from a fast field. Horne's time was 55:11. The next four places all went to Boston runners—John J. Cook, B. L. McGrath, Fred L. Cook, and Daniel Maloney, finishing in the order named.

CONRAD STEIN WINS HOLIDAY CUP SHOOT

R. L. Spotts High Gun in Special Scratch Event at Travers Island.

Although yesterday was a holiday there was an unusually large number of gunners on the firing line at the Travers Island traps of the New York Athletic Club. The feature was a special scratch and handicap holiday cup. Each was at 100 targets, the former being won by R. L. Spotts, who had a total of 87. The handicap holiday cup ended in a tie between Dr. D. L. Culver and Conrad Stein, the latter finally winning out in the shoot-off by a single target.

Dr. Culver won more than his share of the prizes, winning the Accumulation Cup and then taking the Travers Island trophy. A shoot-off was necessary in the first event. He also won the high handicap prize with a total of 87 out of a possible 100 targets. The high scratch prize was captured by R. L. Spotts, who broke 81 of the tiny blue rocks. Mr. Spotts also was high gun in the shoot for the monthly cup.

The club trophy went to W. B. Ogden, only, however, after a shoot-off against H. H. Duden. The latter gunner did better in the distance handicap, winning with a total of 18, shooting from the sixteen-yard line. The scores of the more important events are as follows:

CRESCENT GUNNERS OUT.

Handicaps Win All Except One Event at Bay Ridge Traps.

Although starting later than in former years, the trapshooters of the Crescent Athletic Club opened their season under ideal weather conditions yesterday. There was a good field of gunners on the firing line, and some interesting shooting was witnessed in the various events. It was a day for the handicap men, they taking every prize, with the single exception of the scratch shoot.

The Holiday Cup was the feature of the afternoon. It was at 100 targets, and the winner was G. G. Stephenson, Jr., who shot with a handicap of 4 in 25 targets. He took the event with a total of 91 blue rocks. Mr. Stephenson also scored the first leg on the President's Cup, having a full score of 50 targets in the event.

A. E. Hendrickson, who shot with a handicap of 5 in 25 targets, took the first leg of the Stake Trophy. He had a total of 21 targets in the event. The Scratch Prize was won by Dr. Sauer, who had 90 out of a possible 100 targets. Several trophy shoots at 15 targets also were decided, the prizes being well distributed among the various gunners. The scores of the more important events are as follows:

BAY RIDGE WINS, 13 TO 6.

Commercial High School Defeated in Exciting Game at Commercial Field.

Commercial High School closed its football season with a decisive defeat at the hands of the Bay Ridge High eleven yesterday morning on the former's gridiron by the score of 13 to 6. The Bay Ridge lads had the better of the game from the start and had it not been for frequent fumbling of punts on their part and the imposing of many penalties against them by the headlinesman they would have run up a bigger score against the Scarlet and Gray. Commercial's line was weak and the strong backfield of the visiting team found little difficulty in plowing through for long gains.

In the second period of the game, Becker of Commercial mustered his team and called for a forward pass. Williams ran back and in a splendid pass the ball fell into Becker's outstretched arms for a 15-yard gain. With the ball on their opponent's 3-yard line, a straight line plunge was tried but the play was offside and the Commercial lads were sent back to the 5-yard line. In the second try Becker went over for a touchdown. Haggen missed the goal. The third and fourth periods turned over a new chapter. Early in the half the Maroon warriors captured the pigskin in midfield, and Diamond, Bright and Adleman carried the ball straight down to Commercial's 3-yard line and H. Karlson went over on a tackle around play. This tied the score and H. Karlson failed to kick the goal.

Wright's brilliant catching of a forward pass of 20-yards in the final period again started things going for the Bay Ridge team. Adleman followed with five yards, and a forward pass, Bright to Steele, accounted for ten more yards. Bright then added to his laurels by carrying the ball around end for twenty-five yards to Commercial's 20-yard line. H. Karlson reeled off eleven yards on a tackle around play. Held on the line, the Maroons uncorked a forward pass Adleman to Bright over the goal line for touchdown. The line-up:

Bay Ridge.	Position.	Commercial.
H. Karlson	Left tackle	Williams
Grossman	Left guard	Hamburger
Nordstrom	Centre	Roscoe
B. Karlson	Right guard	Leiken
Gaddell	Right tackle	Rabinowitz
Reardon	Right end	Johnson
Adleman	Quarter back	Becker
Steele	Left half back	Schwartz
Bright	Right half back	Snyder
Hammond	Full back	Hagen

CARLISLE HARD PRESSED.

Indians Forced to Extend Themselves to Defeat Brown 13 to 0.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 27.—Carlisle won its third successive football victory from Brown in their annual contest to-day, 13 to 0. In view of the comparative showing of both teams during the season, the score was smaller than was looked for. Brown showed unexpected defensive strength, holding Carlisle to one touchdown by straight rushing. The other touchdown came when an Indian intercepted a Brown forward pass under the shade of the Brunonians' goal posts. No field goals were attempted by either side, and for the first two periods not a punt was made.

Brown carried the fight to Carlisle in the first period, taking the ball from their own 26-yard line, the Brunonians reached Carlisle's 12-yard line on a forward pass, only to have the play disallowed. In the second period Carlisle, on its famous criss-cross, marched 80 yards for a touchdown. After that the Brown line stiffened.

The second score came when Look-Around intercepted Bean's forward pass on Brown's 18-yard line. After four plays the Indians sent Guyon over the line. The game ended with the ball on Brown's 33-yard line after a 35-yard run by Welch, the Indian quarter back. The line-up and summary:

Carlisle.	Position.	Brown.
Hill	Left guard	Gottschall
Garlow	Centre	Mitchell
Hodge	Right guard	Gelb
Stockarowich	Right tackle	Bartlett
Vaderneack	Right end	Nichols
Welch	Quarter back	Gardner
Bracklin	Left half back	Andrews
Guyon	Right half back	Bean
Calac	Full back	Look-Around

Referee—M. J. Thompson, Georgetown. Umpire—F. W. Burleigh, Exeter. Head linesman—Joseph Pendleton, Rowdoin.

Carlisle scoring: Touchdowns—Guyon and Calac. Goal from touchdown—Garlow.

Substitutions: Brown—Fraser for Andrews, McLoughlin for MacNeil. Overbaugh for Gardner. Carlisle—Busch for Hodge, Gilman for Welmas.

TAYLORS TO TAKE RED SOX.

McAleer and McRoy to Lose Control of Boston Americans.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—According to a statement printed here to-day attributed to Ban Johnson, President of the American League, control of the Boston American League club is soon to pass out of the hands of President James R. McAleer and his Western associates. Former President John T. Taylor and his father, Gen. Charles H. Taylor, is understood, stand willing to take over the holdings of the Western syndicate who backed McAleer and Robert McRoy when they took hold of the Red Sox shortly after the close of the 1911 season.

The Taylors are now owners of 50 per cent. of the Red Sox stock, but by agreement with the syndicate which took over a half share in 1911 have had nothing to do with the control.

The American League President has been in conference with the Taylors this week. He is also in close touch with a Chicago man who is said to be the largest owner of stock outside of Gen. Taylor and who is believed to have been desirous of selling his stock ever since Manager Stahl was summarily deposed last Summer and the team began to go down hill. Gen. Taylor refuses to either affirm or deny the correctness of the report.

Baltusrol Golfers at Traps.

Members of the Baltusrol Golf Club began their shooting season yesterday with a series of competitions in which the principal winner was Marshall Geer. In the twenty-five-bird handicap take home trophy, Geer's 15, 3—18 tied with K. O. Radway's 9, 9—18, and the former was successful in the shoot-off. In the twenty-five-bird monthly handicap Geer won from James Shanley, Jr., Hendrickson, Browne and Radway. There was a Thanksgiving Day handicap, conditions calling for 100 birds on the handicap basis. Once more Geer topped the list with 59, 12—71. The scores:

25-Bird Handicap Take Home Trophy—Marshall Geer, 15, 3—18; K. O. Radway, 9, 9—18; E. C. Fincke, 10, 1—11; S. H. Browne, 6, 6—17; F. W. Cowperthwaite, 16, 1—17; William Byrd, 12, 4—16; Dr. D. W. Granberry, 11, 0—11; G. A. Williams, 11, 0—11; T. C. Watkins, 4, 4—8; H. A. Barclay, 4, 4—7.

Von Lengerke Wins at Orange G. C.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 27.—Ernest von Lengerke, a former State trap-shooting champion, was the winner in three of the four events held to-day at the traps of the Orange Gun Club, and in the other, a fifteen-bird walking match, he tied with Dr. F. W. Lockwood with a score of 12. Von Lengerke won a twenty-five target sweepstakes with a 23, a twenty-target jack rabbit shoot with a perfect score, and the fifteen pairs of doubles with a 21 mark.

A special three-cornered match at twenty-five targets between Von Lengerke, George Wakeley, and Abram Mosier was also contested. Mosier and Von Lengerke tied at 22 for first prize, but they failed to shoot off the tie.

TRAVIS WINS GOLF MEDAL AT LAKEWOOD

New Yorker's 78 Score Two Strokes Lower Than Marston's Card.

Thanksgiving Day was observed in golf circles yesterday principally by means of the qualifying round in the annual Fall tournament of the Country Club of Lakewood. There were more than eighty starters in this fixture, which is the last of the golf season in the North. Walter J. Travis, the Garden City veteran, won the medal with a score of 78, two strokes lower than the effort of Maxwell R. Marston, the Eastern interscholastic title holder.

The day was raw and cold and gave every promise of repeating the snowy visitation that took place last year when the golfers had to use red balls for their rounds and even then lost many spheres. It turned out to be rain, however, and as a result scores were generally high. Both Travis and Marston went along well enough except on the greens. Travis kept clear of bunkers and other difficulties, but on no less than four occasions he needed three putts. His best try for the cup was a seven-footer on the ninth hole. Sixes on the eighth and eighteenth holes practically put Marston out of the running and it was his putting that gave him sixes. S. K. de Forest of the local club was third on the list with 83.

Provision had been made for four divisions of sixteen each, and there were just enough to fill nicely, which means that all but a scanty half dozen will be busy with the first and second rounds of match play to-day. Beaten divisions also are provided. A special ménu had been arranged by the club for the holiday with the result that many of the golfers had parties of friends there for dinner. The scores:

Championship Division.—Walter J. Travis, Garden City, 78; Maxwell R. Marston, Baltusrol, 80; S. K. de Forest, Lakewood, 83; Harold A. Steiner

THE MONROE DOCTRINE, AN OBSOLETE SHIBBOLETH.

By HIRAM BINGHAM, Ph. D., F. R. G. S.

Twice brought before the Congress of the United States, quoted on three continents, and reprinted within three weeks of publication, is, in brief, the brilliant career of this book. It is not only "good reading," but epoch-making.

POPULAR GOVERNMENT, ITS ESSENCE, ITS PERMANENCE AND ITS PERILS.

By WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, LL. D., D. C. L.

Woman's Suffrage, Socialism, Initiative, Referendum, and Recall, the Supreme Court, and Congress are some of the phases of popular Government which Prof. Taft considers. Some he favors, and to several he is opposed. His two notable addresses before the American Bar Association meeting at Montreal in September are included in the volume.

EARTH HUNGER AND OTHER ESSAYS.

By the late WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER, LL. D. Edited with an Introduction by Albert Galloway Keller, Ph. D.

Professor Sumner made generations of men think. These essays, many of them his famous classroom lectures, are going to make men—and women—keep on thinking; and, of even more importance, teach them to think clearly as they ponder the social issues of the times.

8vo. Cloth binding. Gilt top, 413 pages. Price $2.25 net. Postage 20 cents extra.

CHAUCER.

Edited, with Notes, Glossary, etc., by HENRY NOBLE MacCRACKEN, Ph. D.

Published in October, this work has already been adopted for use in English courses by such leading institutions as Yale, Columbia, Brown, Smith and Wellesley. Its value, however, is far beyond that of the ordinary text-book and is therefore not accurately measured even by these endorsements. The volume will be welcomed not only by the teacher and student, but by the general reader.

12mo. Cloth binding. 713 pages. Price, Regular Edition, $2.50 net; postage 16 cents extra. College Edition, $1.50 net; postage 16 cents extra.

POLITICIAN, PARTY AND PEOPLE.

By HENRY CROSBY EMERY, Ph. D., LL. D.

The Chairman of the United States Tariff Commission knows politics in practice, the Professor of Political Economy at Yale knows them in theory. Professor Emery, with experience in each of these chairs, writes of politics, then, as few men could. His book is destined to make elections less corrupt.

Winthrop's fascinating romance of travel remains our most vital picture of conditions in Washington and Oregon during the territorial period, sixty years ago. The value of his book, for all who are interested in Western history and adventure, has been doubled by the addition of his letters and diaries, which cover his entire stay on the Pacific Coast, beginning at San Francisco early in 1863, and closing with his overland trip East via Salt Lake City in October.

The Century Co.'s attractive new Holiday Catalogue contains, among many other helpful suggestions for holiday planning, a "Classified List of Books for Young Folks," which gives wide choice of some of the very best books for children ever published. Sent on post-card request.

THE CENTURY CO., Union Square, New York

This announcement is more than an advertisement. It is the first news of some books of a distinctive kind which are just ready at every book store.

A BEAUTIFUL LEATHER BOOK WITH A HEART INSIDE IT

Twelve of them, in fact, so that every individual taste may be supplied. Before now you have found the Rubaiyat, Browning and the Christmas Carol in leather bindings. But here are Henry van Dyke, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Albert Bigelow Paine, Owen Wister and others—the refreshingly new and modern writers—in a distinctly bookish and tasteful leather binding. These twelve books are the few, selected from the many, written at different times—not for any series—now offered to you because they are specially suitable for Christmas giving and all-the-year-'round reading.

Overworked adjectives can hardly describe the good taste, the special quality, of these books. So here are the bare facts of their making:

Size, extra tall 16mo.; bound in full sheep; flexible; colors French blue, cochineal red, apple green, bottle green; antique tinted end-papers; rough edges; gilt tops; wide margins; full gilt stamping on covers; glacine wrappers; enclosed in colored cardboard slip case with paper label. Many of the books have frontispieces in colors.

Each Book Was Written for One Reason—Because the Spirit of Sympathy Was Aroused—It Had to be Written

You can compliment the taste of each friend, for these books are varied. The Christmas spirit shines brilliantly in their pages, whether the particular story is about Christmas or not. Many of us are a bit tired of the so-called Christmas story, and several of these books are for just such tastes.

A little glimpse of each book is given below as a guide to help you in placing your friends among them. The descriptions of the stories are, of course, too brief to do more than indicate what they are. Here, as in the beautiful appearance of the books, you must see for yourself. Go to the nearest bookstore—and at the first opportunity you have, for it may solve a large part of your Christmas problem.

THE STORY OF THE OTHER WISE MAN By Henry van Dyke

The beautiful fancy of a fourth Magi who sought "Him who is born in Bethlehem." The story has been translated into many foreign languages, including Turkish and Bengali.

"PEANUT" By Albert Bigelow Paine

He is a very poor little boy and his home is far away among the hills; but he is loyal in his friendship even to the memory of the desperado who was good to him, and about whom he will believe no ill.

THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER By Clarence B. Kelland

A part of the price of the great Betrayal slips from the palm of Judas down through the ages. The story is dramatic as a play, with the spiritual appeal of a poetic allegory. A rare Christmas book.

FINDING HIS SOUL By Norman Duncan

A big-hearted, merry man, a hustler, is one of the best traveling salesmen in his line. His little boy dies, and the cruel blow unhinges his reason. The firm sends him abroad. On Christmas Eve, among the hills of Bethlehem, he has a wonderful experience.

THE MANSION By Henry van Dyke

In this new story spiritual truth burns radiantly in the lamp of fiction—so beautiful, so deeply spiritual, that it satisfies the reader while it stirs his conscience.

THE ROAD TO JOY By Louise Collier Willcox

This is a book that will guide the reader along the path of contentment. It is a guide-book of the road to joy, pointing out the heights from which the goal may best be viewed, the spots where the traveler should linger, the paths he should avoid.

LINCOLN AND THE SLEEPING SENTINEL By L. E. Chittenden

A young soldier—a boy he was, half dead with fatigue—relieving a sick comrade on watch, and then falling asleep at his post—the soldier's shame, his dishonor, and his saving by Lincoln.

JONATHAN AND DAVID By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps

This is a simple village story, with an old man's gentle character and affection for his dog as the governing motive. It belongs to that class of stories that take hold by reason of their sincerity and unaffected pathos.

THE APPLE TREE COTTAGE By Elinor Macartney Lane

A little pastel sketch in apple-green—a story light and delicate and fresh as the Summer sea itself, and a flower-bordered cottage by its side, where "he and she" are all that count in the gold-and-blue Summer setting. Illustrations in color by Frank Craig.

THE TOY SHOP. A Story of Lincoln By Margarita Spalding Gerry

The kind of story that brings a lump to the throat. Here is Lincoln visiting a toy-shop on a Winter evening to buy tin soldiers for his little son, and talking with the old toy-maker, veteran of Napoleon's wars.

PADRE IGNACIO By Owen Wister

On the Californian coast, at the parish of Santa Ysabel del Mar, Padre Ignacio, once a member of the gay world, has found "contentment in renunciation." But temptation comes upon him.

COMRADES By Elizabeth Stuart Phelps

A Civil War veteran, who has outlived all his companions, goes forth alone on Memorial Day to decorate their graves. His wife's devotion makes him realize that the title of comrade belongs to her even more than to the men who fell by his side.

Why Give a Christmas Card When You Can Give a Real and a Beautiful Book?

The price of these books has been fixed at the lowest possible figure which would give you these new, fresh books in a leather binding of genuine worth. They sell for $1 each—at the bookstore nearest you.

HARPER & BROTHERS

In order that the public may not be disappointed, the publishers have made special arrangements to place quantities of these books at all stores, so that early selections may be made. If, however, you are not able to get those you wish, send immediately to the publishers and get the books by mail.

LORD COWDRAY'S OIL FIELDS.

The ending of Lord COWDRAY'S negotiations for oil field concessions in Colombia was not due to the opposition of our Government, or to any influence we have exerted at Bogota. Lord COWDRAY'S firm, PEARSON & Son, announce that Lord MURRAY of Elibank has withdrawn the contract "owing to the political "feeling that was engendered by the "negotiations." The report of an interview with Lord COWDRAY sent by the London correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning indicates that the political feeling referred to is that of the Colombian Government and people. Nevertheless, the British Company's renunciation of its design to secure important oil field concessions in Colombia, concessions which appeared to open the way for monopoly control, though this was denied, will be received with satisfaction in this country, and notably at Washington. The construction of railways and pipe lines for bringing the product to the coast and of docks and harbor facilities were a part of the plans of PEARSON & Son. It could not escape attention that the seaport where the oil from the interior was to be delivered would be rather near the Panama Canal. It is only natural that our Government and our people should have taken note of that fact. An oil port will in the immediate future be the equivalent of a coaling station.

By a purely accidental coincidence the announcement of Lord COWDRAY'S withdrawal from his oil undertakings in Colombia was made on the same day with the publication of the news of the launching of the Warspite, the second of Great Britain's oil-burning battleships. Her tanks will contain 4,000 tons of oil, enough, it is said, for a voyage around the world. She is to carry eight 15-inch guns and guns capable of being used against airships. A few months ago Mr. WINSTON CHURCHILL, the First Lord of the Admiralty, said it was the policy of the British Government to establish British control over oil supplies sufficient to remove all anxiety about navy fuel in time of war. Plans for the establishment by any European Power of a coaling station near the Caribbean terminus of the canal would, of course, be a matter of very serious concern to us. An oil fuel station is the same thing, or soon will be. Still, the present anxiety about Tuxpan would indicate that every oil station of the future should have fortifications and a garrison.

The public has no information that we have taken any particular official notice of the proposed Colombian oil concessions to Lord COWDRAY'S company, but Lord COWDRAY insists that "misrepresentations of the concession in the American press" influenced Lord MURRAY'S withdrawal. It is more probable that the objections of Colombia herself to making contracts which would grant the right to develop oil fields anywhere within her territory have been the controlling influence in the matter. There is an apparent confirmation of this view in the statement of PEARSON & Son that "it is impossible to carry on the "oil industry in undeveloped countries without the encouragement "and support of the Government." The reference must be to the Colombian Government.

We could not, save for the most serious reasons, stand in the way of the development of the resources of Colombia or any other South American country in a manner that would result in economic gain to the country in question. But it would be far preferable from our point of view, from any point of view, that the resources of our sister republics should be developed by their own people. This is the plain meaning of that passage of President WILSON'S address at Mobile in which he spoke of the employment of foreign capital in the Latin-American republics:

> There is one peculiarity about the history of the Latin-American States which I am sure they are keenly aware of. You hear of concessions to foreign capitalists in Latin-America. You do not hear of concessions to foreign capitalists in the United States. They are not granted concessions. They are invited to make investments. The work is ours, though they are welcome to invest in it. We do not ask them to supply the capital and do the work. It is an invitation, not a privilege, and States that are obliged, because their territory does not lie within the main field of modern enterprise and action, to grant concessions, are in this condition, that foreign interests are apt to dominate their domestic affairs, a condition of affairs always dangerous and apt to become intolerable.

What these States are going to seek, therefore, is an emancipation from the subordination which has been inevitable to foreign enterprise and an assertion of the splendid character which, in spite of these difficulties, they have again and again been able to demonstrate.

If Colombia has been influenced by the President's words to reconsider what seemed to be her intention to make important oil-field concessions to an English company, the congratulations offered to her will be due also to Mr. WILSON. The first fruits of his good counsel are important, and Colombia's example is one that may be generally followed with advantage.

HUERTA'S WANING POWER.

The few public critics of President WILSON'S Mexican policy profess to believe that the situation in our sister republic would have been less perilous if HUERTA'S Government had been recognized by the United States, whereas it should be obvious that recognition of HUERTA would not have saved Mexico from the shame of the murder of Senator DOMINGUEZ or the suppression of a Congress which had dared to criticise the Dictator's actions. HUERTA, recognized as President, might have been temporarily stronger, but even that is doubtful. Certainly, his career in office since last March has justified President WILSON'S distrust of him, while the course of events in Mexico continues to show the wisdom of the policy of our Government.

The boasts of HUERTA'S military strength have been shown to be empty. Against the guerrilla warfare of VILLA in the north he has made no headway whatever. Of the dimensions of the "victory" of VILLA we have no authoritative information. There was fighting, undoubtedly, and men were killed, and the unquestioned result is that, whether the Federal forces were numerous or the reverse, they are much further from Ciudad Juarez than they were a few days ago. Obviously, HUERTA can do nothing to restore order in the north, while in the oil country, around Tuxpam and Tampico, the rebels seem to be in control, and still nearer the capital that most picturesque and murderous of all recent Mexican liberators, EMILIANO ZAPATA, has taken to the warpath again and is threatening destruction for all and sundry.

In the circumstances, who can believe that the boastful Dictator, who asserted a few weeks ago that he had 80,000 armed men in the field, is ever going to re-establish peace in Mexico? Since he has been in office he has made no progress whatever. His administration has been disgraced by assassination and shameful abuse of authority and the end of his rule is clearly in sight. Patient waiting, in this crisis, is clearly a wiser policy than intervention. We still hope that the intelligent Mexican citizens will find a safe way out of their trouble.

PROGRESSIVE TAMMANY.

Albany dispatches report that Mr. ROBERT F. WAGNER, now Lieutenant Governor as well as Tammany's Senate leader, has expressed his organization's assent to the passage of a bill in December providing for a Constitutional Convention. If the people assent by their vote next Spring, delegates will be chosen in the ensuing Fall elections, and the convention for which the Progressives are clamoring will consider in 1915 the questions of the initiative, referendum, and the recall of Judges and other officers.

Mr. MURPHY and his followers can afford to take the risk. The leader of Tammany knows, if anybody knows, that a popular vote does not always express a mature popular opinion. Of the thirty-seven referendums taken in Oregon last year many were afterward found to serve selfish political purposes, many were jumbled in their wording and intent, and the voters could take little time to consider any of them before signifying their "Yes" or "No." The initiative has again and again been used for so-called reactionary purposes. This is natural, since its principle is that initiative shall originate, not in the public at large, but in an individual or a small group of voters, who insist that the public shall vote on questions in which it may not be interested. No one ever observed that Mr. MURPHY lacked initiative. As for the recall, Mayor HOADLEY, the reform head of the Commission Government in Ocean City, N. J., will testify that the hundred signatures required for the petition to recall him last December were gotten by machine politicians. They accused him of extravagance, just as Tammany in the late campaign accused the Fusion Board of Estimate of extravagance. Tammany, with the power of the recall in its hands, might take advantage of public feeling at some moment to replace a member of that board with a candidate more to its liking.

The three precious reforms would serve merely to overburden still more the heavy and complex election machinery by the running of which the politicians profit. It is already too complex for the voters. Most elections go by default. That is why the politicians are satisfied without adding to its complexity. But if the addition is all that is needed to make Tammany look progressive, Tammany is prepared to oblige those who call for it.

There is but one thing the machines need fear in the calling of a Constitutional Convention. If its delegates should be pledged to the principle of simplifying the election machinery, making all the minor elective offices appointive, so that the State and city tickets would be no longer than the national ticket, that would spell death to the machines. Mr. MURPHY would throw up his job, and in the Mayor and Governor the people would have responsible "bosses" of the right sort.

THE TRAFFIC SQUAD.

Is it because the streets of this city are becoming less congested that the squad of police detailed to guard traffic has been reduced within two years from 800 to 500? Chief Magistrate MCADOO, formerly Police Commissioner, remarks that in London every policeman is a traffic guardian. He notes also that in the part of the city below Central Park where the congestion is greatest and where most fatal accidents occur the number of arrests for violation of the automobile law is fewer than in sparsely settled districts.

Anybody who will stop at a crowded crossing and observe how motor cars speed by without stopping or giving eight feet clearance to street cars that have halted will wonder that many more people are not killed. The reckless drivers are quick to note any relaxation of police vigilance. The deaths in the streets of New York are more numerous than in any other of the world's great cities. Does not Commissioner WALDO appreciate this fact?

GOV. GLYNN AND THE MERIT SYSTEM.

It will be well for Gov. GLYNN to keep a sharp eye on the action of the Civil Service Commissioners whom he inherits from the erratic administration of Gov. SULZER. We note that the National Child Labor Committee—a highly respectable and disinterested organization devoted to the wholesome regulation of the labor of children—have brought to the attention of the Governor a ruling of the commission which is distinctly bad for the service. It exempts from competitive examination the chief investigator of the Bureau of Industries and Immigration, and, necessarily, opens the way to the exercise of political or personal favoritism in that important office. The committee ask the Governor to refuse to sign this order. "The Bureau," they say, "has "never been in politics and we can- "not too strongly urge the impor- "tance of the best possible appoint- "ment through competitive examina- "tion." We sincerely trust that the Governor will see his way clear to comply with this request.

It is not generally understood to what extent the Governor is directly responsible for the application of the merit system. The Civil Service Commissioners are selected by him to advise him as to the rules and regulations under the civil service law, but no ruling or order of the commission is valid until approved by the Governor. As he can change the membership of the commission at any moment, subject only to the requirement that the minority party must be represented on it, it will be seen that his control is complete. Moreover, the Governor is charged with the support of the Constitution, and the principle of the merit system is distinctly embodied in the Constitution. That instrument requires that all appointments shall be made for merit and fitness only, to be ascertained by examinations which, when practicable, shall be competitive. Thus, to justify the exemption of any appointment from the fair test of competition, it must be shown, and shown clearly, that the test is impracticable. The burden of proof lies with those who propose the exemption. Other things being equal, it is the plain duty of the Governor to see that the competitive test is applied.

As we have intimated, the Civil Service Commissioners, left over from the administration of Mr. SULZER, are not at all inclined to be faithful in advising the Governor to carry out this principle. On the contrary, from an early period in their none-too-creditable career, we have been compelled to point out many violations of it. The Commissioners have been particularly pliant in matters in which the labor politicians are concerned, and, under Mr. SULZER, they attempted, too often successfully, to lower the bars in the interest of this persistent and ingenious class. Poor Gov. SULZER seemed to know little and care less about his obligations to the merit system, and the whole business fell into a disgraceful muddle, in which the spoilsmen generally carried their schemes.

Certainly Gov. GLYNN is a very different sort of man from the sly, shallow, shifty SULZER. He has brains and experience and a will of his own. He has publicly set for himself high and worthy aims, in connection with the efficiency and honesty of the State service. He can in no way more substantially promote those aims than by the strict, intelligent, impartial, and practical enforcement of the constitutional requirements as to merit and fitness in appointments. The first step in this direction is to hold a firm hand over his Commissioners, to make them understand that he will approve no exemptions from the constitutional test unless it is affirmatively shown that the test is clearly impracticable. If he does this, he may get along with the present commission, but we doubt it. Probably it would be better to select a stronger, abler, and more faithful set of men.

HOLIDAY BOOK NUMBER.

Among the noteworthy contributions to the Holiday Number of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW, to be published Sunday, apart from the four articles by experts, discussing recent literature pertaining to such vital topics as feminism, socialism, eugenics, and man's belief in the persistence of life after death, are some by novelists of distinction on their observations, theories, and personal prejudices, which are of unusual interest. MARY WATTS, THEODORE DREISER, CONINGSBY DAWSON, ANN. WARWICK, and KATE LANGLEY BOSHER are among these contributors. FRANCES MORRIS, Curator of the department of laces at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, reviews ELIZA RICCI'S remarkable book on "Old Italian Laces"; Dr. JOSEPH JACOBS contributes a scholarly article on the "Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha in English," which is no dry discussion of the subject, but one which will interest and inform the ordinary reader; and JULES GUERIN, the famous painter and illustrator, tells of his recent voyage in the Near East with ROBERT HICHENS.

These pages of the most notable special number dealing with literature ever issued by a daily newspaper are scarcely less important than the articles by Miss GLASGOW, Dr. DAVENPORT, ALGERNON LEE, and HENRY M. ALDEN, to which we have already referred, while the list of the best 100 books of 1913, specially selected by Prof. JOHN ERSKINE and his associates of the Department of English, Columbia University, (every book named in which is made the subject of an explanatory article,) constitutes in itself a feature that would give distinction to any publication.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Seemingly Lacks Feasibility.

Some suggestions which, though perhaps of somewhat dubious practicability, are novel and interesting, have been offered for consideration at the Conference on Safety at Sea by Prof. FRED HARSLEY, sometime Fellow of Manchester University, and now Lecturer at the University of Berlin.

While commending the plan, already in partial and occasional execution by this country and others, of stationing Government boats in parts of the open sea to give warning of ice and danger from derelicts, Prof. HARSLEY contends that this should be done systematically and by international co-operation among the nations interested in maritime commerce. He would have these internationalized vessels, however, do much more than merely signal the existence of the common nautical perils. Not only does he propose that scientists on board of them should take continuous observations in the common interests of world meteorology and biology, but he would give them a still higher function—that of acting as guards of the high seas and enforcing the observance there by all nations at all times of the same respect for neutral territory that civilized Governments now show on land.

What he proposes is that the open ocean, though still to be treated as belonging to all as a pathway for war as well as peace, should never be used as the scene of naval combats. Reversing the ancient rule, he insists that all sea fighting, like all land fighting, should be done in the possession of one or the other combatant. This, for sea fighters, would be within the three-mile distance from shore, or some reasonable extension of that familiar limit if its increase should be deemed necessary.

One objection to this scheme is that it would or might very seriously imperil life and property ashore, and another is that no guard boat could possibly enforce any such regulation on hostile ships larger or better armed than itself. It could simply report the violation to an international tribunal likely long to remain imaginary—a dream the beauty of which is a matter of opinion unfortunately not yet unanimous. Until after the millennium arrives, really to keep the peace at sea would seemingly require the building of another navy, owned by everybody and nobody, greater than any now in existence, manned by impossibly disinterested officers and crews, and ready to resort, in case of need, to desperately unpeaceful measures.

Fine as a Source of Revenue.

A committee of the French Senate, after considering for several years that country's declining birth rate with the seriousness it deserves, is reported to have drawn a bill, soon to be presented for legislative action, which will impose a special tax on both bachelors and husbands with no children. Every one of these, if the law passes, will give the State $18 annually, and, though the man with one child is let off for two-thirds of that amount, and the man with two for one-third of it, not less than three will earn full exemption, that number being considered necessary in each family even to keep the population of the country at its present level.

That the Senators are of single purpose in the formulation of this scheme is made a little, or more than a little, doubtful by the satisfaction with which they announce that it will increase the nation's revenues by something like $100,000,000 a year. Of course, if it achieved the avowed object of booming the cradle market in France, it would be no such money-maker as that, and, whatever the measure of success attained, by just so much would the tax on celibacy and sterility be decreased.

As a lessened birth rate has everywhere and always accompanied advancing civilization among men, just as it accompanies higher organization among animals, attempts at its prevention or reversal are rather hopeless. Statutory law has the hardest sort of an antagonist in natural law, and has never beaten it yet.

If the French statesmen are really worried about what looks like the slow extinction of their estimable and able race, probably the most and best they can do is by the wisdom of their rule to make France economically prosperous. Good times and high birth rates do tend to coincide, in spite of the fact that the larger families are everywhere among the poorer people and the smaller ones among those better able to provide for them. The problem is an enormously complex one, and only a wild optimist expects to solve it by the simple expedient of putting an $18 tax on the childless.

The dispatches at hand do not state whether or not the plan includes the exemption of fathers whose children are dead. It shouldn't. While the Senators are about it, why don't they put a still heavier tax on fathers who let the children they do have die of preventable diseases, and the largest of all on those whose children are of such evil heredity or environment as to become a burden to the State? There would be a fine consistency about that!

Reflections After a Turkey.

Certain troublesome people have been loudly protesting, this week, that the turkey is not in right and propriety, the bird with which to grace—or weight—the table on Thanksgiving Day. He should be reserved, they said, for the more gladsome hilarities of Christmas.

This is nonsense, certainly, and, from a New Englander's standpoint, it is heresy—two words which, come to think of it, mean about the same thing.

The only reason given for attacking our settled beliefs as to Thanksgiving fare is the poor one that dead turkeys are apt to "spoil" in the warm spells so common in late November, while the chances of their "keeping" are better a month later. But the turkey will stand high temperatures as well as ducks or geese, or any of the suggested substitutes, and, a conclusive answer in the opinion of some, having eaten turkey at Thanksgiving, the inevitable task is performed and the prospect of getting something else at Christmas—something that will not reappear in one obnoxious form or another for many a dreary meal thereafter—is much improved.

If people only didn't think it a sort of religious duty to buy big turkeys when they buy any, it wouldn't be so bad. Then the dry and fibrous creatures wouldn't lag so long superfluous on the domestic bill of fare, not good enough to eat, but just too good to give the dog.

As a comestible, the turkey ranks considerably above the owl and the crow; all other fowls are his superior, except when he goes to the block very, very young, which he almost never does.

DEFENDS ZELAYA'S ACT.

Execution of Rebel Spies Decreed by Court-Martial.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A recent dispatch in THE TIMES stated, among other things, that "the chief crime charged to Zelaya was the killing of two Americans in Nicaragua four years ago." As one intimately connected with the principals in this affair, permit me to offer a few corrections.

Leroy Cannon and Leonard Groce, the two victims of this Nicaraguan court-martial, were not true American citizens. Both had become legally naturalized as Nicaraguan citizens, both had voted in Nicaraguan elections, both had taken up Nicaraguan property, both had married Nicaraguan wives, and both had taken up arms in a Nicaraguan civil war. When they were caught lurking in the bushes on the river bank immediately after the explosion of a submerged mine under the stern of the regular passenger steamer Diamanta, serving for the moment as a troop ship, they were found with paraphernalia of their infernal machine on their persons. The spot in which they were caught was a desolate place, remote from any human habitation. Their own homes were at Bluefields, on the coast, several hundred miles away. Both prisoners confessed before the court-martial that they had been hired to commit this act by Gen. Emiliano Chamorro, then engaged in a military rebellion against Gen. Zelaya, the President of Nicaragua.

A court-martial was duly convened on the spot and went through all the regular forms for the trial of prisoners of war prescribed by the military law of that country. The third prisoner, a Frenchman, was acquitted on the ground that he was merely a servant who did not understand the purport of the crime of his employers. (He pleaded, and Cannon and Groce corroborated him, that his masters pretended to him that they merely intended to dynamite a school of fish in the river.)

The "Americans," who were captured in the disguise of civilians, though it was clearly established and freely confessed by them that they had been duly commissioned officers in the rebel army, were found guilty of the military crime of "espionage and attempted assassination of soldiers and of innocent civilian passers," as they were sentenced to be executed, according to the law of the land. President Zelaya, as commander in chief of the army, after receiving and reviewing the proceedings of the court-martial, telegraphically approved the sentence. EDWIN EMERSON.

INCOME TAX FAULTS.

Puts Extra Burden on Married Couples Living Together.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to say a few words about two clauses in the new income tax law. One relates to the exemption for only two children, utterly ignoring any provision for a larger number in a family. The other is alluded to by a correspondent in your columns signing herself "A Business Woman." She gives an illustration of a married couple, each having an independent income of $3,000 a year, who, if unmarried, would escape being taxed, but when married are obliged to pay $20 a year for the privilege of living together.

Your correspondent remarks that a couple who would be unwilling to pay that sum yearly for this privilege must need very little incentive for divorce. This is undoubtedly true. No doubt a married couple with ordinary affection for each other would be willing to pay an even larger sum rather than be forced to separate. But the question is, Is it well for the Government to be willing to levy a tax, however small, not only on individual thrift, energy, and enterprise, but also upon gentle, natural human affections, such as marriage and parenthood, all of which have hitherto been considered important factors in the development of civilization?

OLD-FASHIONED WOMAN.

A "Titanic" Epitaph.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The recent tragedy of the Volturno has reminded me of the splendid passage in Walt Whitman's "Song for All Seas, All Ships." These fine words of the burly old enigma are the true epitaph for the Titanic, the Volturno, and all that have gone down doing their duty. Will not the White Star Line put them up somewhere on their ships in memory of that April night?

Flaunt out visible as ever the various ship-signals!
But do you reserve especially for yourself and for the soul of man one flag above all the rest,
A spiritual woven signal for all nations, emblem of man elate above death,
Token of all brave captains and all intrepid sailors and mates.
And all that went down doing their duty,
Reminiscent of them, twined from all intrepid captains young or old,
A pennant universal, subtly waving all time, o'er all brave sailors,
All seas, all ships.

"The Last Word" on Suffrage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A new magazine, opposing woman suffrage, comes from New Canaan, Conn., and is entitled The Reply. It reads like a very cogent publication, but why call it The Reply? As it is seeking subscribers, why not call it The Last Word? Then all the women, regardless of politics, would have it or explode in the effort. W. J. L.

FARM COLONY PRISONS.

Authorities on Penology Testify to Their Success.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg to indorse Adolph Lewisohn's idea of a farm industrial prison instead of the present Sing Sing. Now is the time to act. I quote from the late Edmond Kelly's "Elimination of the Tramp," (prefaces by R. W. Hebberd, R. F. Cutting, and R. W. de Forest,) Page 85:

> The forced labor colony at Witzwyl is practically a penitentiary. It receives all persons convicted of misdemeanors. But by the side of the forced labor colonies there subsist the old penitentiaries, where a severe discipline is maintained. It seems probable that the old penitentiaries are still used only because they are there, and that ultimately all penitentiaries and even State prisons will be slowly converted into farm colonies. * * * A very large number of men can be put to work on a very small space and thus made to recover bodily health, nervous tone, and laborious habits with the least possible expense.

This was written in 1908.

Mr. Lewisohn also advocates developing the honor system as an important feature of the farm industrial colony. Now let us see what Messrs. William R. George and Lyman Beecher Stowe have to say on this aspect of the subject in "Citizens Made and Remade," (1912,) Page 256:

> The Sheriff of a county in Vermont is allowing his prisoners to go out to work by the day on neighboring farms. They pay the county for board and lodging an amount equal to about two-thirds of their wages. They go back and forth to their work without guard or anything to distinguish them from ordinary workers. * * *.
>
> In the States of Colorado, Oregon, and Washington the more trustworthy of the convicts are allowed to live in unguarded camps while working on the roads. Before going into these camps they swear on their honor that they will not attempt to escape. In Colorado, where they have been tested longest, less than 1 per cent. have violated their pledges. * * *
>
> In Ohio and several other States experiments of a somewhat similar nature are being tried. Whether these particular experiments succeed or fail, they nevertheless express an irresistible impulse of the times—an impulse which cannot itself fail because it expresses fundamental truths.* * *

RICHARD WELLING.

Thinks Eggs Are Harmful.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A physician of fifty years' practice, Dr. Sims, at present living in the Hotel Empire, known the country over as an authority on human physiognomy, his work on that subject being in the New York Public Library, said to me recently: "Don't eat eggs; eggs contain lime; lime is dead matter. Eat food containing live matter."

He says that he gave up eating eggs many years ago, as he found that they were conducive to paralysis, particularly of the arms. My own experience confirms this. Last Spring I habitually ate eggs for noonday luncheon. I found that in the afternoon, when I had worked a couple of hours, my left arm commenced to get numb, and the hand partially paralyzed. Since I have given up eating eggs, however, I have never suffered in the slightest degree from such symptoms I know of nothing else that could have brought about the change.

Can Wall Street "Bear" It?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I understand that business is at a standstill in Wall Street. This is so sad that I am constrained to inquire why the brokers don't get together and bear the egg market. Somebody outside of the Street has bulled it to the limit and it is a shame for the bears to be hibernating down there and sucking their paws with such an opportunity before them to wake up and do something.

Decreased Egg Consumption.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The consumption of eggs in this country is about eighteen dozen per year per person. But that average was never struck with prices as they now are. The present consumption is about one-twelfth of a dozen per person every other week, and that on a doctor's prescription. W. J.

Fire Sprinklers on Ships.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Had the steamer Volturno been equipped with automatic fire sprinklers a great calamity might have been averted and the ship saved. They are easily installed at a low cost by the steamfitters on board. Steam could also be turned into them at any time, which is also a great fire extinguisher.

Free Organ Recitals.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I feel it my duty to call the attention of your music-loving readers to a splendid series of concerts that may be attended absolutely free of cost. I refer to the Sunday afternoon organ recitals now being given under the auspices of the Board of Education at the Ethical Culture Meeting House, Sixty-fourth Street and Central Park West. This course of musical lectures has been but recently instituted, and while it has already proved very popular, is not as widely known as it ought to be.

I cannot urge too strongly upon the music-loving public a pilgrimage to the hall of the Ethical Culture Society next Sunday afternoon at 4. K. W. W.

An Epicurean's Thanksgiving.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How far has the custom spread of eating only a little on Thanksgiving Day? I have several friends whom I have questioned recently on this point, and I have been surprised to find a large proportion of them following the custom which I have adopted in recent years. Their wish is the same as mine, to avoid the headaches, colds, and biliousness that are the aftermaths of stuffing.

THE MILITANT SPEAKS.

A thief has stolen my purse!
I have pleaded in vain
To his heart and his brain!
The rascal, to make matters worse,
Laughs long in my face!
I pleaded a space,
Then went to the law—the just law of our land—
And asked it to give back my own to my hand.
Refused! I was worsted by wrong and by right.
Where lies my redress? It is only in might!

My birthright was stolen from me!
It was torn from my hand
By man—in this land,
This glorious land of the free!
I have pleaded in vain
My right to regain—
Have pleaded with patience, with wisdom and skill;
I have been to the courts; I have struggled until
The pain of resentment makes righteousness bold.
My birthright is mine! More, far more, than my gold,
I prize the possession inborn of my soul!

Where now lies redress? Shall the rascals who stole
Hold, aye, until death,
What is more than my breath?
Ah, sad is the need—
Sad and shameful the sight!
Still, when women are wronged
Why shouldn't they fight?

FOREIGN LECTURESHIPS.

Harvard's Proposal in 1864 Was Suspiciously Rejected.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Frank H. Vizetelly calls the attention of your readers to some features of the career of Henry Yates Thompson. Mr. Thompson is a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, Eng., (B. A., 1862.) As a young man he came to the United States in the tumultuous days of the civil war, traveled over various parts of the country, and was deeply impressed by what he saw. Among others who received him hospitably was the Hon. Edward Everett, once Minister to England, and ex-President of Harvard College.

While in the United States young Thompson conceived the project of having a lectureship established in Cambridge, Eng., on the "History, Literature, and Institutions of the United States of America." He was keenly appreciative of the want of information in England as to things American, "especially," as he said, "among the upper classes." Accordingly, when he returned home, he formulated with great care his novel plan. He offered to endow a lectureship, providing for a biennial course of twelve lectures during one term at Cambridge, the lecturer to be appointed by the President and Fellows of Harvard, and—in his own words—the lecturer's "sole qualifications to be American citizenship, and the opinion of his appointers that he is a fit person."

The plan of a foreign lectureship he considered so entirely novel to English authorities that he was unwilling to bring the matter in the first instance before his own university. So he sent the plan to Mr. Everett for the sake of obtaining Everett's aid in offering the scheme to Harvard, whence it could come officially to Cambridge from Harvard. Otherwise it was likely, he thought, to meet with no very serious attention. Everett's death early in 1865 no doubt delayed the plan. But it reached President Hill of Harvard in the Spring of that year, and with the full approval of the Harvard authorities was sent to the Vice Chancellor of Cambridge, Eng., by President Hill. It was already too late in the term for action, so the plan was postponed to Autumn. Rumors of it leaked out, and objections to it began to be heard long before it reached the Cambridge Senate. Meantime Mr. Thompson determined to publish the preliminary correspondence for private circulation, expecting doubtless to arouse the Cambridge Senate to the large importance of his plan. The pamphlet is an extremely rare one, the only copy known to me being at present in the library of Yale University. Stephen's biographer tells the fate of the matter as follows:

> It will probably be thought by modern readers that when Stephen told Lowell that a cry of "Socinianism" was raised this was a joke. It was nothing of the kind, * * * the drum ecclesiastic was resoundingly beaten. "Are members of the Senate aware," wrote one of the drummers, "that Harvard University, as far as it professes any term of religion, is distinctly Socinian, or, if Americans prefer the term, Unitarian"? Another gentleman thought good to say in print that by receiving a lecturer from Harvard we should "pander to that which is perhaps the worst vice inherent in the North American character, namely, SELF-CONCEIT." Such were the amenities of the time, such was the use made of capital letters, and such was the wisdom of the Senate. * * *

It may be added that James Russell Lowell would probably have been sent by Harvard as the first lecturer to Cambridge, Eng., on the new foundation, had the plan succeeded. Though it failed, it is quite too important a story to be allowed to escape the attention of people interested to-day in the larger aspects of the movement toward international comity and understanding.

EARLY CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

Consumers' League Appeals to Public on Behalf of Salesgirls.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At the time of the year commonly called the season of good-will and good cheer the Consumers' League perennially publishes its message reminding shoppers to complete their Christmas purchases at an early date.

This it does in an endeavor to lessen the strain and exhaustion of the large army of working women who toil in our stores and factories. The Consumers' League believes that these conditions can be avoided at the holiday season by united effort on the part of the great bulk of the buying public to shop early—early in the day and early in the season.

For thirteen years this league has waged this campaign. That public opinion is alive to the unnecessary and inhuman nature of the eleventh-hour rush has been proved by the wide response of editors, cartoonists, advertisers, and the buying public to the appeal for compassion for wearied and exhausted salesgirls, messengers, delivery men, and mail carriers.

Never again ought a civilized community permit a little boy to die of exposure because, after delivering Christmas packages until a late hour at night, he was too tired to reach his home. That tragedy happened but a few years ago in our great metropolis, where people are so busy seeking amusement and pleasure that they will not take time to select gifts for their friends until the day of reckoning is close at hand.

President the Consumers' League.

A WAR FOR THE BALLOT.

Suffrage Leaders May Have Trouble in Recruiting an Army.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see by THE TIMES that Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt proposes to declare war unless she soon gets the vote. This is what she says:

> I do not believe in war, but I say to you, fellow-citizens, that if the women are going on making their demand, and election after election the voters are going against them at the polls, I tell you we will not endure it.

Now, this sort of talk furnishes another specimen, among the many, of the folly of giving the franchise to women, especially to women holding Mrs. Catt's sentiments, and who aspire to be rulers. She threatens a sex war, supposedly to be fought by women. Perhaps she believes that when it comes to actual physical fighting, which is the final appeal of law and power, the women would equal the men. Well, even granting this, hadn't Mrs. Catt better wait until she has at least half of the women on her side?

She herself very well knows that all the women who favor suffrage—let alone the small portion of these who would fight for it—are only a fraction of the female population. And it would not much help matters for Mrs. Catt if she could count upon aid from that comparatively small body of the henpecked supporters, or of those vote-adoring males who favor woman suffrage for what they think there is in it for them. It would be, indeed, welcome to the male "anti" side, especially at the beginning of this sex war, before men have become accustomed to treating women antagonists as they would a mob of men, to have the aforesaid males to handle. By all means, dear General Catt, put your male supporters in a van, and let them start the fight. Be assured that if you do, the survivors, if any, will have something more than forcible feeding to complain of. W. C. C.

TRUST QUESTIONS ARE TO BE DEBATED

Civic Federation Will Consider the Need for a National Trade Commission.

A LONG REPORT IS READY

Department on Regulation of Industrial Corporations Has Studied the Subject.

The proposal that a National Interstate Trade Commission, fashioned along the lines of the Interstate Commerce Commission, should be formed to deal with problems arising from large industrial corporations will be one of the important subjects to be dealt with by the National Civic Federation at its meetings to be held on Dec. 11 and 12, at the Hotel Astor, according to a bulletin sent out yesterday.

This proposal has been the subject of study by the Federation's Department on Regulation of Industrial Corporations, and has been made the subject of a long report. The question will be considered as to whether large corporations shall be compelled or permitted to take out a Federal license and be subjected to the supervision of a commission.

No hint is given of the attitude of the department in its report. The department has investigated the suggestion that the size of industrial corporations should be limited, and has tried to get the best opinion as to what this limit should be in the event that limitation is considered desirable.

The department has endeavored to collect data on the point so often alleged that corporations sometimes become so large that they are unwieldy and therefore inefficient. The starting point was the showing of the 1910 census that the output of individual ownership and small corporations has been produced at a less cost than that of their larger competitors, the greater corporations.

The whole of the so-called problem of "regulating competition" has been exhaustively investigated with a view to determine the difference between restraint of competition and restraint of trade, and to learn whether or not competition can be regulated in such a way as to prevent that destructive competition which is assumed to be undesirable and uneconomic from the point of view of the public. The department has considered whether a regulative system can be devised which will be effective not only in protecting the public from the alleged evils which flow from a monopoly or a near monopoly, but also in preserving the alleged benefits of such a monopoly.

The question of the manufacturer's right to fix a retail price, which has been the subject of important litigation recently, has also been considered in its various aspects by the department. Another of the questions considered was whether the price cutting of department stores and other mercantile establishments has been a benefit or an injury to the public. Still another question investigated was whether or not, under the Sherman Anti-Trust act, the fixing of prices or the limitation of output by farmers is permissible.

The department will also present its views on the question as to whether or not agreements between organizations of workingmen and organizations of employers fixing rates of wages, hours of labor, and conditions of work are violations of the Sherman act, and on the related question whether or not, if illegal, such combinations should be legalized.

STEEL EARNINGS GOOD.

Editor of Poor's Manual Cites Common Stock Dividends.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the recent attack upon the Steel Corporation, evidently made for speculative purposes, some facts showing the true position of the company will be timely. I submit below figures showing the surplus available for dividends on Steel common since the organization of the Steel Corporation in April, 1901, in comparison with the earnings available for dividends on Pennsylvania Railroad stock during the same period. I hold no brief for the Steel Corporation, but merely wish to show its record from a new point of view. I have selected the Pennsylvania Railroad for comparison, first, because the Pennsylvania ranks as one of the best of the railroads, and, second, because the amount of Pennsylvania stock outstanding now about equals that of Steel common:

THREE OPERAS SUNG THANKSGIVING DAY

Wagner's "Parsifal" Excellently Given Before Holiday Matinee Throng at Metropolitan.

"MANON LESCAUT" AT NIGHT

Puccini's Opera, with Caruso, Mme. Bori, and Scotti, a Delight—"Haensel and Gretel" at Century.

Amfortas .....Hermann Weil
Titurel .....Carl Schlegel
Gurnemanz .....Herbert Witherspoon
Parsifal .....Carl Jorn
Klingsor .....Otto Goritz
Kundry .....Olive Fremstad
Conductor, Alfred Hertz.

"Parsifal," which was first produced on Christmas Eve, 1903, entered its eleventh season as a permanent part of the Metropolitan Opera's repertory in yesterday afternoon's holiday performance. It is the season when—after Jan. 1—the copyright on Wagner's works will expire in the countries of Europe, and performances of it will be given on every operatic stage that can compass its difficulties properly, and a good many that cannot. But there is nothing heard on the denunciations that were heaped upon New York and Heinrich Conried for profaning the masterpiece sacred to Baireuth alone, and degrading it by putting it upon a "commercial" stage, before an ordinary operatic public. The sincerity of much of this talk was tested by Mr. Conried's offer to the associated operatic managers of Germany to leave "Parsifal" alone in 1903, if they on their part would agree to leave it alone after 1913, when they, too, would come into the legal right to perform it. The result was a hasty refusal then, and universal preparation for it now.

But "Parsifal" has not been profaned by its New York productions, whatever may be the case in the minor Continental opera houses next January. These productions have been prepared with devotion and beautifully presented. They have deeply impressed their audiences, who have come to them and ended in an appropriate spirit, and who have perceived in them something apart from an ordinary operatic performance. This is as it should be, and the management of the Metropolitan has shown good judgment in reserving this work for times and occasions when it can thus given and thus received. Such was the case with yesterday's performance, and with yesterday's audience.

There have been many changes among those concerned with this performance since 1903. Mr. Hertz has never yielded the conductor's baton to another. Of the principal singers only Mr. Goritz remains, though Messrs. Reiss and Bayer still officiate as Esquire and Knight, respectively. Yet the performance to-day is the same in spirit and in effect—except as it is more perfected in detail—as it was ten years ago. It has often enough been pointed out how great are the deserts of Mr. Hertz on account of the conscience and zeal he has put into his conducting of "Parsifal"—to say nothing of his skill and comprehension of it—by which he has maintained the representations upon the high level set for them in the beginning. That was noticeably true yesterday: the performance went with remarkable smoothness and finish, with an admirable co-operation on the part of all concerned in it. Nearly all the orchestra sounded so beautifully rich and full without excess of sonority, with the exception of Carl Schlegel, who sang what is allotted to Titurel in the Hall of the Grail, and to the First Knight and Sophie Braslau, who sang the music of the Voice, and who both deserved commendation, all the singers had been heard here before in "Parsifal."

Puccini's "Manon Lescaut."

Manon .....Lucrezia Bori
Lescaut .....Antonio Scotti
Des Grieux .....Enrico Caruso
Geronte .....Andrea de Segurola
Edmondo .....Angelo Bada
L'Oste .....Paolo Ananian
Maestro di Ballo .....Angelo Badà
Un Musico .....Maria Duchene
Conductor, Giorgio Polacco.

In the evening the first performance this season of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" was given, and the Italian composer's version of the Prévost's delectable story thus preceded Massenet's with which it was intended to open the season, but which had to be postponed because of Miss Geraldine Farrar's illness. Puccini's opera, one of his earliest productions, is one of his most spontaneous and charming ones. His grief over Mimi was abundant when he wrote "Manon Lescaut," and he made large draughts upon it. The action of the opera presupposes previous information of the course of the story on the listener's part, for the four acts are hardly more than four pictures taken from the book, but the music in them is not only melodious and vivacious, but it has also an abundance of characterization, and shows a light and dexterous touch.

Mr. Caruso was the representative of Des Grieux, a part that he sings with some of his most delightful skill. Of course his appearance made the performance notable in the public mind, and accounted for a large part of the great attendance. Mme. Lucrezia Bori has excellent opportunities as Manon, and her singing as well as her impersonation gave pleasure. Lescaut was capitally represented by Mr. Scotti, who appeared in his best voice.

The performance was under the direction of Mr. Polacco, who carried it through with fire and dramatic movement, and sometimes with a little too much tone on the part of the orchestra. It was a carefully prepared performance and was worthy of the Metropolitan's high standard.

"HAENSEL AND GRETEL."

Holiday Matinee of Humperdinck's Fairy Opera at the Century.

Peter .....Bertram Peacock
Gertrude .....Cordelia Latham
Hansel .....Gladys Chandler
Gretel .....Mary Carson
The Witch .....Kathleen Howard
The Sandman .....Florence Coughlan
The Dew Fairy .....Grace Alberts
Conductor, Carlo Nicosia.

A pleasing incident of the Thanksgiving holiday was a special afternoon performance at the Century Opera of "Hänsel and Gretel" in English. There were many children present, of a smaller and a larger growth, to whom the performance afforded evident pleasure. The performance had its merits, but it might so easily have had more that there was an almost inevitable feeling of regret in contemplating it. Mr. Nicosia, who conducted it, could scarcely be expected to have the fullest understanding of and sympathy with a work so essentially Teutonic, nor did he show them to the fullest. His tempos were not always appropriate or elastic, and certain portions of the orchestral score, such as the beautiful interlude preceding and including the apparition of the angels, had evidently been neglected in rehearsal and failed of their effect.

The singers who took part were mostly excellent; and most, not all, delivered the music in such a way that the text was easily intelligible. A general fault was over-emphasis in action and a lack of variety and restraint in singing. It would be a good deal to expect of American singers that they should find quite the right note of Teutonic naïveté, childish ingenuousness, and innocent merriment; but they could come a little nearer to the American sort. Miss Gladys Chandler gave Hänsel more petulance, impatience, and awkwardness than was really necessary. Miss Mary Carson came nearer representing a credible and sympathetic Gretel. Both sing very agreeably. So does Mr. Bertram Peacock as Peter, but with too uniformly full a tone. Miss Cordelia Latham's diction was less good than most of her associates, and Miss Kathleen Howard mastered all the deep, dramatic significance of the witch.

The scenery was not so good as much that has been used in other productions at the Century Opera, the need for improvement being especially felt in the scene in the forest. "Hänsel and Gretel," according to the announcements, is to occupy a week later on in the season at the Century Opera. It is to be hoped that by that time a more finished and carefully studied performance will have been worked out.

"Hänsel and Gretel" was preceded by a performance by the International Ballet, a series of dances by various groups of dancers, arranged by Luigi Albertieri. These were of the various national character—Russian, Slavic, Hungarian, Italian, and Spanish. These were conducted by Mr. Josef Pasternack and several of them gave the audience manifest pleasure.

DAWLISH STARTLED AMERICAN ARTIST

One-Piece Bathing Suit Worn by Women at Devonshire Resort a Revelation.

JOHN CHASE TELLS ABOUT IT

John Chase, the painter, who arrived on the Rotterdam on Monday for a few months' visit, has abandoned Paris as a place of residence for Marlotte, a little village in the Department of Seine-et-Oise. Mr. Chase says that not so many American artists live in France as formerly, and he attributes its partly to the fact that the higher cost of living has become a great bugaboo there as well as here and partly to the fact that an artist no longer has to be a foreigner to sell his paintings in the United States.

Mr. Chase during the Summer made a voyage of discovery into rural England, and penetrated to a spot hitherto untrammeled by foreign and American ideas. There they had the "mixed bathing" which is so frowned upon at some of the better-known seaside resorts, and the costumes would thrill one upon whom those at Ostend had begun to pall.

"Twenty-five years ago a lot of artists used to live at Marlotte, which is in the Forest of Fontainebleau," said Mr. Chase yesterday at the Wolcott. "There were De Penne, the animal painter, and Delort, and Ditti, who still makes his home there, and a lot of others. Henri Murger, who wrote about 'Bohemia,' used to be a resident of the place. It is a tiny village—not even a commune. That reminds me, by the way, that when I got back here I had to be identified by my French police certificate.

"You see, everybody who lives in France has to register himself with the police, and he gets a card identifying him. When I landed from the Rotterdam I had several new paintings in one of my trunks, and the Inspectors didn't like their looks. I hadn't signed them. They considered it curious that I should bring the unsigned pictures, and finally demanded some proof that I was an American painter. There was nothing I had with me that would indicate this except my French police card, and when I showed this, they allowed me to leave the pier.

"A good many artists now live in Marlotte all the year round, but besides myself, there is only one American there, and he is not an artist. The cousins of Count Robert de Montesquieu are lords of the manor.

"I went to Devonshire to paint during the month of August but the trouble was that when I found anything worth painting I could not find any place to sleep, even in a farmhouse. The whole countryside was jammed with Summer boarders. Finally I had to make my headquarters at a little seaside place called Dawlish, which is the most typically English place I have ever seen. But it had one peculiarity, and that was the bathing costumes that were worn. I would never have suspected that in conventional, staid England the women would be wearing a one-piece suit for a bathing costume, and very little of that. It had anything I ever saw at Ostend beaten to a standstill. I felt the whole time like a man who had blundered into a family bathing party.

"I should say that the number of American artists living in France is on the decrease. Men come home more. One doesn't have to be a foreigner now to sell his pictures over here. Then the cost of living has been going up over there at a faster rate than here, until now there is not a great difference in the cost of living there and here."

DANCE BY FIRELIGHT.

Thanksgiving Ball at Grove Park Inn Attended by 400.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Nov. 27.—The Thanksgiving dance of Grove Park Inn this evening ushered in the Winter season in Asheville. It was held in the great rock-walled assembly room and attended by 400 society people. At each end of the room wood fires blazed in big fireplaces, and several numbers were danced by the firelight alone. The dance has long been anticipated, and most of the ball costumes were designed for it, and many of them were silver gray in effect, matching the coloring of the walls and furnishings.

The dance was preceded by dinners in the dining room. Among those entertaining at dinner were Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Seeley, Gen. and Mrs. Theodore F. Davidson, Mrs. Conally Coxe, Miss Maud Waddell, Mrs. Charles Malcolm Platt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Wells, Mrs. N. M. Watson, and Mr. Roy Watson of Princeton University; Mayor Blankenburg of Philadelphia, Mrs. W. A. Barber and William A. Barber, jr., of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Mitland, Mr. and Mrs. George S. SAYRES AT WHITE HOUSE.

Join President Wilson's Family Circle at Thanksgiving Dinner.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—President Wilson's family circle was complete at the White House Thanksgiving dinner to-night. Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, who were married at the Executive Mansion last Tuesday, and whose whereabouts had been a secret since then, slipped quietly into Washington late to-day and got back to the White House without being observed.

Although the President's daughter could have used a White House automobile, she and her husband preferred a taxicab. They had come by train from Baltimore, where it is believed they had been since last Tuesday.

The couple will accompany the President to New York to-morrow on his trip to see the Army-Navy football game, but they will sail for Europe Saturday, several hours before the game begins. They expect to return to Williamstown, Mass., their future home, late in January.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, the White House bridal couple, spent a part of Thanksgiving Day in Baltimore. They were the guests at luncheon of Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett, at Evergreen, the Garrett country seat on Charles Avenue. They came and left in an automobile, but the Garretts were very secretive concerning the visit. Robert Garrett, son of Mrs. Harrison Garrett, and his wife were also at the luncheon, and left Evergreen in the machine with the Sayres.

The unexpected appearance in Baltimore of Mr. and Mrs. Sayre seemed to give credence to the rumor circulated the last twenty-four hours that they were spending the honeymoon at one of the country estates near this city. The Garretts are old friends of the Wilsons, so are the McAdoos in the Green Spring Valley.

From what could be learned to-night Mr. and Mrs. Sayres have been spending the honeymoon at Evergreen, the home of Mrs. Harrison Garrett.

PHILIPP'S NEW FARCE IS FUNNY

"Two Lots in the Bronx," a new musical farce by Adolf Philipp, was presented by that author at his own German theatre in Fifty-seventh Street last night with Mr. Philipp himself in the leading rôle. It replaced "The Midnight Girl," which ended a run of 100 performances Wednesday night.

The play is a novelty in that it is played in both German and English, the actors speaking partly in one language and partly in the other and occasionally mixing up the two. Persons in the audience who understood only one of the languages were able to follow the piece at all times, and the farcical situations were funny enough to please every one. In explanation of his broken German speech one of the characters in the play remarked: "Inc hab doch my German in the public school aufgepickt."

The music of the farce, while very reminiscent of Mr. Philipp's "Adele," is pretty and was thoroughly enjoyed by an audience which packed the theatre from top to bottom.

The two lots in the Bronx are not parcels of real estate, but two children who are being sought by a man and his wife who have been left a fortune on condition that they find the two lots. Naturally, the couple think they must find some ground up in the Bronx. After the children have been found and provided for, the money left the couple turns out to be counterfeit, and they are forced to burn what was left them. After the money is thrown into the fire, they discover that they have destroyed the only genuine money in the house.

Mr. Philipp played the rôle of a counterfeiter, pal of the man who left the money. He was on the stage most of the time and was responsible for a large part of the fun. Ernst Naumann as Fred Dietz, the man who was left the fortune, and Marie Serini as his wife, did splendid work. Miss Serini was continually telling the other characters to "talk German," and then going ahead and speaking German herself.

Emil Berla played a female rôle, that of Mary Leliz, and was very funny throughout the play. Miss Grete von Mayhof had only a small part, but to her fell the best songs of the evening.

"Two lots in the Bronx" is full of local color, with many references to Sheriff Harburger and other well-known German-Americans. The farce situations as well as the plot were novel and very funny.

WILL REMODEL THE CENTURY

1,400 Cheap Seats to be Added After Close of Season.

The Messrs. Aborn announced yesterday that the Board of Directors of the Century Opera Company had decided to remodel the Century Opera House after the close of the season on May 23 and to increase its seating capacity from 2,100 to 3,500. The work will be done under the supervision of Carrere & Hastings, the architects who originally planned the structure for the New Theatre Company. They say that between 1,500 and 2,000 square feet of extra space can be converted to seating capacity without sacrificing the architectural beauty or convenience of the house.

It has been the experience of the season of the Century Opera Company that there are not nearly enough cheap seats. The reconstruction of the auditorium will affect almost entirely the balconies, and will afford accommodation for nearly twice the present number of patrons of the lower priced seats next season.

PLAY FOR ALIMONY CLUB.

"The Misleading Lady" to be Acted in Ludlow St. Jail Sunday.

The Alimony Club in Ludlow Street Jail is to see a special performance of "The Misleading Lady" next Sunday afternoon, when the play will be put on there as an entertainment to the inmates of the jail under the direction of Sheriff Harburger. The Sheriff has arranged with William Harris, jr., for the production.

Sheriff Harburger, who is soon to retire from office, attended the first performance of the play at the Fulton Theatre, and believing that many of the men locked up in Ludlow Street for failing to pay alimony had been victims of misleading women, he thought that it would make a fitting entertainment for them.

Ex-members of the Alimony Club have been invited to attend the performance.

Green Room Club's Revue Dec. 28.

The date of the eleventh annual revue of the Green Room Club at the Cohan Theatre was changed yesterday from Dec. 7 to Dec. 28, to give the members of the club more time to perfect their sketch, "The Movies," which is to be the feature of the programme. Among the members who will appear in the sketch are John Bunny, George M. Cohan, Raymond Hitchcock, Carter de Haven, Herbert Corthell, De Wolf Hopper, James Lackaye, Maurice Costello, "Little Billy" Dallas Welford, William Wadsworth, Bigelow Cooper, Donald MacKnight and Albert Riccardi.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The thirty-five players and the coaches of the Navy football team, together with a party of navy and public officials, will attend the performance at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre to-night.

Edgar Smith, who wrote many of the old Weber & Field burlesques, has sold Charles Frohman a satire on moving picture plays. It is "The Lone Trapper" and has been inserted into the third act of the Richard Carle-Hattie Williams musical comedy, "The Doll Girl." The cast consists of Carle as the trapper, Miss Williams as the trapperess, and Will West as the trapped.

The funeral service of E. M. Holland, the actor, who died last Monday in Cleveland, will take place this morning at 11 o'clock in the Little Church Around the Corner.

Taylor Holmes will make his first appearance in the cast of "Oh, I Say" at the Casino Theatre to-night. He will be seen in the rôle of Marcel Durand, which has been played by Charles Meakins.

Mme. Mimi Aguglia, the Italian actress, who has not been seen here since she appeared under the direction of Charles Frohman five years ago, sailed for New York yesterday from Buenos Aires and will arrive here Dec. 20. She is bringing an Italian company of eighteen players.

At his bedside when the end came was his wife, his son, and daughter. He was 56 years old.

At the time of his death Mr. Haggerty kept a law office at 16 Court Street. His first public office came when he was elected to the Assembly from the Fourth District in the Fall of 1884. Upon becoming of age he entered the manufacturing plumbing business, to which he returned after refusing a sixth nomination to the Assembly. Mr. Haggerty was a strong advocate of the Bridge Extension bill which was passed in 1885 and figured prominently as the supporter of several railroad bills for Long Island.

He was a relative of Thomas R. Farrell, the present Democratic leader of the Tenth Assembly District, and through his business relations with McCarren became one of the latter's closest friends. He was a member of the Elks, Knights of Columbus, and the Juantita Club, the Democratic organization of the Tenth District.

Primary Considerations

The normal income tax of 1% amounts to only 50 cents on the annual interest of a 5% bond of $1,000 denomination.

The tax exempt feature alone should not, therefore, influence the selection of investments.

The primary considerations are still safety, marketability and fair income return.

SENATORS WAVER ON CURRENCY BILL

Lane Won't Be Bound by Caucus —Other Members Hesitate on Particular Amendments.

CAUCUS UPHOLDS MEASURE

Rejects Hitchcock's Plan for Public Ownership and Government Control of Regional Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The already narrow margin of the Democratic control of the Senate for passing the Currency Bill as a party measure was reduced still further to-day when Mr. Lane of Oregon, refused to go into the caucus or to be bound by its decision. Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska, has already made his position plain, while there is good reason to believe that Mr. Thompson of Kansas, and two or three other Democratic Senators are wavering on particular amendments. While Mr. Lane announces that he will support the Democratic bill, he feels free to vote as he likes on particular amendments. The opposition of Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Lane alone will reduce the Democratic majority to a margin of one. If Mr. Thompson votes with them, the Republicans will control by a similar majority, while further Democratic detections will be clear gains to the Republican forces under the titular leadership of the Democratic Senator from Nebraska. Already Mr. Thompson is feeling heavy pressure from Kansas, driving him to align himself on the currency question with his Republican colleague, Mr. Bristow, who is enthusiastically in favor of the fundamental provisions of the Hitchcock measure.

The argument having most effect with Mr. Thompson is that which is already worrying a great many Democrats. It is that the Hitchcock substitute, for which the practical bankers of the Republican side of the Banking and Currency Committee have recorded their approval, provides a popularly owned institution, with every regional bank directly under the central control of the Government. The Administration bill, on the other hand, looks to the establishment of regional institutions that will be owned by the banks and dominated by the banks of the region. And the central authority of the Government's Federal reserve board would not have sufficient power to offset the influence of bankers on the directorates of the regional banks.

While these points yesterday deeply worried some of the Democrats, the party conference this morning, following yesterday's protracted discussion, made short work of the subject. In quick succession the Hitchcock plan for public ownership and his proposal for Government control of the regional directorates were rejected. The Democrats as a party have decided to follow the President implicitly, as they feel that for the present at least they can better stand attack with him than risk running counter to his views.

A strong movement developed this afternoon for ten regional reserve banks, instead of the eight provided in the bill. The discussion was much like the ordinary debates on a public buildings' bill in which each Senator strives to locate a building in his own State.

While all three drafts of the bill leave the location of the regional banks to the Federal Reserve Board, the talk to-day indicated where the Senators wanted the banks to be. If the number remains at eight, it is probable that institutions will be located at New York, Chicago, St. Louis—the present central reserve cities—and San Francisco, New Orleans, Denver, Atlanta, and some far northwestern city in which Democratic Senators are interested—like Portland, Ore.

If the number is raised to ten, Boston would probably get one bank and Baltimore or Washington another.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 27.—Senator G. M. Hitchcock, in an interview in reference to yesterday's action of the Democratic Senators on the Currency bill, said to-day:

"The calling of the Democratic conference was a surprise to me. I heard nothing of it until I was starting to take a train Tuesday afternoon. Senator Owen's speech on Monday indicated a conciliatory disposition.

"This led me in my speech on Tuesday to adopt a similar plan and to confine my arguments to the merits of the bill agreed on by my section of the committee and reported by me.

"The close attention given to my speech and the comments made afterward led me to hope that some, if not most, of the changes which I proposed would be favorably considered."

CUT RATE TELEPHONE FIGHT

Bell Service Free in Jamestown, a Competitor Says.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Hearings in the Government's anti-trust suit against the American Telephone & Telegraph Company continued to-day in order that the witnesses and attorneys might not lose time. Witnesses were W. S. Peca of the Oil City Telephone Company, John H. Wright of the Home Telephone Company of Jamestown, N. Y., C. B. Randall, counsel for the Tri-State Telephone Company of St. Paul, and Milton J. Smith of Denver, Colo., general counsel for the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Messrs. Peca, Wright, and Randall, representing independent telephone interests, testified that competition on the part of the American company was unfair. Mr. Wright said the Bell system had 300 free telephones in Jamestown, N. Y. Mr. Randall said that in Minnesota, North Dakota, and Wisconsin Bell charges always were excessive and the rates went low until competition entered the field, when charges were lowered 50 cents to $1 a month. The Bell system and the independent line are now on an even competitive basis in some cities, according to Mr. Randall, and the service in such cases is excellent.

OUR HOUSING LAWS IDEAL.

If They Were Enforced, Says Dr. Nemeyi—No Slums Like Europe's.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—American laws to promote sanitary housing of laboring people are ideal, and if fully enforced would result in conditions unequaled in any other country, in the opinion of Dr. Bartholomew Nemeyi, who is here with a commission from the Hungarian Government to investigate this subject. He came to Washington after visiting Cleveland, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and New York. He thinks the slums in the United States are not so bad as those of Europe.

"I saw what were supposed to be the worst in New York," he said to-day, "and could duplicate them in almost any European city. I think the worst I have seen here in Chicago, particularly those inhabited by the stock yards workers."

Dr. Nemeyi remarked that a great obstacle to the proper enforcement of sanitary housing laws in America was "the still frequent control of government by political machines."

Eggs $1 a Dozen in Brazil.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 27.—"We don't eat eggs in Brazil, we eat AN egg," said Capt. J. F. Ellison, head of the Amazon River Navigation Company, in an address before the Chamber of Commerce. He said eggs sold at $1 a dozen in Brazil and that all food products cost five times as much there as they do in this country.

Bank of Austria Reduces Rate.

VIENNA, Nov. 27.—The rate of discount of the Bank of Austria was reduced from 6 to 5½ per cent. to-day.

URUGUAY PAYS $4,000,000.

Republic Has Reduced Its Floating Debt Two-thirds In 1913.

The floating debt of the Republic of Uruguay has been reduced in the present year from $6,000,000 to $2,000,000, according to official information received by Consul General Jose Richling, and there has been deposited with European banks funds necessary to meet interest charges on its foreign obligations in 1913. The national Bank of the Republic has at the present time gold reserves amounting to 39 per cent. of its liabilities, including notes of issue. Bills and accounts receivable of the bank are stated at $37,000,000.

The estimate of income and budget expenditures of the Government for the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1914, indicates a surplus of income over expenditures. It is not expected, therefore, that there will be any necessity for issuing securities to cover administration costs during the year.

TICKETS ON MILEAGE BOOKS

Pennsylvania Railroad to Offer Exchange Privilege Here.

The experiment undertaken by the Pennsylvania Railroad a month ago in Pittsburgh of arranging for the exchange at station ticket offices of mileage coupons for ordinary railroad tickets has proved such a convenience to passengers that the privilege will be extended on Monday to those taking trains at Philadelphia, New York, Newark, Jersey City, Trenton, Phillipsburg, N. J., Lancaster, and Harrisburg.

Any one intending to ride on a Pennsylvania Railroad train overnight who owns a book of mileage coupons good on the Pennsylvania Railroad can, if desired, take the mileage book to a ticket office and exchange the required number of miles for an ordinary ticket. In this way a passenger gets the benefit of the low mileage rate and has his mileage coupons canceled in his presence.

This practice was started to insure accuracy in cancelling mileage coupons, and to avoid the confusion and delay in delivering mileage books to passengers at the end of a journey. It eliminates inconveniences that arise from passengers surrendering their mileage books to Pullman conductors overnight.

CAN'T WAIT FOR STATION.

Queens Commerce Chamber Wants Partially Built Structure Used.

A request has been made to the Public Service Commission by the Transit Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens that some method be adopted whereby it may be possible to make a partial use of the rapid transit station to be built on the Queensboro Bridge Plaza, so that the Second Avenue elevated trains in Manhattan may be operated into Queens Borough without waiting for its entire completion. The station will accommodate trains from the Steinway Tunnel and the Broadway-Fifty-ninth Street line, as well as the Second Avenue elevated trains.

The construction work on both the elevated extensions to Astoria and Corona is progressing rapidly and both lines will be finished, said Chairman John Adikes of the Transit Committee, and ready for operation long before the time called for in their contracts. These lines will join at the big transfer station on the Bridge Plaza. The contract for the station has been let to Snare & Triest. They have twenty-four months in which to complete the work, but they expect to finish the station within eighteen months.

With the completion of the work on the bridge to enable the operation of the Second Avenue elevated trains, and the completion of the extension in Queens to Astoria and Corona, through operation could be started from Park Row on the Second Avenue line, across the Queensboro Bridge to Astoria and Corona, if two tracks of the Bridge Plaza station were available.

TEXTILE TRADE HEALTHY.

Little, if Any, Effect Yet Felt from Removal of Wool Duty.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter says:

"Despite the fears of many agents the present lightweight season in woolen manufacture bids fair to equal in volume of business most of the so-called normal ones. Duplicates are coming forward in very satisfactory amount and will shortly put more mills in such position that they will be unable to accept further orders except for late delivery. Notices of advances in prices are being sent to customers from day to day, and among those of the week are mills at Uxbridge, Mass., and Woonsocket, R. I.

"Business is inclined to be spotty in the fancy worsted division, many mills operating on a double-time schedule, while others complain of insufficient orders as yet. At the low end of the piece goods trade the first opening has been made showing cheap overcoatings at practically last year's prices. In higher class fabrics pessimists are still to be found respecting foreign importations, but the general feeling is much better in men's wear. The dress goods business is still characterized by delay on the part of the buyers in placing their orders.

"With sales for the week reaching the very respectable total of 3,675,000 pounds, the wool market is in an extremely healthy condition, steady and firm, with a decidedly better feeling than has been evident for some weeks. Conditions warrant the assumption by dealers that prices are much more likely to show a slight advance after Dec. 1, when the free wool clause becomes effective, than to decline. The English auction sales, opening on Tuesday of the present week, clearly showed that American manufacturers have the advantage of some cents a pound on their raw material at home as compared with their European competitors. The activity of German and French buyers in England counteracts any depressing British influence, and to bring foreign wools to the level of the Boston market would require a recession of from 2½ to 5 per cent. from prices realized at the last English sales.

"The reason why the wool industries are standing up so much better than iron and steel at the present time is explained from the fact that textile corporations do not come into such immediate contact with Government restrictions as do the iron and steel mills, which are the principal sellers to public service corporations. The difficulty of the great public service corporations in financing themselves at the present time is the cloud upon the horizon. The tariff changes which would apply most severely to the textile industry seem to have scarcely any influence.

"In the worsted and woolen yarn market there is still quite a brisk demand for 2-40s and 2-50s half blood, though there is some report that spinners are getting a little above the quoted prices of 75½ cents for Bradford system and 77½ cents for French spun in these yarns. It appears at this writing that weavers will largely use 2-28s and 2-30s half blood in making up their heavyweight men's wear.

"The dress goods manufacturers have not yet become a factor in the yarn market, except in a few isolated instances, cotton yarn quotations remaining about the same as last week, with a fair demand for both knitting and weaving yarns, and with quotations upon the raw material a trifle easier. In cotton cloths, manufacturers would have been alarmed in previous years if they did not have a larger amount of orders on their books than they have at present, but the pressure of insufficient supplies in the hands of distributors brings the aggregate buying fully up to, if not above, former years. The condition of various lines of ginghams is a distinctly favorable one. In bleached goods, the thing that pleases sellers most is the fact that buyers are continually asking for early shipment of goods.

"The agitation for increased wages has not had any great effect in the textile markets and manufacturers are rather more concerned about the excessive cost of distribution and the profits of the jobbers and retailers. This is becoming the principal topic of conversation throughout the textile industry."

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Good Tone in London Market—Berlin Prices Are Strong—Steadiness in Paris.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 28.—The Times in its City article this morning says:

"The demand for money was brisk, £2,000,000 of New South Wales Treasury bills being paid for, but only a moderate amount was borrowed from the Bank of England.

"Rates for early advances, short fixtures, and India Council money were unaltered. The bank received £228,000 in bar gold. The bank return showed an increase of about £589,000 in reserve and private deposits were £2,476,000 higher.

"Discount rates were inclined to be easy in the morning, but became firmer later, demands for bills, which were scarce at first, being soon satisfied in view of the big support of gold on Wednesday from New York to Canada, and the fall in New York sterling exchange on London, which revived the fear lest American houses might withdraw gold from London, even at this late period of the year. According to some good authorities, however, New York will not have to find much more gold for Canada.

"Leading Continental exchanges showed a weak tendency, but Vienna was steady, owing partly to the reduction of the Austro-Hungarian bank rate.

"The Stock Exchange business was less active than on Wednesday, but the tone remained good."

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Prices were steady on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 86 francs 67½ centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—A strong tone prevailed on the Boerse to-day, and there was a general recovery in prices.

STORE EMPLOYES HURT THEMSELVES

MOST SALARIES ARE FAIR

Interesting Bulletin to be Sent Out by National Retail Dry Goods Association.

The December bulletin of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, which will be sent out shortly, will contain an interesting talk to store employes. It is the work of J. W. Amrath, an efficiency engineer, who is well known in the Far West. According to Secretary Pinkham of the association, this talk is being sent out with the hope of stimulating members to prepare their own talks, and to encourage them to establish their own store papers, if possible.

In part, Mr. Amrath says:

"It may surprise you to realize that it is not the things undone, but the things done and done poorly, which tip the balance toward inefficiency. Perhaps you do not stop to think that it is only a question of doing your work more carefully, by giving attention to little things. You ought to realize that by care and attention you can make any customer a permanent customer, double the sales, and increase your wages. Here is something to think about.

"Remember that everything you do in the store, and outside of it, for that matter, has some influence on making a customer decide either to come again or go elsewhere to trade. The size of the pay envelope depends upon this decision, and the satisfaction you give to the customer depends upon your attention to all the seemingly little things in the daily routine.

"You may feel that your home life and your free time have nothing to do with your duties at the store. You may feel that it is your own affair as to what you read or how long you dance, or whether you conduct yourselves in an orderly manner—and so it is. Yet you ought to use every minute of your time to benefit and to advance yourselves. If you are disorderly in your habits at home you will be disorderly and inattentive at the store. If you stay out late at night habitually you cannot work efficiently. If you do not read good books you cannot learn the good things that advance your thoughts, and so advance you. All this affects your pay envelope.

"When you try to think how you can lighten the work of others by working with them you will lessen your own task and find it a pleasure instead of a burden. By right thinking you can brighten your future, the future of others, and the community in which you live. Remember that mistakes and misfortunes are the result of wrong thinking. If you do things because you have to, instead of because you want to for your own sake, you will find the store routine irksome and harsh. It is because you do not understand that store routine is nothing but service to yourselves by service to the customer. It is because you fail to see that the satisfied customer pays your wages; that your service to the customer regulates your living.

Individual Affects Whole.

"Some of you seem to have failed to appreciate heretofore that the efficiency of any one of you is increased or decreased according to the degree of efficiency of the rest. Boys and girls enter business without an adequate realization that on their individual action depends in a great measure the success of their employer. Do you realize that the success of this concern is the very means of paying your compensation, and that it is gauged accordingly? Do you realize that keeping your minds on your present work is the basis of your own success in the future? The lad who, for instance, delivers a package at the wrong address, or who handles the package carelessly, or who may tramp up the front steps instead of going to the rear, or who is surly in doing so, does not realize that he is destroying the good effort put into the sale of the contents and the corner stone of his own future. The fact that he causes a customer to be disappointed and that he causes additional and unnecessary expense to his employer, which expense keeps the employer from paying greater wages, does not occur to him.

"It is the same with others who may be at the wrapping desk or behind the counter. As a rule, girls who enter business view their work as temporary. They do not, therefore, put forth the earnestness required to make a success of their vocation, the very success which will fit them to be better wives and mothers. In recent years the expense account of the employer has constantly increased, without corresponding return to him or to the employe. This is largely due to the indifference of the average employe.

"The more you economize in the matter of having goods taken home by the customer, the more the store can pay you in wages. The better use you make of your time and the less you idle, the more the wages will be. When you loiter you are thieving from yourselves and one another. When you waste five minutes here and ten there, and think nothing of it, you are putting your hands into your own and one another's pay envelope, because the store expense becomes greater than it ought to be. You may think that you have cleverly cheated your employer, but you have really cheated yourselves out of pay and increased opportunity.

"The employer does not pay for your failings if he can help it. He saddles your shortcomings on yourselves in smaller wages than he would pay if you were more efficient. You will be surprised to know that measuring tests in certain stores disclosed overmeasurements in cutting that amounted to thousands of dollars, the result of a few inches too much here and there.

Time Clocks Are Necessary.

"You must realize that when numbers of people are banded together, it is necessary, for the comfort of all, to observe certain regulations. For instance, the office, which is your servant in keeping your pay roll records, must be in some way informed of your presence. This information should be given in the shortest and cheapest manner, cheapest because the size of the expense account affects your wages. If the store had to employ clerks to keep your time there would be more clerks earning wages, but each person's wages would be less. Now, the shortest and cheapest way to let the office know that you are present is the time clock. When your time record shows you frequently behind time without good reason, it also shows that your mind is not on your work, and that you are not helping yourselves as much as you ought. When you are not on time, your work is left for some one else to do until you come, which often means that the work is undone. Thus you may upset the entire day's routine. When you fail to punch your time, or punch another number than your own, some one has to straighten out your mistake. When you try to deceive the house by punching for some one else, you lower the standard of honor among the whole force, causing it to pay indirectly for that person's time.

"During the past year the house has doubtless expended a good many dollars in improvements. Do you know why this great amount was put back into the business instead of being paid out to the stockholders in dividends? It is because the house realized that it owed a dividend to you and to the customer. It is because it has become plainly understood in recent years that the employer incurs a responsibility toward his employes, which he must discharge by helping with all his might to provide better living, working, and educational conditions, not only for his own employes, but for the whole community in which he labors.

"There is no good reason, since a clear understanding has been given to the house and to you of the common interest relations of employer and employe, why both sides should not benefit. There is no good reason why the earnings of both should not be doubled. It rests with yourselves, with the vim and enthusiasm you put into your work. It is not more labor, but efficient labor, that is required. You will find your wages regulated automatically and absolutely by the efforts and the earnestness which you put into your work.

"If we will all try to conserve a part of the enormous waste caused by indifference to our daily pursuit, we will then turn the most effective weapon we have on the high cost of living. We will have greater comforts, derived from greater earnings, and great content from tasks well done. Then let us resolve, each of us, to enlist with hearty cooperation under the flag of 'Efficiency.'"

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Importers Win in Contention Over Saddles—Samples to Pay Duty.

The Board of United States General Appraisers has sustained a protest by Kronfeld, Saunders & Co. in which it was asserted that saddles imported by the firm were made of leather of the bovine species, and therefore dutiable at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 450, Tariff act of 1909. Collector Mitchel demanded duty at 35 per cent., on the ground that the saddles were manufactured from pigskin. Appraiser Higgins reported to the board that the assessment was made under a misapprehension.

M. Park Parker was sustained in a contention relating to the classification of cotton fabrics having bleached or unbleached foundations, with colored extra threads forming figures. The goods were returned for duty at 40 per cent. ad valorem and 2 cents a square yard additional for the extra threads under Paragraphs 307 and 313, act of 1897. The board held that the fabrics were entitled to entry under the same paragraphs at 35 per cent. ad valorem and 2 cents a square yard.

The claim of Remy, Schmidt & Pleissner has been granted for lower duty on pillow cases, sheets, and other goods composed of flax, the edges of which were decorated by machine scalloping The goods were returned at 60 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 339, act of 1897, and it was asserted properly were dutiable at 35 per cent., under Paragraph 346.

Bennet & Smith protested against an assessment of duty on samples which it was asserted were of no commercial value. The Collector at New York held them dutiable. The board disagreed with the importers' contention and affirmed the payment of duty.

FEW LANDMARKS AROUND KIP'S BAY

The Brewery Has Survived, but the Famous Old Methodist Church Has Disappeared.

DEFIED DRAFT RIOTERS

Pastor Was with Drawn Revolver Preached His Anti-Slavery Sermon Undaunted by Threats of Those Who Opposed Him.

An illustration of the difficulty of keeping pace with the rapid changes in this city was afforded at the meeting not long ago of the Kip's Bay Neighborhood Association. Charles C. Burlingham, President of the association, called attention to the fact that there was once a Kip's Bay brewery as well as a Kip's Bay Methodist Church. The brewery has outlived the church, but although the church has been torn down and a telephone exchange build on the site, the fact that it was remembered at all was an indication of the fame it once enjoyed.

The Kip's Bay Methodist Church was torn down about two years ago. It was a dignified, old-fashioned red brick structure on the north side of Thirty-seventh Street, between Second and Third Avenues. Like many of the old-time churches in another popular home section of half a century ago—old Greenwich Village—the Kip's Bay Methodist congregation dwindled so that a consolidation was effected with the Fiftieth Street Church and the property sold.

The church was organized a few years before the civil war, and it was during that conflict that it attained a fame which gave it celebrity far beyond the confines of the city. When Fort Sumter was fired upon the women made a large flag which the men hoisted upon the church roof, and there it stayed to the end of the struggle. In the draft riots the officers were told to take the flag down or the church would be burned. William H. Boole was the pastor, and not only did he defy the rioters, but he continued to preach his emancipation sermons, notwithstanding threats of bodily harm. The flag was not taken down, and one Sunday morning in 1863 the Rev. Mr. Boole surprised his flock by calmly pulling a pistol from his pocket and placing it upon the reading desk.

"I have been threatened with bodily harm if I should preach another anti-slavery sermon," he explained. "I am going to do it, and if there is any one here who wishes to object let him do it now."

No one objected, and the minister's opponents had nothing more to say after that.

The name by which the locality has long been known commemorates a worthy Dutchman, Jacobus Kip, who was the first Secretary to the Bouwmasters and Schepens of New Amsterdam. In 1641 he moved to the country with his wife, buying a fertile farm north of Thirtieth Street bounded by the deep bay which cuts into the shore around Thirty-fourth Street. He built a large stone house, which stood until 1851. It might have stood longer had it not been placed according to the rectangular street map, at the intersection of Second Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, and when those thoroughfares were cut through the ancient farmhouse went the way of so many other landmarks of the city. It was at Kip's Bay that the British landed in 1776, after the battle of Long Island, when they crossed from the opposite shore to take possession of New York.

The members of the Kip's Bay Neighborhood Association will find in Dr. John W. Francis's address, delivered on "Old New York," which he delivered before the New York Historical Society in 1857, an interesting picture of the rural beauty and fame of that section:

"On the old road toward Kingsbridge," he says, "on the eastern side of the Island, was the well-known Kip's farm, prominently distinguished for its grat-ful fruits—the plum, the pear, and the apple—and for its choice culture of the rosaceæ. Here the élite often repaired, as did good, old Dr. Johnson and Bedell for refreshing at Fraunces's and here our Washington, now invested with Presidential honors, made an excursion and was presented with the Rosa Gallica, an exotic first introduced into this country in this garden, a fit emblem of that memorable union of France and the American colonies in the cause of Republican freedom. The gardens were famous for their exquisite fruits equally as were Newtown and Blackwell's Island for the apple known to all horticulturists abroad and at home as the Newtown pippin. Such things were. No trace are now to be found of the scenes of those once gratifying sights; the havoc of progressive improvement has left naught of these once fertile gardens of Dutch regularity save the old pear tree of the farm of the redoubtable Peter Stuyvesant in its 229th year at the corner of Thirteenth Street and Third Avenue."

Ten years after Dr. Francis's address the Stuyvesant pear tree also disappeared, although it had been carefully preserved for years by an iron railing.

DOESN'T FEAR AIRSHIPS.

British Military Publication Thinks Their Use in War is Limited.

The British Army and Navy Gazette, the leading British publication devoted to the interests of the united Royal services, in one of its recent issues argues that the aeroplane as a weapon of defense need not be taken into serious consideration for several years, at least. The Gazette submits what it terms "a few considerations" to prove its case.

"A firstclass machine," says The Gazette, "is capable of carrying a useful load, when in excellent condition, of from 600 to 700 pounds. Deducting the weight of pilot and observer and three hours' fuel, this leaves a margin in lifting power of from 100 to 200 pounds. But further deductions will have to be made for instruments of various descriptions, and probably for wireless apparatus. The margin available for carrying explosives is therefore a strictly limited one.

"Let us estimate it very generously at 100 pounds. On account of the great height at which an aeroplane must fly to be reasonably safe from hostile fire, great accuracy of aim is not to be expected; if one bomb in five hits a relatively small target when dropped from a height of 4,000 feet, which the Italians found it necessary to maintain to secure safety, that is as much as can be expected. The 100-pound margin may, therefore, be split up into five 20-pound bombs or ten 10-pound bombs.

"Now, let us consider the effects of a hit. The striking velocity of the projectile will be relatively low, and its destructive effect is therefore already diminished initially. A 15.5 inch shell weighs something like 1,200 pounds, and, even so, it is insufficient to put a battleship out of action. In the Japanese war, it may be remembered, the Tsarevitch was hit by no fewer than sixteen 12-inch shell before she withdrew from action, and the case of the Russian men-of-war in Port Arthur during the siege is also noteworthy for the relatively small damage inflicted by the heavy Japanese guns.

"Hence it would be futile to expect an aeroplane to do any appreciable execution with its 100 pounds of projectiles. It is just possible that a chance hit in a vital part might put a small vessel out of action, that it might even sink a submarine awash, but this is the utmost that can be reasonably expected.

"But with the airship we are in a different position. In the first place, accuracy of aim is greatly facilitated, owing both to the steadier platform provided by an airship car, and to its ability to maneuver at feeble speed and even to maintain a stationary position.

"Then, again, the airship is a true weight carrier. The newer Zeppelins have a margin of lift over and above the full crew and fuel for, say, forty-eight hours, of something like two tons. This admits of greatly heavier projectiles, while the chance of hitting the target is increased at the same time.

"A hit on the deck of a battleship would probably not be fraught with destructive consequences, but it is clear that enormous damage might be inflicted on dock yards, arsenals, depots, and, lastly, on the lines of communication of an army. In this respect we are already within measurable distance of practical results, and when the question is envisaged from this point of view, the absolute necessity of providing the means for meeting this form of attack becomes even more apparent."

"MADE IN CANADA," BUT HERE FIRST

Traveler in the Northwest Meets Many Familiar Names, with "Ltd" After Them.

REALLY BRANCH FACTORIES

Not Much Danger of Large Industries Emigrating — A Development of Native Business, Too.

"There is not much danger of the United States industries leaving this country to emigrate to Canada," said a man who but recently returned from the Canadian Northwest. "They are not leaving the country, but are throwing a feeler across the border. There is reason for the suspicion, however, that United States industries are kidnapping Canadian trade by simply assuming a Canadian disguise."

According to this New Yorker many firms on this side of the line have organized plants upon the other side, and are doing business as the simon pure Canadians. Many of the large ones are there disguised simply by the addition of "Limited" after the firm name.

"Times are hard in Canada just now, perhaps harder than they are in the United States," he continued. "In the Northwest they are exceptionally hard. The cost of living is high, and the opinion of a living wage differs about 10 per cent. or more from the opinion held in this country. So as a sort of exhibition of national pride and a boost for business, Canada has been sending out across the country a "Made in Canada Train." It is intended as a convincing proof that Canadian business is advancing, and it also conveys an intended lesson for Canadians to purchase articles of native manufacture.

"The train, of course," he said, "there has not been as much enthusiasm over the coming of the 'made in Canada train' as has been desired. Indeed, in some cities, according to local criticism, the train was not received with sufficient acclaim. Its progress across the continent is the subject of a well-planned publicity campaign. 'Made in Canada' is made a sort of watchword.

"The coming of the train is duly announced, and to all is extended the invitation to visit it. The 'Made in Canada' train is rather an impressive sight as it puffs its way into the town station. It consists of perhaps fifteen or twenty box cars. The exteriors are decorated. When the train is duly sidetracked and the doors at each end of the cars are opened up and with the use of wooden runways from car to car the entire train becomes one long freight car. Visitors enter through one end and pass through and out the door at the other end.

"A passageway is made through each car, and on one side of this passageway are displayed the results of Canadian agriculture and factories. The interior of each car is decorated and arranged much like a booth at a church fair. A staff of pleasant-spoken men travel with the train, ready and willing to answer the visitor's questions. In many cases they also distribute samples of Canadian made goods. Usually the train remains only a day in town, but in Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat, and other larger cities it remains two or three days. The whole thing, it is said, is a railroad enterprise.

"The traveler or the settler from the United States will find nothing strange when he or she visits the train. Passing through one of the cars the visitor's attention will be attracted by a sign announcing that beneath are exhibited the product of a certain well-known manufacturer of a device for keeping account of moneys taken in or paid out. The demonstrator is exhibiting one of the largest models. The bell rings merrily as he pushes a key and opens a drawer. You pause, the name of the concern seems familiar to you. Then you penetrate the thin disguise of the added limited and discover that the article you are admiring was first manufactured in Ohio. If you ask the exhibitor he will answer glibly that it was made in Canada. Pinned down he will admit that 95 per cent. was made in Canada.

"For the first time you learn that it is really a Canadian home industry.

"Walking further along, if there is not so great a crowd that stopping is an impossibility, the visitor will have a chance to taste a remarkably tasty pickle. It is one of a number of varieties. It tastes quite homelike, and upon looking close at the great size-stretched across the top of the bottle you find that the name is as homelike as the taste. It is really a very well advertised United States article. The brand you are looking at is its Canadian cousin. It is made by the same firm, by the same process, and for about the same price, but the factory is located in either Hamilton or Toronto. Question the young man in charge of the exhibit. He is perfectly willing to talk. Boosting his charge is his business. He exhibits a pained surprise when informed that he is carrying about the country an article of undoubted United States manufacture. 'No,' he will hasten to explain; 'it is of Canadian manufacture.'

"He is disposed to disregard entirely the United States origin of the article. Pressed upon the subject, and he will admit that there is some such sort of an article manufactured in the States. He leaves the impression that it is the Canadian company that has crossed the border.

"Walking into another car the visitor is confronted with several articles of men's wear, the product of a concern well known in the United States. There is the same firm name, but disguised with the addition of 'limited.' The articles you see, however, were not turned out by any factory in the United States. They are the product of a plant established in Eastern Canada. So as you walk through the length of the car the traveler from the United States will see many articles that are familiar to him. There are goods, the names of which are household words in the United States.

"Of course, nothing is intended to reflect upon the commercial development of Canada. That development has been steady and remarkable. Canada to-day has manufactories that she may well be proud of. I simply intend to convey this: That when you read of the great danger of our big industries going to Canada, it is to laugh. Some, however, have gone across the line and are now enjoying a greater measure of prosperity than they did in the United States. But those that have migrated are not the big or the important concerns."

PARTNERS MEET AGAIN.

American Woman's Experience at a Parisian Tango Tea.

"A friend of mine tells of an uncomfortable experience she had in Paris last Summer," said yesterday a New York woman who has just got back from abroad.

"The place where everybody went in the afternoon in Paris last Summer was the Magic City, where the tango tea flourished. On certain days the price of admission was raised, and this was intended to make the crowd 'select.' It was considered quite good form to dance with anybody you saw there, and it was not an unusual thing for women to ask men to dance with them.

"My friend, an American woman, was extremely anxious to dance. She noticed a well-dressed man who was sitting at a table alone, and she went over and asked if he would dance with her. He was on his feet the moment she addressed him, and she found he was an exceedingly good dancer. He was such an adept that they danced the whole afternoon together. He was a man of polished manners, spoke several languages fluently, and was such excellent company that when 6 o'clock came, the woman noticed the hour with real regret.

"'I am so sorry that it is so late,' she said, after thanking her partner, 'but I have a dinner engagement this evening, and I must hurry to my hotel.'

"'I, too, have an engagement for dinner,' said the man, looking at his watch, 'and I, too, must hurry away.' They parted with mutual regret.

"At dinner the lady was startled by her first glance at one of the waiters. He was her dancing partner of the afternoon."

New Jersey ranks second, with 1,476, but not another State in the Union has 500 Columbia graduates within its bounds.

The list as given out at the university yesterday is as follows:

BIG SEWER PROBLEM WAITS ON SUBWAYS

Public Works Department Can Fit Its Plans to Express Station in Times Square.

WISH TO AVOID TRANSFERS

Opponents of Express Station at 48th St. Insist One There Would Cause Unnecessary Changes.

Any plan the Public Service Commission finally decides upon for the express stations in Times Square will involve reconstruction of the sewer system in that neighborhood. This is considered a fact of great consequence by those who are urging on the commission the importance to the city at large of providing a great traffic exchange at Forty-second Street and Broadway, as it affords an opportunity for settling in a comprehensive manner the entire problem of Times Square.

In the last few months on two or three occasions the present sewers proved to be inadequate to carry off a heavy rainfall, and the Subway was blocked by their overflow. The traffic of the city was dislocated, homegoers were put to serious inconvenience, and the damage to abutting property ran into very large figures.

If the city is to protect its property owners from damage and itself from paying heavy claims in the future, it must undertake the enlargement and replanning of its sewer system in this part of the city, and it happens that the sewers in question lie precisely in that territory about which the station controversy has arisen. The sewer which is supposed to take care of Times Square comes into it from the east at Forty-second Street, runs up Broadway to about Forty-fifth Street, and there turns west on its journey to the North River. It is about eight feet in diameter, except where the present Interborough tracks go over it, and there it is replaced by a number of iron pipes each about thirty-six inches in diameter.

Wait for Commission's Decision.

The engineers of the Department of Public Works, in whose charge the sewers are, reckon that it will be necessary approximately to double the capacity of this sewer in order to guard against such public inconvenience as has resulted from recent heavy storms. They are waiting for the Public Service Commission to make their plans for the new subways to decide how this is to be done so that the sewer work may be taken up at the same time as the subway construction, thus reducing to the minimum the annoyance of the work to the neighborhood.

There has been some disposition on the part of those who would neglect the chance of providing this part of the city with a great union subway station, at which the expresses of both the Interborough and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit would stop, and which would connect with the Steinway Tunnel line, to argue that it is almost impracticable from the engineering point of view to place above Forty-second Street the Brooklyn Rapid Transit station. There is, it is argued, such a tangle of subsurface structures to be handled under Times Square that it is important to save the small amount of space which the construction of the island platforms for the express station would add to the width of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit line.

The sewers are the most difficult of such structures to design, for electric wires can go anywhere, and gas and water pipes are both operated under such pressure that it is immaterial at what depth they are laid. Now it appears that, quite irrespective of the new subways, a sewer problem of considerable difficulty has to be faced. This fact, however, has the great advantage of permitting the adoption of really effective measures instead of merely makeshift alterations. The engineers of the Public Works office are fully aware that it will take some ingenuity to run a sewer system beneath the Brooklyn Rapid Transit line at Forty-second Street, but they are sure it can be done, and are not at all disposed to admit that it makes much difference to their job whether the Brooklyn Rapid Transit's station lies above or below Forty-second Street.

Traffic Returns the Best Guide.

When the relative needs of traffic facilities at the north and south ends of Times Square are considered, the best guide is the traffic returns of the present Subway. From this it appears that for the twelve months ending June 30, 1913, the number of passengers who bought their tickets at Fiftieth Street on the Broadway branch was 5,779,724, whereas at Times Square the number was 13,211,957, or about two and a half times as many. This, it was pointed out yesterday, means that unless the express station on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit is placed at Forty-second Street and Broadway instead of at Forty-eighth Street and Seventh Avenue, there will be on the average about two and a half times as many people transferring from expresses and locals than there need be.

Traction officials, when their express trains get overloaded, are fond of protesting that the fetich of express riding is a mistake. Locals are quite fast enough, they contend, for the average man in his goings to and fro about the city, and he would be much wiser if he started in a local train to stay in it until he reached his destination. But experience has shown that the average New Yorker will always get into an express at the first opportunity, even if in the end he has to change back again into the same local that he began his trip in. Consequently, the placing of an express stop at a less frequented point is a mere invitation to unnecessary transfers.

Columbus Circle an Example.

Some of the Commissioners have suggested that by placing the B. R. T. express stop at the north end of Times Square the development of that section will be so much accelerated that it will draw off traffic from Forty-second Street and so equalize it. However, it was pointed out yesterday, that even if it were the province of the Public Service Commission to reform real estate values, the Interborough experience does not show that it is in its power.

From the earliest days of the present Subway, Seventy-second Street has been an express stop, and yet all the traffic it could muster last year was 4,554,314 passengers. Columbus Circle has never been anything but a local station, yet last year it sold tickets to 6,615,407 passengers.

Like the lower end of Times Square, Columbus Circle is a theatrical and restaurant centre, and an important crosstown thoroughfare as well, and the people persist in going there, even though the facilities are poor.

From this it is argued that the power of the arrangement of subway stations to divert traffic has been greatly exaggerated, and the only effect of persistence on the part of the commission in their tentative plans will be the infliction on the part of Times Square's 13,000,000 which the B. R. T. line will capture of an unnecessary transfer.

FIRE IN A LOFT BUILDING.

Three Alarms Sent In for a Blaze in Third Street.

Fire destroyed the three top floors of the eight-story building at 55 and 57 West Third Street at 1 o'clock this morning. This building is known now as the Livingston Building, but was called formerly the Island Building. While it was being built in 1898 a vacein killed several men who were at work upon it.

Patrolman Bolen of the Mercer Street Station turned in an alarm when he saw smoke coming through the windows on the sixth floor this morning. The blaze spread very rapidly, and when Chief Kenlon arrived he turned in a second and third alarm. After fighting the blaze for an hour from the roofs of the buildings across the street, the firemen succeeded in getting it under control. The damage was estimated at $75,000.

The building is on the northeast corner of West Broadway and Third Street. Adjoining it is a five-story apartment house, 68 Washington Square South. The tenants in this apartment house were aroused when the firemen dragged several lines of hose up the stairs to fight the fire from the roof. Two water towers were also pressed into service before the fire was under control.

NO MINE STRIKE TRUCE.

Conference Fails to Reach Agreement, but Gov. Ammons Is Hopeful.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 27.—Whether the conference which adjourned at 1:30 this morning without reaching even a temporary truce would try to make any further effort to terminate the Colorado coal strike, was not decided definitely when Gov. Ammons reached his office to-day. The Governor was reticent, but it was believed he would either outline a plan for a further conference or offer recommendations to the committees based on the facts brought out at yesterday's hearing.

While the conference brought no tangible result, it was felt that the fact that representatives of the operators and miners discussed their differences fully and frankly was encouraging. The operators said they would grant demands of their employes for check weighmen, eight hours for miners at any store, board at any place, call in any physician, and a rigid enforcement of the State mining laws.

The crux of the situation still is recognition of the United Mine Workers of America, which the operators said they would not grant.

Thaddeus Thomson Here.

Thaddeus Thomson, United States Minister to Colombia, arrived yesterday on the United Fruit steamer Metapan with his wife, who had to come here to undergo a serious operation at the Johns Hopkins Hospital. He declined to discuss affairs in Colombia and said that he had only been there three months and would hurry back as soon as his wife had been through the operation. Dr. Jose Montoya of Bogota and a trained nurse accompanied Mrs. Thomson and her husband to New York.

Progressives Cling to Prouty.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 27.—The statement made yesterday of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Charles A. Prouty that if he should enter the contest for the United States Senatorship from Vermont it would be as a Republican was followed to-day by a statement from Charles H. Thompson, Progressive State Chairman, that the party was satisfied with all its conferences with the Commissioner.

IN NEW JERSEY.

NEWARK.—Through the process of reorganization of the system of medical inspection in the public schools, the Newark Board of Education has dropped thirty physicians who had been acting as Medical Inspectors. This will leave eight of the original medical staff employed to inspect the school children. The physicians dropped are to be replaced with a larger staff of nurses. The change goes into effect on Jan. 1.

NEWARK.—Samuel Kaskoff of 2 North Ninth Street, Newark, ended his life yesterday by shooting himself in the head. The body was found by Abraham Kaskoff, a brother. A note found on a table read: "I leave all to my wife, Stella. Love to all. Good-bye." None of the suicide's relatives could assign any reason for the act.

HACKENSACK.—Deputy Game Warden Herman Meyers of Hackensack, who is also the local truant officer, yesterday narrowly escaped meeting the fate of Game Warden Reinbold of Hackensack, who was shot to death in attempting to arrest an Italian hunter in the woods at Tappan a few weeks ago. Meyers found a foreigner who was hunting in the woods near Collieneck, two miles from Hackensack. The hunter had two or three birds with him, and Meyers upon seeing him drew a revolver and demanded that the man show his license. The hunter paid no heed to the demand, but deliberately aimed at the deputy and fired, though only twenty feet away. The bullet passed through Meyers's thumb. Meyers fired three shots at the fleeing hunter but he does not know whether he wounded him or not.

MONTCLAIR.—The Altruist Society of Montclair yesterday sent out 100 dinners to the poor of the town. Fifty Boy Scouts aided in the distribution of the dinners, which were sent in baskets to the homes of the recipients. The service of the Boy Scouts was without cost to the Altruist Society.

MONTCLAIR.—Announcement was made yesterday that the Presbytery of Newark, having approved the union of Trinity Presbyterian and the "Old First" Presbyterian Churches of Montclair into the Central Presbyterian Church, the first service of the united church would be held on Wednesday in Trinity Church. At this service, the Rev. Dr. William Y. Chapman of the Roseville Avenue Church, Newark, will preach the sermon.

EAST ORANGE.—Entering the room of Herman Frank Kessler at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, Frank T. Goetz of 52 North Nineteenth Street, East Orange, found Kessler dead in bed. Death was caused by asphyxiation. Goetz, for whom Kessler worked as a baker, upon entering the house at 44 North Nineteenth Street, where his employe boarded, detected a strong odor of gas in the hall. He traced it to Kessler's room, on the second floor. Receiving no answer to knocks, he forced the door and found the gas jet wide open. Deputy County Physician M. Herbert Simmons thought death was accidental.

NEWTON.—What he believed to be a record yield of corn in this State was harvested this week by F. A. Howe, a prosperous farmer, of Frankford Township, near here. He has an eight-acre lot, which he planted with corn of the eight-row yellow variety. When he counted up the harvest yesterday he found that he had corn enough on the car to fill 1,230 bushels.

GOT ANT EATER ALIVE AFTER FIGHT IN TREE

J. J. Schmidt Hunted It Down in a South American Forest for the New York Zoo.

SNAKES AND MONKEYS, TOO

Custom Inspectors Not Anxious to Examine His Baggage, but His Wife Fondles the Boas.

J. J. Schmidt, the wild animal collector, who says he prefers a tame boa constrictor to a watchdog in his home, returned from the forests of Colombia on the United Fruit steamship Metapan yesterday, bringing with him an ant eater for the Zoological Park in the Bronx. He said there was not a live specimen of the South American ant eater in any zoological garden in the United States. New York once had one, Mr. Schmidt explained, but it pined away and died because it did not get the kind of red ants to eat that it had been accustomed to in its native lair.

Mr. Schmidt's ant eater is somewhat like a sheepdog, reddish brown in color, the hair shading to gray toward its bushy tail, and a long narrow head. It got lose one night when the ship was between Colon and Kingston, and started to eat up the coat of a New York newspaper man who was traveling for his health.

"He alarmed the first officer, who ran to me and reported that my ant eater had its mouth so wide open that any one could see its spinal column, and was eating up the crow," said Mr. Schmidt. "I knew my pet could only open its mouth at the most about three-quarters of an inch, so I did not feel alarmed about its running amuck around the deck.

"The ant eaters in the Colombian forests," Mr. Schmidt went on to say, "are very difficult to catch, as they climb the tall cottonwood trees and hide out of sight. I went into the interior from Barranquilla with a big lot of provisions, a rifle, and an Indian guide, and managed to catch this fellow after a lively chase. I spotted him in an open glade, making toward a grove of mango trees, near the Magdalena River, one night just as the moon was setting. Directly the ant eater scented me it went up the nearest tree like a streak. Throwing my sack and rifle to the guide I went after it.

"Near the top of the tree I made a grab for the ant eater, and it scratched my arm and hand, and crushed my fingers between its hard jaws, but I held on and got it to the ground, and then carried it back to camp in my arms."

In addition to the ant eater, Mr. Schmidt brought back 250 macaws and parrots, 25 monkeys of various kinds, including the spider monkey, which is all black fur and bones, with gleaming yellow eyes, and two boa constrictors, one 10 and the other 15 feet long.

Mrs. Schmidt, who met her husband at the pier, took the serpents out of their box and twisted them around her neck as if they had been feather boas. The Customs officials declined an invitation to examine the boa constrictors, and said that they preferred to take the animal man's declaration as read.

SAVED A CRIPPLE, MAY DIE.

Dr. Bryne Caught Him from Under Car—Now in Hospital.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 27.—Dr. Patrick J. Byrne, Coroner of Cuyahoga Conty, may die as a result of saving a crippled man from being killed by a street car to-day. The doctor is in a hospital in a serious condition. He will be operated on.

The Coroner had been to the morgue to view the body of an unidentified man, who had been killed, and was on his way home for Thanksgiving dinner. In Woodland Avenue he saw the cripple crossing the street. When on the car track the cripple's crutches slipped and the man fell in front of an approaching car.

Dr. Byrne rushed forward, seized the man and carried him in his arms to the sidewalk. In doing so he overtaxed his strength.

MAIDA DUPRE'S SECRET.

Actress Ended Life Because She Was Ill and Out of Funds.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—A note written by Elizabeth Poritz of New York, an actress known as Maira Dupre, who committed suicide by swallowing poison in a hotel here last Monday night, was made public here to-day. The note, which was addressed to the girl's sister, was as follows:

Dear Rose—I have been very ill, have been in hard luck and have sold my diamonds. If you do not hear from me again before Nov. 15, go to the home of Mrs. Fox, at 400 West Fifty-seventh Street, and get my trunk. Don't give her any information. Don't tell mother. Kiss babies for me. Don't call at 400 West Fifty-seventh Street until the 16th or after. Lovingly, LIZZIE.

The body of the actress was taken to Brooklyn this afternoon.

10 ACRES OF BURIED FIRE.

Curious Underground Blaze Worries Savannah Fire Department.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 27.—The Fire Department has been called upon to fight a curious underground fire that has been burning over an extent of ten acres of land south of the city for several weeks. The fire is slowly consuming some substance a few feet under the surface.

The firemen fear to open up the earth and thus give the smothered blaze a chance to get a firmer hold, and, as the underground conflagration is about a mile from the nearest fire plug, there is no way to get water to it. The scene is an old city garbage dump.

Will Care for Darrow and Six.

PATCHOGUE, L. I., Nov. 27.—Ernest W. Darrow, who advertised for a wife, and Miss Julia Stagg were married this afternoon. The wedding took place at the home of Darrow, on Bedford Avenue, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. H. Johnston, pastor of the Congregational Church.

Darrow has six children. Mrs. Darrow is a little more than 21 years of age. In his advertisement Darrow said he wanted a wife to care for his children, manage his house, and share an income of $50 a week.

DANCES TANGO AT 87.

On 60th Wedding Day Winker Challenges Wife to Modern Dance.

With the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding falling upon Thanksgiving Day, Simon Winker and his wife celebrated by gathering the whole family at Fleischman's Casino in Westchester Avenue, the Bronx, last evening, and the amount of turkey consumed was amazing, for the sons and daughters of the Winkers number seven, and the grandchildren and great-grandchildren number sixty-nine.

When Mr. Winker, for all his 87 years, and the littiest greatgrandchild, for all his 2 years, had feasted to their hearts' content, the orchestra began to tune up, the chairs were pushed back and the room was cleared for dancing. The fiddler opened the programme by breaking into a lively, contagious bit written as an invitation to the new dances.

Then came the great moment of the evening, for, chuckling mischievously, Mr. Winker went to his wife's chair, and dared her to take a turn with him about the floor. She protested scornfully at first, but, not to be outdone, she stood and waited with him to catch the measure of the music.

When great-grandfather and great-grandmother made the circle of the room dancing what was unmistakably the tango, the cheers of the second and third and fourth generations were so tumultuous that others in the Casino crowded to the doors to see what the fun was all about.

They came in time to see Leon Winker, the oldest son, give to the flushed dancers a huge punch bowl made out of cut glass and set with diamonds, the gift of the whole seventy-six, for even the two-year-old contributed something to the sum that purchased it.

The Winkers were married in Germany. For many years Mr. Winker was a cigar manufacturer in this city. They live now at 642 East 161st Street. Mrs. Winker is nine years younger than her husband.

AT BAR FOR KNABE MURDER.

Dr. W. B. Craig to be Tried as Slayer of Indianapolis Woman.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Nov. 27.—Dr. William B. Craig, Dean of the Indiana Veterinary College at Indianapolis, will be placed on trial before Judge Alonzo Blair here to-morrow, charged with the murder of Dr. Helene Knabe at Indianapolis on Oct. 23, 1911. Dr. Craig was indicted at Indianapolis on Dec. 31, 1912, on testimony submitted by a detective employed by women of the State. The case was brought here on a change of venue.

The murder of Dr. Knabe was one of the most puzzling in the criminal history of the State. She was found dead in her bed with a gash in her throat, and the police, after a long investigation, declared it was a case of suicide.

COL. GAILLARD DYING.

Doctors Say There Is No Chance of the Panama Engineer's Recovery.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—Physicians of the Phipps Clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital say there is no hope of the recovery of Lieut.-Col. David Du Bose Gaillard, the army engineer who dug Culebra Cut in the Panama Canal. He has been sinking steadily for the last few days.

Col. Gaillard's condition, it is said, now is such that death might be a matter of either a few hours or a few days, as is the usual result in brain diseases.

His son, Lieut. David P. Gaillard, U. S. A., said to-day that his father's trouble came on him suddenly in July.

Youth Shot Dead for a Deer.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—While hunting near this city to-day, Byron Hutchinson, 18 years old, was accidentally shot and killed by Alvin Gisriel, 19 years old. On Thanksgiving Day three years ago the body of an elder brother of Hutchinson, who was killed by a train, was brought to the Hutchinson home.

The Home of Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes.

Tempus Fugit

BEST translated—"Time flies"—as indeed it does for busy men.

And because time is truly money for such people, time saved is money saved. Which seems like an unbearable load of axioms for one advertisement, but here is our reason.

Having clothes made to measure takes time—lots of it. Buying clothes ready to wear takes most no time at all, which is a big argument in favor of "ready" clothes.

But most of us are vain—and some, especially those who have never worn a Wallach-Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suit or Overcoat, are afraid they won't like garments ready to wear. To them we say, "Come and try on one of our suits or overcoats, see how well it fits, how well you look in it—and if you buy and for any reason are not satisfied—come back and we will refund you your money." Could anything be fairer? Could we do more?

You cannot lose by trying us and think what you can gain in time and money saved; for a Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suit or Overcoat at $25 is the equal of a custom-made garment at $40 to $50.

By the way, should you wish to open a charge account—give us the usual references and we will gladly arrange one for you.

STOVER RESIGNATION RECEIVED BY KLINE

Missing Man Wrote on Monday from Cincinnati, but Has Disappeared Again.

MESSAGE TO LA ROCHE, TOO

Stover Complains of the Commotion Over His Absence and Says He Can Take Care of Himself.

Charles B. Stover, whose whereabouts have been unknown to his friends since Oct. 16, mailed his resignation as Park Commissioner to Mayor Kline from Cincinnati last Monday night, and at the same time sent a letter to Louis F. La Roche, who has been Acting Park Commissioner, and was appointed to the office yesterday by the Mayor. Where Mr. Stover is now no one seems to know.

The letter to Mr. La Roche and the resignation were in Mr. Stover's handwriting on plain sheets of paper and inclosed in unmarked stamped envelopes. The envelopes were stamped "Cincinnati, Ohio, 1 A. M., Nov. 25," but nothing gave any clew to Mr. Stover's present address.

In his letter to Mr. La Roche, Mr. Stover seems vexed because of the publicity and commotion occasioned by his absence. Here is the letter:

Cincinnati, Nov. 24, 1913.

My Dear Friend La Roche: I have reached Cincinnati in my travels, and write you this Monday night, Nov. 24, to let you know that when this letter reaches you my resignation will be in the hands of Mayor Kline. I hope that he will appoint you my successor, and I would therefore advise you to see him immediately.

Now let there be no further concern about me. In my day I have traveled not a little, and am fully competent to make my way anywhere around this world in safety. I repeat, therefore, let there be no worry over my travels. Hoping you will succeed me, I remain, with best wishes to you and to all, CHARLES B. STOVER.

Mr. La Roche said late yesterday afternoon that he had received this letter on Wednesday, the day before Thanksgiving, and had gone with it to Mayor Kline's office the same day. Mr. Stover's resignation was in the Mayor's hands, but he withheld the news of it and requested Mr La Roche not to make the letter public until yesterday afternoon. It was supposed that this was to enable the Mayor to get in touch with Mr Stover again, but no explanation was given.

The appointment of Mr La Roche was made by the Mayor yesterday, and this statement accompanied it:

The Mayor to-day announced the appointment of Louis F. La Roche as Commissioner of Parks for the boroughs of Manhattan and Richmond to succeed Charles B. Stover, whose resignation has been tendered and accepted by the Mayor.

Mr. La Roche for several years was connected with the Finance Department, handling while there all bugetary matters relating to public parks, and is thoroughly conversant with all details of administration relating thereto. Two years ago he was transferred to the Department of Parks, since which time he has been performing services which were really those of a Deputy Commissioner, and the 16th of November last he was designated by the Mayor as Acting Commissioner for a period of thirty days to clear up official matters then pending which had accumulated during the absence of Commissioner Stover. The present appointment is for the remainder of the term.

Both the Mayor and Mr. La Roche were questioned concerning news of Mr. Stover Wednesday afternoon, but neither gave out any information. The preparations to exhibit moving pictures of Mr Stover in many cities of the United States were then under way, and the pictures were shown on Thanksgiving Day by the Pathe Frères Company, for whom films had been made previously for ordinary commercial purposes. Mr. Stover was shown in his activities as Park Commissioner. Also on Wednesday the Mayor was heard to ask Police Commissioner Waldo if he had been able to learn anything of Mr. Stover's whereabouts and to urge him to push the search for the missing Park Commissioner. The inference drawn by some from these acts of the Mayor is that he wanted especially to get into communication with Mr. Stover before his resignation was acted upon.

Those of Mr. Stover's friends who could be seen yesterday were not disturbed by his resignation and retained their confidence in him and his ability to take care of himself. Mr. La Roche said that, in spite of his own promotion, he was sorry that Mr. Stover had gone away, and he hoped that he would return soon.

"Stover's letter," he said, "shows him to be a white man. They don't make them any better than he, I can tell you. I hope he comes back, for I don't want to lose him."

James L. Lavery, an advertising agent, with an office at 99 Reade Street and home at 119 West Seventy-first Street, is one of Mr. Stover's intimate friends who interested himself in the search for the missing Park Commissioner, and was largely responsible for the moving picture scheme. When seen yesterday afternoon he said:

"I believe Stover knows exactly what he is doing. I believe and all of his friends believe that whatever motives prompted him in going away they were worthy ones, and when the full truth is known there will be no questions left as to the sincerity and honesty of his course.

"It is incomprehensible to me, though, how he could go away this time in the same way as before and expect apparently that no more notice would be taken of his disappearance than on previous occasions. Also, what puzzles me is the fact that, when going away for so long a time, Mr. Stover did not notify his associates in the Park Department, the success of whose work depended upon his supervision. Until this puzzle came to my mind I did not take an active interest in the case because I felt that Stover was acting as he might be expected to act. I began a search for him on my own account when I suspected that something unusual was the matter."

Robbins Gilman, manager of the University Settlement, 184 Eldridge Street, where Mr. Stover has lived for many years, went to his home in Yonkers yesterday and could not be reached. It was said at the settlement house, however, that neither he nor any one else there had received a word from Mr Stover. The first his friends knew of his resignation was from the newspaper reporters seeking further information about Mr. Stover.

LIEUTENANT OUTRANKS ALL.

Acting Gov. Taylor May Order Generals on Retired List.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Nov. 28.—Although he has the rank only of a Second Lieutenant in the Third Regiment of the State National Guard, Leon R. Taylor, as Acting Governor, it is likely, will have to order the retirement of Major Gen. Dennis F. Collins and Brig. Gen. John A. Mather.

Gov. Taylor said to-day that the State would comply with the provisions of the Dick law, in order not to lose the large Federal appropriation, but he would first do everything in his power to save the two officers mentioned from retirement.

It is asserted that it will be impossible for Gov. Taylor to retain Gens. Collins and Taylor in active service, and it is possible that they voluntarily will retire.

WE BARRED OIL DEAL?

Caused the Pearsons to Give Up Colombia Concession, It Is Said.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 29.—The Morning Post gives prominence to a dispatch from its Washington correspondent, who declares that the American press fails to realize the significance of the Pearson's surrender of the Colombian oil concessions, "although," says the correspondent, "it is, perhaps, the most important incident in Anglo-American politics since Olney wrote to Salisbury in 1895."

"To-day," he adds, "the United States is practically sovereign of this Continent, and its fiat is law upon the subjects to which it confines its interposition.

"The Pearsons," continues the correspondent, "retired because the British Government was made to realize the serious consequences that might follow should Colombia ratify the Pearson concessions—a development which would have aroused not only the general opposition of the Washington Government, but would also have made the United States raise the Monroe Doctrine if the Pearsons had attempted to acquire Colombian port privileges in connection with this concession.

"Quite as curious," concludes The Post's dispatch, "as the failure of the American press to recognize the importance of what has happened is the fact that this has been done without there having been any negotiations in the proper use of the word, and without the exchange of a single note. The State Department sent no communication either to its embassy in London or to the British Embassy at Washington.

"The British Government was simply made to fe the sentiment existing in certain quarters, and acted upon its impression rather than have matters assume another form."

COLOMBIA PROTEST TO CUBA.

Asks Island Not to Approve "Plunder of Panama" by Roosevelt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 28.—The Cuban Senate has received a cablegram from the Colombian Congress protesting against any public approval of the "plunder of the Colombian Department of Panama executed in 1903 by President Roosevelt, according to his own confession."

The Cuban Senate cabled an acknowledgment of the message and expressed the desire that all difficulties between American republics would be adjusted "pacifically, within justice, law, and international practices."

ROBIN TO BE FREED TO-DAY.

Banker's Prison Term Ended—To Run Down Savings Bank Looters.

With two months' commutation of sentence, the reward of good behavior, Joseph G. Robin, the banker, who was sentenced to a year in the penitentiary on a charge of grand larceny growing out of the wrecking of the Northern Bank, will be released to-day from Blackwell's Island. Robin was sentenced on Jan. 10 by Justice Seabury in the Criminal Term of the Supreme Court and began the service of his sentence on Jan. 20.

Robert D. Ireland, Robin's counsel, said yesterday that Robin would leave town for a short time and upon his return would get into harness again.

"I expect then," Mr. Ireland said, "the people who brought about his ruin will find their hands full.

"The plot of which Mr. Robin has been a victim is so far reaching as to almost challenge belief. I believe Mr. Robin is going to win out in the long run. The first thing he will do is to devote his attention to running down the men who looted the Washington Savings Bank and making them disgorge. Last week he was successful before Justice Cohalan in having himself made a party to a suit now on the calendar for the recovery of $240,000 of the savings bank money. The suit will be tried within the next two months."

NOTE TOLD OF ELOPEMENT.

Becker Informs Wife That He and Stepdaughter Have Gone Away.

Mrs. Katherine Becker of Winfield, Queens, reported to the police yesterday the disappearance of Martin Becker, her husband, and Lillian Herbst, her twenty-two-year-old daughter by a former marriage. With them went Evelyn Becker, her five-year-old daughter. Mrs. Becker found a note written by the husband, pinned upon the dining room table, in which he said: "Lillie, Evelyn, and I have gone away."

Becker was employed in the Dock Department. He is 42 years old. Mrs. Becker says that when he went away he drew $1,029 from a savings bank, the joint deposit of himself and wife. Mrs. Becker's first husband, Henry Herbst, kept a stationery store at Second Avenue and Eighty-first Street.

He died some years ago, leaving his property to his wife. Six years ago Mrs. Herbst married Becker. Early in September Mrs. Becker was taken to a hospital. Her recovery was doubtful, and she made a will dividing her property between her husband and her three children. Mrs. Becker recovered, and returned home to find, she says, that a fondness had grown up between Lillian and her husband.

Becker, according to his wife, left home for work as usual on Nov. 5. On the same day, she says, her daughter Lillie said she was going to New York to do some shopping and would take the child, Evelyn, with her.

Mrs. Becker says that she went out on a business errand and upon her return she found her husband's clothes gone, her two daughters missing, and the note upon the table. She did not report the affair to the police until yesterday, as she hoped by quiet search she could recover her little girl.

ZELAYA MAY GO FREE ON WILSON'S ORDER

Acting with State Department, President Could Forestall Court Proceedings.

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT OUT

Friends of Nicaragua's Ex-President Fear He Will Be Killed If Returned.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—A conference held in a hotel here to-night between Joseph W. Folk, Solicitor for the State Department; Luis F. Corea of New York, ex-Minister of Nicaragua to the United States, and Corry M. Stadden and Charles A. Douglas, Washington lawyers, did not result in any agreement relative to the case of ex-President Zelaya. Mr. Corea and Mr. Stadden represented Zelaya, and Mr. Douglas appeared for the Nicaraguan Legation.

The object of the conference was to give Zelaya's lawyers an opportunity to show why the extradition proceedings against the ex-President should be dropped. They did not succeed in convincing Solicitor Folk, at least so far as he indicated, that the crimes with which Zelaya was charged were political, and that his extradition would be contrary to the extradition treaty between Nicaragua and the United States.

The belief is growing here, though, that Zelaya will not be sent back to Nicaragua for trial. The animus of this Government against him is that he executed Groce and Cannon, American citizens, and it is felt that if he is returned to his country and put to death there it would be said that this Government consented to the extradition because it wanted Zelaya punished for killing American citizens, and not because it was satisfied that the crimes specified in the extradition proceedings were non-political.

It was said to-night that there was a chance that Zelaya would be freed at the instance of the State Department before the habeas corpus proceedings instituted in New York to-day were disposed of by the Federal Court. This matter rests with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan. They may abandon the case and release Zelaya at any time.

A FIGHT FOR HIS LIFE.

Friends of Deposed President Say He Will Be Killed if He Is Returned.

Friends and supporters of José Santos Zelaya, the deposed President of Nicaragua, who was arrested here on Wednesday at midnight upon telegraphic orders from Attorney General McReynolds, began a fight for his release yesterday. They said that Gen. Zelaya was almost sure to be murdered if he was turned over to his enemies, who were in control in Nicaragua.

The first move in the fight to liberate Gen. Zelaya was an application for a writ of habeas corpus. Arguments will be heard upon this application before United States District Judge Holt at 10:30 o'clock on Monday morning. The time set by Judge Holt for the hearing on the writ is four hours earlier than the time set by United States Commissioner Shields for a hearing in the extradition proceedings. This means, according to Assistant United States District Attorney Woods, that the hearing before Commissioner Shields will probably not occur, as Judge Holt will go at once into the merits of the question of Zelaya's detention pending the arrival of papers demanding his extradition.

If Judge Holt decides that Gen. Zelaya has been held illegally he will be free to depart for Spain or some other foreign country, as the extradition papers are not expected to arrive here for ten days. The longest period that Gen. Zelaya can be "provisionally detained" under the treaty clause which made it possible to arrest him is sixty days.

In applying for a writ of habeas corpus Gen. Zelaya, who is confined in the Tombs, sets forth that the affidavit of United States District Attorney Woods, on which he was arrested, fails to make out a case against him as it merely incorporates data sent by telegraph from Attorney General McReynolds to Mr. Wood, and is based on information and belief.

The petition for the writ alleges that Gen. Zelaya was President of Nicaragua from Jan. 1, 1894, to Dec. 20, 1909, and that on the latter date he resigned and left the country and has not since returned to it. It asserts that at no time did he commit the crime of murder or any other crime.

C. Alfonso Zelaya, a son of Gen. Zelaya, explained yesterday why he and his brother, Col. Zelaya, considered it vital to their father's welfare that he should be liberated in this country.

"We shall carry every point made in the extradition demand to the highest possible courts," he said, "because my father's life is the real issue. If Congress would only investigate they would find out why my father is wanted by representatives of exactly the same forces who used wholesale bribery to accomplish his overthrow in 1909.

"I believe my father will not be extradited for the reason that some time during the proceedings, President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan will give personal attention to the matter and will overrule the polices of men in the State Department, just as the decision not to let Mrs. Pankhurst come into this country was overruled. They cannot escape the fact that any offenses alleged against my father are political and that the treaty specifically exempts political offenses from the list of extraditable crimes."

Chicago Concern Takes Out License to Do Business in Ontario.

TORONTO, Ontario, Nov. 28.—What is apparently the first step of American grain operators of large dealings to establish themselves in Canada is contained in an announcement in The Ontario Gazette to-day that the Armour Grain Company of New Jersey had taken out a license to do business in Ontario.

Inquiries elecited the information that this was the Chicago concern said to be the largest grain operators on the American Continent. N. K. Cowan, K. C., is named as local attorney, and permission is given to use $100,000 capital.

MAYOR SHANK QUITS; WALLACE AT HELM

Indianapolis Labor Leaders Refuse to Promise Cessation of Strike Troubles.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 28.—Mayor Samuel L. Shank this afternoon, when informed by a committee of labor leaders that further labor trouble was imminent during the remainder of the present administration, sent his resignation to Edward A. Ramsay, City Clerk, and automatically Harry R. Wallace, City Controller, became Mayor.

The Mayor's action in resigning followed a conference held in his office with Edwin H. Meyers, International Treasurer, and Thomas J. Farrell, General Organizer of the Teamsters' Union, and other labor leaders. Mayor Shank previously had announced that unless assured that no further strikes would be called during his administration he would resign.

Business interests have been displeased with Mr. Shank's attitude during the strike of street railway employes, when he announced that he was opposed to policemen riding on street cars. They have felt that he was in some degree responsible for the acquittal of thirty-one policemen who were charged with refusing to ride on cars during the strike, and they threatened to impeach him if any further trouble occurred.

The Mayor's decision to resign was preceded by an exhaustive effort on his part to arrange for arbitration of the differences between the teamsters and the employers. After the conference Mr. Shank said:

"I was unable to persuade Mr. Farrell, Mr. Lowry, and other labor leaders to agree to not call a strike during the remainder of my administration. I did everything on my part to be fair to both sides during the street car strike, but after the criticism that has been heaped on me by the Safety Committee of the Chamber of Commerce I feel that I probably could not retain my position and do my duty toward the general public as Mayor on account of the bitter feeling that has grown out of the labor controversy."

Harry R. Wallace, the new Mayor, announced to-night that the police situation was so critical that he had decided to take personal charge of the department for a time.

"I shall do my duty impartially and fearlessly," said he. "Life and property must be protected at whatever cost and the fair name of our city restored. Every man has a right to conduct his own business in his own way so long as he does it lawfully, and I will not tolerate any interference with it by others."

As soon as Mr. Wallace had taken the oath of office he named a new Board of Public Safety. The members are Hugh M. Love, Schuyler Haas, and Edwin H. Emrich all well-known business men. Fred B. Akin was named City Controller. The Mayor then went at once to Police Headquarters.

Thomas J. Farrell, General organizer, in charge of the teamsters' and chauffeurs' unions in this city said to-night that a meeting of the two organizations had been called for Sunday afternoon when they would vote upon the question of calling a strike. It is generally believed that the strike will be called.

Samuel Lewis Shank was for thirty years an auctioneer in Indianapolis before he was elected Mayor of Indianapolis in 1909. He started out in life, however, at the age of 18 years, as a clog dancer and actor, and was soon after on the road as manager of Church's Comedy Company in Repertoire. After that he became a yeast salesman, and a little later went into business as an auctioneer.

He was elected Recorder of Indianapolis for one term, and at the next election made a spectacular campaign for Mayor. He was a popular speaker because of the great stock of jokes he had treasured up during his career as an auctioneer. One of his electioneering manoeuvres was to send a carload of watermelons into the western section of Indianapolis, which is inhabited by a large colored population.

After his election Mayor Shank began to enforce the anti-saloon regulations. The first act that gave him countrywide fame as a jester was his order suspending the license of one saloon until the proprietor should produce a certificate proving that he had attended church services on Sunday.

In the Fall of 1911 potatoes were selling in Indianapolis at $1.60 a bushel. Mayor Shank charged that the price was kept up by a combination of commission merchants. He brought carloads of potatoes into the city, which he sold off personally at 75 cents a bushel, allowing no purchaser more than two bushels and a half. He soon broke the price of potatoes at the retail stores to $1 a bushel. A few weeks later he sold off carloads of apples, pears, and other fruits at a price considerably below that of the market. During the Christmas season he imported quantities of turkeys, ducks, geese, and other fowls, which he sold for 6 and 8 cents a pound less than the market price. After these experiments had proved successful, Mayor Shank was able to keep food prices under control by threatening to repeat these sales.

Another of his enterprises was a municipal marriage bureau. He married three couples, but then closed down the bureau because he found the correspondence from all over the country too great for a municipal matrimonial agency. Whatever fee was given to him he always turned over to the bride as a present.

Mr. Shank is 6 feet 3 inches in height, weighs over 200 pounds, and is an athlete. While Mayor of Indianapolis he represented Marion township in a team which won a tug-of-war over Rushville.

Henry R. Wallace, the new Mayor, has been prominent in Republican politics for some time. He served one term as County Auditor, and is on his second term as County Chairman.

KILLED SAVING HIS TOY.

Little Boy Ran Before Auto to Recover His Plaything.

Harry J. Parkes, Jr., of Corona, L. I., was driving his auto in the Dry Harbor Road in Elmhurst yesterday morning when he saw a boy and girl walking down the road before him. They went to the side of the road when Parkes sounded his horn, but the little boy ran back into the middle of the street to pick up a toy he had dropped. The automobile struck and killed him.

The little girl, who was at the side of the road, began to scream, and this brought her mother, Mrs. Andrew Abt of 6 Remsen Avenue, to the street. Mrs. Abt fainted when she saw that the little boy, who was her son, Andrew Abt, 9 years old, was dead. Parkes surrendered to the police at Elmhurst, but he was released later by Coroner Gustave J. Schaefer, who investigated the accident.

FLASHLIGHTS ANNOY WILSON ON ARRIVAL

President Wilson, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, and her husband, Miss Eleanor Wilson, Miss Margery Brown, who was one of the bridesmaids at the Wilson-Sayre wedding last Tuesday; Dr. Cary Grayson, Secretary Tumulty, and several Secret Service agents, arrived at the Pennsylvania Station from Washington at 6:18 o'clock last evening.

As the President passed through the station there was a volley of flashlights. Secret Service men tried to stop the photographers, and after the flashlights had been exploded there was a little excitement. Several of the photographers were rushed out of the station by Secret Service men and detectives. The President seemed annoyed.

Several hundred persons were at the station to see the President, and cheered as he came up from the track landings to the main waiting room. Outside was waiting the automobile of Col. E. M. House, in which the President was driven to Col. House's home at 145 East Thirty-fifth Street, and other machines in which the other members of the party were taken to the Waldorf-Astoria.

The President looked to be very happy, and the expression on his face seemed to indicate that he had left affairs of state in Washington and had come to New York to have a good time. His purpose was to attend the theatre last night and to see the football game between West Point and Annapolis at the Polo Grounds this afternoon. For the first half of the game the President will be the Army's guest, and during the second half the guest of the Navy.

Everybody was on the lookout for Mrs. Sayre, the new bride of the White House, but she and her husband realized that that was exactly what was going to happen, and escaped from the station by a route other than that taken by the President. Thus they managed to give the slip to a score of photographers who had gathered to snap them.

At 8:15 o'clock the President and his party arrived at the Forty-third Street entrance of the Cohan Theatre. They were escorted to the lower right hand box, which was decorated with flags and red, white, and blue bunting, and a big eagle surmounted it.

Most of those in the audience knew the President was going to attend the performance, and they were watching the box expectantly. As he entered there was a burst of applause, and some one proposed three cheers. The audience cheered, and the President stood up and smiled. The orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the President and the audience remained standing while the national anthem was played. As the music ceased the President and his party seated themselves and the audience followed suit.

When the performance started the President sat back in his chair, and he seemed to enjoy himself thoroughly. He laughed heartily at the jokes, and he chatted freely with Col. House and Dudley Field Malone.

One of the actors said that he was going to reduce the price of merchandise he was selling "because the Democrats reduced the tariff." The audience turned to the President at this sally, and Mr. Wilson laughed heartily.

GARRISON VIEWS PIERS.

Secretary Makes Personal Inspection of Hudson Shore Lines.

Lindley M. Garrison, Secretary of War, spent yesterday afternoon making an inspection of the Hudson River shore front between Thirtieth and 135th Streets. With him aboard the police boat Patrol were Mayor Ardolph L. Kline, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, the New Jersey Harbor Commissioners, J. Spencer Smith, R. C. Jenkinson, and W. L. Saunders, and various other officials. The shore fronts on both sides of the river were inspected.

Throughout the trip Secretary Garrison listened to eager argument over various propositions to alter the pierhead line on both sides of the river. The New Jersey advocates urged him to permit an extension of their pierhead line 300 feet into the river from Bull's Ferry to Weehawken, and to veto the army engineer's plan for a 3,000-foot channel above Weehawken Cove. They pointed out that 3,000 feet was not required for the big ships below this cove and disputed its necessity above.

The only indication of opinion given by Secretary Garrison was when he asked why since the Riverside Drive front of New York was not to be used for commercial purposes the line could not be drawn in at least fifty feet on the New York side to allow a corresponding extension on the New Jersey side, where commercial development was possible.

The Secretary inspected the work now under way at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street for 1,000-foot piers. The Secretary operated the twenty-ton dredge himself.

SMOKE PALL IN TIMES SQ.

Fire Over Shanley's Restaurant Delays Supper Parties.

Blazing soot in a chimney of the Putnam Building, at Broadway between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, filled Times Square with stifling smoke at 10:30 o'clock last night. The smoke settled down into the main dining room of Shanley's restaurant, on the ground floor of the building, and made the guests there uncomfortable.

Although the arrival of the fire apparatus could be heard plainly in the restaurant there was no excitement there, and the cabaret show was not interrupted.

The fire delayed theatregoers on their way to the restaurants in the neighborhood.

Highwaymen Spring Out of the Darkness in Pelham Parkway as Motor Is Passing.

Returning in his auto from Larchmont and bound for his home at 51 West Eighty-seventh Street, Cornelius Doremus and a young woman who was his companion had crossed the city line and proceeded down the lonesome stretches of Pelham Parkway at midnight last night when, some four hundred feet south of the Eastern Boulevard, two men who appeared suddenly from the underbrush skirting the road, jumped aboard his motor. The chauffeur was driving at a speed of about fifteen miles an hour because of the wet roads, but the two thieves gained a foothold on the running board.

The movements of the thieves were so quick that before any one in the auto had time to think one bandit had pointed a revolver at Joseph Leonard, the chauffeur, and the other had put his pistol close to the forehead of Mr. Doremus. As for his companion, there was no need of guarding her, for she had fainted.

Leonard stopped the auto with a jar.

"All the money you've got," was the order given by one of the thieves.

But the chauffeur was annoyed and he wanted to fight. Before the highwaymen had taken full possession of the situation, Leonard whirled around and in the face of the revolver pointed at him, struck the thief in front of him a blow across the face so that the bandit pitched back off the running board and disappeared in the darkness.

Encouraged by this, Mr. Doremus struck out at the thief who confronted him. It was a heavy blow, but an ill-directed one, and it did not knock the man from the auto. It served only to make him angry, and he was so emphatic in telling Mr. Doremus what would happen if he made any further defense that Mr. Doremus lost heart and surrendered.

Meanwhile, the chauffeur was overcome. For, though he had felled one man, a third highwayman appeared on the other side of the car and with the butt of a revolver beat Leonard across the face and stunned him.

With two men thus on guard, the third, who had been temporarily incapacitated by the chauffeur's blow, picked himself up and proceeded to search Mr. Doremus and his companion. From Mr. Doremus the thieves took a diamond ring, a gold watch valued at $100 and $500 in money. From his companion they took several rings, one of them set with diamonds, and from her throat they stripped the lavalliere she wore.

All this took but little time. When the plunder had been stowed away in the pockets of the collector the three men jumped back to the road.

"Any noise out of you," was the warning of the spokesman while they stood alongside the car, "and we shall have to come back."

Then the thieves disappeared.

Mr. Doremus gave his first attention to reviving his woman companion who had fainted. Then he looked up and down the parkway. It was a lonely stretch of road, and no policeman was in sight. No auto had passed during the hold-up and no autos were in sight after it was over. Mr. Doremus revived Leonard and told him to start the auto.

In a few minutes they were moving on their way, but they went a mile before they came to any building, and this was a road house. Over the telephone here Mr. Doremus sent an account of the attack to the Westchester Police Station, but precinct houses are few and far between in that part of the town, and the Bronx is a borough of great distance. By the time Lieut. Kauss and his men had arrived at the place of the hold-up the three men who had robed the autoists had traveled far and the police were unable to get a trace of them.

WANT DEATH INVESTIGATED.

Family Fears Young Woman Was Poisoned.

District Attorney R. S. Hudspeth of Jersey City was requested last night to investigate the death on Thursday of Miss Catherine Watts, at the home of her uncle, James R. Watts, 402 Woodlawn Avenue, Jersey City. Robert E. McLear, a lawyer, of 115 Broadway was retained by Mr. Watts to bring the matter to the attention of the authorities. The young woman became ill while at work in Manhattan.

"The relatives of Miss Watts desire that the District Attorney order an autopsy," said Mr. McLear last night. "She was taken ill on Friday a week ago. On Sunday she told her family that she thought she had been poisoned. This remark led the family to ask for an investigation. Her body is still in the family home, and the funeral has been postponed until the authorities have had an opportunity to make an inquiry."

Four physicians were called in consultation before Miss Watts, who was 28 years old, died. Two of the physicians—Drs. D. B. Street and Donald Mincr—diagnosed the cause of death as diphtheria. Drs. C. A. Birdsall and John M. Cassidy decided that death was due to septicaemia of the throat.

"There is absolutely no criminal action involved in the case," said Dr. John M. Cassidy last night. "The prescription which Miss Watts procured in Manhattan, which the family regard as having had some connection with her death, was a proper one and had nothing to do with the symptoms of poisoning."

STEFANSSON LOSES BOAT.

The Mary Sachs Crushed in Ice—Provisions and Instruments Lost.

NOME, Alaska, Nov. 28.—The power schooner Mary Sacks, one of the boats of Vilhjalmar Stefansson's Canadian Arctic exploration expedition, has been wrecked in the ice off the Arctic coast of Alaska. News of the loss of the Mary Sacks was received to-day in a letter from Peter Barnard, Captain of the vessel.

The ice crushed the vessel into small bits and all the provisions and scientific instruments were lost.

The letter gives no details of the mishap. As nothing is said of any injury to the men on the Mary Sachs it is believed all are safe, as they could easily make their way over the ice to shore.

No word was received concerning the Karluk and the Alaska.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 28.—The auxiliary boat Mary Sachs was purchased at Nome by Vilhjalmar Stefansson for use of the southern party of the Canadian expedition, which also has the power schooner Alaska. Dr. R. M. Anderson, commanding the southern party, is aboard the Alaska, and Kenneth Chipman, the Canadian geologist, was placed in command of the Mary Sachs.

The last reports received from the expedition were carried by messenger to Circle City, Alaska, arriving there Nov. 10. The messenger reported the Mary Sachs and the Alaska icebound at Collinson Point, Alaska, 100 miles west of the international boundary.

The Mary Sachs was a gasoline schooner of 350 tons gross register. She carried a crew of three men and was built at Benicia, Cal., in 1898.

The southern party was to have made a scientific exploration of Victoria Land and Banks Land, while Stefansson on the Karluk explored the unmapped region in Beauford Sea.

RISKS LIFE FOR HIS DOG.

Boy Thrown Twenty Feet in Saving His Pet from a Train.

CALDWELL, N. J., Nov. 28.—Edward O. Cummings, 15 years old, of 61 Heller Parkway, Newark, risked his life here to-day to save his dog from being run down by an Erie Railroad train. In rescuing the dog, Cummings was struck by the train and thrown twenty feet. The boy, accompanied by Frederick Kilpatrick, also of Newark, started on a hunting trip in an automobile. On Bloomfield Avenue, in this town, where the railroad track is parallel with the street, they were delayed by a punctured tire. A hunting dog, which was in the automobile, jumped out and ran to the track in front of an approaching passenger train.

Cummings called to the dog, to which he was much attached, but the animal seemed unmindful of the danger. Cummings then ran to the rescue of the dog. As he picked the animal up he was struck by the train, which threw him to one side. He was removed to the office of Train Master Butler and was later taken to his home in Newark. He will recover.

DEER CHASES CHILDREN.

New Jersey Farmer Asks Permission of State to Shoot It.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Nov. 28.—John Jackson, a farmer, of Mahwah, six miles from Hackensack, whose land adjoins the extensive Havemeyer estate on the edge of the Ramapo Mountains, has written to Deputy Game Warden Ernest Trainor of Hackensack asking what can be done to a wild buck deer that insists on chasing his children.

"This buck no doubt is one of the bunch that escaped from the Havemeyer preserves to the Ramapo Mountains some time ago," wrote Jackson. "It has got so far that I am afraid to let my boys go into the woods near by, for this deer has chased them several times. I don't want to shoot this deer for fear of getting in trouble with the authorities. I may have to shoot this nervy fellow, however, in self-defense yet. Can you give me some information?"

Deputy Trainor will write to the State Fish and Game Commission at Trenton, for the case is a new one for the Game Warden.

UNDER AUTO IN A GULCH.

J. M. McCurdy of New York and Wife Badly Hurt in Colorado.

Special to The New York Times.

CANON CITY, Col., Nov. 28.—Pinned beneath the steering wheel of his overturned touring car at the bottom of a mountain gulch, while his wife lay unconscious near by, J. M. McCurdy of New York lay for three hours to-night before a horseman heard his groans and summoned assistance to extricate him.

The couple's chances of recovery are doubtful. Between twenty-five and thirty automobiles, it is estimated, passed near the spot where the McCurdys were lying without their occupants discovering the accident.

Just as their touring car approached the bridge the lights went out for some cause not yet explained.

McCurdy tried to keep his car on the road, but before he could stop and examine the lights the machine had reached the arroyo. The driver missed the bridge and the automobile plunged down into the ravine, a distance of thirty feet. The heavy car turned over as it fell, throwing Mrs. McCurdy clear.

The directory does not give the name of J. M. McCurdy.

MAZATLAN FALLS BEFORE REBELS

Capture Gives Constitutionalists Control of Sinaloa and Isolates Federals.

WASHINGTON'S HOPES RISE

Rebel Successes Believed to Point to Huerta's Speedy Overthrow.

HIS TREASURY EMPTY, TOO

Mexico City Banks Asked for Funds to Pay National Railways Interest.

MORE BATTLESHIPS SENT

Connecticut, Ohio, and Kansas Recalled from Europe—Villa's Vanguard Starts South.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 28.—The town of Mazatlan, the most important port on the West Coast, was captured by the rebels yesterday according to authoritative information received here to-day. It is not believed that any of the foreigners resident there were injured, as several attacks recently have been made there, resulting in a general exodus on the part of the foreigners and many Mexicans.

Practically every boat leaving the place recently has carried a full list of passengers, including many foreigners. The capture of this point is considered extremely important, in view of the fact that it isolates the West Coast, and gives the rebels control of the entire State of Sinaloa.

Port Altata was bombarded recently by the Federal gunboat Tampico without result. The Tampico was later joined by the Guerrero, which continued the bombardment without effect.

The financial situation is greatly preoccupying officials and business men. It is stated that the Government will have to meet obligations amounting to several million dollars in the next two months. Interest on several State debts guaranteed by the Federal Government is unpaid. Interest on the National Railway bonds is due on Dec. 1 and Jan. 1, and the officials of the line say that they do not see how it can be paid. E. N. Brown, the President of the lines, is now in the United States trying to arrange for a loan. President Huerta conferred with several bankers here to-day.

May Make a Forced Loan.

It is understood that it is his intention to raise a heavy forced loan to enable him to meet the requirements of the National lines and other indebtedness. This expedient seems to be forced upon him by the action of the United States in isolating Mexico from the European money markets.

It is expected that the Government will realize a considerable sum in case the Belgian railway concession is approved by Congress, which seems almost certain.

President Huerta is in desperate financial straits and is prepared to hold up all foreign and native concerns to obtain funds to continue the war should this be necessary.

A prominent political leader said to-night that every indication here was to the effect that the worst Washington could do would be to remove the embassy and break off diplomatic relations with Mexico. This is not regarded as decisive, since the European Powers are reported to be secretly arranging to serve their own interests in the best possible way, with or without the approval of Washington.

failed to call at the embassy yesterday is adversely commented on in the American colony here. This is regarded as significant of Gen. Huerta's hostility to Americans.

NEWS CHEERS WASHINGTON.

Administration Now Believes Huerta's Fall Is Near.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Government officials who sympathize with President Wilson's policy of forcing Gen. Huerta to retire from the Presidency of Mexico profess to be greatly encouraged over the present trend of events in that country. Their optimism is based partly upon the notable victories of Gen. Villa over the Federals, near Juarez, and partly upon reports that Huerta is in dire straits for want of money.

The cry that "Huerta is on his last legs" has been heard before in Administration circles, but events do not justify it. However, experience has taught officials to be less confident in their statements along this line, and for that reason their present cheerfulness is entitled to greater credence. They find ground for belief that Huerta's power is waning in several things—among them that he alienated many of his foremost supporters by his action in arresting and imprisoning 110 members of the national Congress who protested against the failure of the Government to disclose the whereabouts of Senator Dominguez, who criticised Gen. Huerta's course.

The activity of the Constitutionalists has indicated also to officials here that Huerta's troops are about to be pressed hard in their own territory, which heretofore has been comparatively free from revolutionary operations. The Constitutionalists are becoming aggressive along the eastern seaboard and are gradually getting nearer to Vera Cruz, while the State Department has reason to believe that the victories near Juarez are to be followed up by an advance having as its object the capture of the City of Mexico.

And on top of this comes the news that Gen. Huerta is having greater difficulty than ever in obtaining funds for his dissatisfied troops, and to carry on military operations. Foreign Governments, particularly that of Great Britain, have shown an increasing willingness to assist the United States in any course that will restore normal conditions.

Altogether the situation is encouraging to President Wilson's well-wishers.

Three Ships Recalled From Europe.

The cost of fitting out and the scarcity of enlisted men for crews that might be required for service in Mexican waters caused Secretary Daniels to-day to order home from the Mediterranean the battleships Connecticut, Kansas, and Ohio, constituting the Fourth Division of the Atlantic fleet. These vessels will relieve the battleships Louisiana, Michigan, and New Hampshire, which have been on duty at Vera Cruz and other Atlantic ports of Mexico for many months. The relieving ships will sail for Mexico on Dec. 1, with orders to stop at Guantanamo, Cuba, for coal and shore leave for the men. The division will probably reach Vera Cruz about Dec. 20.

The Connecticut and the Kansas are now at Genoa, and the Ohio is at Marseilles. Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty, commanding this division, has been ordered to Mexico to relieve Rear Admiral Clifford Boush, who has recently been charged with the protection of the oil tanks and wells of the Tuxpam and Tampico districts. Admiral Boush will bring his division North to the home ports of the various battleships for overhauling and repairs.

No reports were received to-day at the Navy Department from Rear Admiral Fletcher, who has gone with the flagship Rhode Island to make an inspection of conditions at Tampico, where concern is felt for the safety of the large stores of oil and the wells of the oil fields distant about 25 miles from the city in the Panuco Valley district. Admiral Fletcher reached Tampico early Wednesday morning, but did not go ashore.

GEN. RABAGO A SUICIDE.

Could Not Survive Loss of Victoria —Madero's Uncle Released.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 28.—Like Gen. José Gonzalez Salas, after the battle of Rellano in March, 1912, Gen. Antonio Rabago, Military Governor of the State of Tamaulipas, killed himself after losing Victoria, the capital. The suicide of Gen. Rabago is not admitted by the Government, but the news is contained in a private telegram to his relatives here, who do not question its authenticity.

According to late dispatches the managers of the branches of the London and Mexico and the National banks at Tampico have been instructed to close their establishments and remove the archives to Progreso. The branch of the Bank of London and Mexico at Monterey has been closed for several days. Industrial concerns in the interior of the republic are in a serious situation, owing to their inability to get from Tampico coal, coke, and oil stored there.

Reports from the north continue to indicate increasing rebel strength south of Saltillo. Since the dynamiting of a troop train yesterday no effort has been made to resume traffic, the railway men refusing to take out the trains.

The Chamber of Deputies approved to-night the committee report on the 20,000,000 peso interior bond issue asked for by the late President Madero, which was not acted upon by his Congress. It is said that certain foreign Governments are willing to accept payment of their indemnities in these bonds, and it is regarded as probable that more will be authorized and printed.

The American Embassy has obtained from high Government officials assurances that Manuel Madero, uncle of the late President, who started to-night under guard for Vera Cruz, would reach there in safety.

Madero is one of a group brought from Monterey on a charge of sedition. He has been held in the penitentiary and was ordered transferred to Vera Cruz, presumably for incarceration in San Juan de Ulloa prison. Relatives learned of the order late to-day and, fearing he might be shot while on the way, appealed to the American Embassy.

Gen. Porfirio Diaz, the ex-President of the republic, may be called upon for active service at any time. Several months ago he was invited by President Huerta to return to the army. He accepted and has been placed on the list of available unassigned Generals.

American cotton in limited quantities is to be admitted into Mexico free of duty, unless railroad communications with the Torreon cotton district be restored within a week, according to a statement made to-day by the Minister of Fomento, Leopoldo Rebollar. The object of this measure is to tranquilize the Mexican textile workers, who see destitution staring them in the face on account of the closing of the cotton mills, which is threatened because of the lack of raw cotton.

Only such quantities of American cotton as are necessary to provide for the temporary needs of the industry are to be permitted to enter free.

VILLA ENTRAINS HIS ARMY.

In Chihuahua in Fortnight, He Says, Then On to Mexico City.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 28. — Gen. "Pancho" Villa began loading his rebel soldiers on trains to-night for the advance against Chihuahua. He said that he would be eating his meals in the State capital within two weeks, and that an advance against Mexico City would be the next step. He says that Gen. Carranza will joint him with a Sonora force after he has captured Chihuahua City, and that the joint armies will proceed south to Guadelajara. He says that they will be joined by the rebel forces from Sinaloa, and that the entire command will march against Mexico City.

Villa angrily predicted to-night that "when the Constitutionalists win they will bar the Western Union Telegraph Company from doing business in Mexico." His outburst of anger was the result of the refusal of the company to resume doing business in Juarez in connection with the Mexican Government telegraph lines. He says that the company has an understanding with the Huerta Government that it will not operate in rebel territory. He is making arrangements to connect the Government lines in his charge with the Postal Telegraph and Cable wires in El Paso, and says that the Postal will get all business in rebel territory.

Gen. Villa said that he had seven batteries of four guns each which he could take forward with him against the Federals, and that he had captured 1,220 unexploded shrapnel shells from the Federals in the recent battle outside of Juarez which he could use in the cannon. He declared this sufficient artillery to fight the Federals on the field or to besiege Chihuahua if they have returned to the State capital. He added that he also captured 1,300 rifles and 2,300 rounds of ammunition from the Federals in the fight.

The rebel General said his death list in the two days of fighting about Juarez would not total over 80. His wounded now in the Juarez hospital number 222. They are being cared for by volunteer nurses and doctors from El Paso.

Gen. Villa has heard that the Federal trains are stalled at Villa Ahumada, eighty-three miles south of Juarez, for lack of water on the retreat, and he thinks he can overtake them before they get back to their base. He has sent messengers to Chao and Contreras asking them to attack the Federals in the rear. Chao and Contreras are besieging Chihuahua City.

Many stores remain closed in Juarez, to keep from accepting Villa's fiat money. He has not yet made good his threat to confiscate stocks of goods.

DELAYS TUXPAM RELIEF.

Gen. Maass Says He Cannot Get Transportation for Troops.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 28.—A full regiment of troops commanded by Gen. Joaquin Maass, Jr., is expected to get under way for the Tuxpam and Tampico districts by to-morrow. Gen. Maass is experiencing difficulty in getting transportation for his men.

Admiral Cradock on H. M. S. Suffolk, now in the outside harbor, today received a visit from the British Consul, to whom he reported all quiet, so far as he could see, in the oil districts of Tampico and Tuxpam.

Surprise has been caused among politicians here by the arrival on board the steamer Mexico to-day of the Chilean diplomatic officer, Antonio B. Agacio.

GERMAN ABUSE OF WILSON.

Newspaper Calls Him "Unalloyed Fool," but Government Is Friendly.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—"Wilson, the unalloyed fool," is the expression used by the Vossische Zeitung in speaking of the President's conduct in the Mexican situation.

Some time ago, after the publication of THE NEW YORK TIMES Berlin dispatch concerning the bitter anti-American tone of the German press, the Frankfurter Zeitung published a long editorial article denouncing indignantly the assertion that there was any trace of anti-American feeling in Germany. Despite this editorial the press continues to publish articles in which Americans, who are ordinarily referred to sneeringly as "Yankees," are accused of hypocrisy, of permitting Government agencies to be subverted in the interest of the Standard Oil Company and other great undertakings, and of cherishing a plain design to annex at least a portion of Mexico and further to exploit that country.

The Vossische Zeitung's article cited pictures of conditions in Mexico as the most barbarous and asserts that the people who induced "Wilson, the unalloyed fool," to bite into the peppered dish knew just how to go about it. They concealed themselves behind "political morals," as if there were such a thing where petroleum was still the trump.

On one side is America with the Standard Oil Company; the railroaders and the miners on the other side. The writer asserts that the only hope for the restoration of peace is through Huerta, the only man capable of ruling Mexico, if he could be supported.

The article warns the United States against raising the embargo on the importation of rifles and cites the arming of the Tschungusu bandits in Manchuria by both sides in the Russo-Japanese war, where the result was that those armed bandits and their rifles were the elements of terror for years after the war closed.

As long, however, as the attitude of the Government remains unchanged, America need not worry about the attacks of the press, and I am able to state that these attacks are not encouraged in the slightest degree by the Government, which is kept advised of the Wilson Administration's actions and has absolutely no intention of interfering in any way. Naturally, it hopes for an early solution of the Mexican problem and is momentarily more disquieted by the situation than it admits; but its attitude is one of friendly and complete confidence in America, although undoubtedly it believes that the latter has handled the affair unfortunately.

MEXICAN PRESSURE ON POPE.

Pontiff Refuses, However, to Take Any Position in the Matter.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 28.—Although there is no official representation of Mexico at the Vatican, strong pressure has been exercised there to cause the Pope to use his influence in favor of Mexico, especially in view of the possible American intervention.

Thus far, however, both Pius X and Cardinal Merry del Val, the Secretary of State, have refused to adhere to any course that might be interpreted as a partisan attitude on the part of the Holy See in favor of one country against the other.

Nevertheless, in conversation with prominent Mexican prelates the Vatican authorities have expressed their warmest sympathy with the Mexican people, assuring them of their sincere wishes for the re-establishment of internal peace and for the satisfaction of their national aspirations.

The Mexicans, who have come here to enlist the good offices of the Vatican, say that the situation in their country is not as described in the "exaggerated reports" of the American press. They maintain that the civil war would not be serious if the rebels were not assisted by American arms, funds, and men, while all the news circulated concerning atrocities, destruction, and vandalism, is unfounded.

The suggestion was made that even if the Vatican did not wish to commit itself to any action which would make it appear as siding with Mexico, its influence might be exercised in Washington enough through the Apostolic delegate, Mgr. Bonzano or through one of the American Cardinals, this step being in accord with the teachings of the church in favor of peace and concord so as to render the suggestion acceptable. It has been asserted that overtures of this kind would be favorably received.

Even on these lines, however, the Vatican, up to the present, has not seemed disposed to take any definite action recalling that a mission similar to that suggested, which was intrusted to Archbishop Ireland before the Spanish-American war was unsuccessful.

CALL MEXICO OUR AFFAIR.

British National Review Says Wilson Should Have a Free Hand.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The National Review, which is usually hostile to America, says of the Mexican question that the propinquity of Mexico to the United States is the most important of the outstanding elementary facts to be taken into consideration, and pronounces "as utterly farcical the irresponsible idea that Mexico is a suitable field for a spirited British policy." The Review adds:

"It is quite useless to attack or abuse the United States for pursuing a policy which would undoubtedly be ours were we in her position. She is confronted by a grave problem at a highly inconvenient moment. The President is the soul of sincerity, and detests the idea of going to war. * * * It is a palpable case for masterly inactivity on our part. * * * We recognize that Mexico is exclusively an American problem, as America acknowledged the Transvaal to be a British problem."

AMERICANS LEAVE VICTORIA.

Fear of Starvation Impels Five Families to Flight for Home.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Nov. 28.—Imminent danger of starvation in Victoria, the capital of the Mexican State of Tamaulipas, has caused all the Americans now in that locality to decide to start for the United States. An American chauffeur, returning from Victoria, to-day said that the Americans—five families and several single persons—were to start for Matamoras and Brownsville by wagon train to-day. Several women missionaries have asked United States Consul Johnson, at Matamoras, to furnish automobile transportation from Victoria to Matamoras.

Victoria is cut off from all points, and there is no chance to obtain provisions. With the departure of the Americans from Victoria it is believed there will be none left in Tamaulipas except at Tampico.

The chauffeur said that on capturing Victoria on Nov. 19 the Constitutionalists burned the State Capitol and razed the penitentiary, after liberating all the prisoners, but destroyed no other property in the city deliberately. The National Mexican Railroad bridge over the San Marcos River was partly destroyed.

YELLOW FEVER IN MEXICO.

Washington Takes Quarantine Precautions Against Puerto Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Surgeon General Blue of the Public Health Service took active steps to-day to protect the American Gulf Coast against yellow fever, reported through unofficial channels as being epidemic at Puerto Mexico, the Gulf terminal of the Tehuantepec Railway.

Five cases and one death are reported, and many deaths there are suspected as having been due to fever. The same advices say that the British Consul at Puerto Mexico has been instructed to concentrate all British subjects in that neighborhood.

Preparing to Move Western Troops.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Nov. 28.—The army took one more step to-day in preparation for trouble with Mexico when the Department of the Missouri notified Western railroads to prepare bids for moving troops from Forts D. A. Russell and Logan to El Paso, Texas. Bids must provide for assembling troops from these posts at Fort Riley, Kan., and taking them thence to El Paso.

Carranza Minister Back at Nogales.

Spain to Send Cruiser to Mexico.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 29.—According to The Times's Madrid correspondent, the Spanish Government has decided to send the cruiser Emperador Carlos V to Mexican waters.

DR. WILEY WOULD CONSIDER

But Has Received No Formal Offer of Health Commissionership.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—From his farm in Loudoun County, Va., Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former Chief Chemist of the Department of Agriculture, and the foremost pure food expert in the country, sent word to-day to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, in answer to an inquiry, that no formal offer of the Health Commissionership of New York had been made to him by Mayor-elect Mitchel.

Dr. Wiley added that he had received many letters from friends and others asking that he accept the place if it was offered. He did not care to say whether he would or would not accept if a tender were made, but he expressed his willingness to give it consideration.

Questioned again when he returned to Washington to-night, the doctor said that the only thing which would impel him to accept such a position would be a sense of public duty.

Dr. Wiley deprecated the idea of a man being forced upon Mayor-elect Mitchel as a member of his cabinet. "He ought to be free to choose the man he wants," said he.

TALK JARS PAN-AMERICANS.

Chamberlain's Support of Colombia Abruptly Ends Luncheon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Senator Chamberlain of Oregon created a mild sensation to-day at a luncheon attended by all the Latin-American diplomats in Washington by announcing that he would vote for "Justice to Colombia from the United States" if he ever had an opportunity to cast a deciding vote in the controversy with the South America republic brought about by the separation of Panama.

As soon as Senator Chamberlain sat down, Ambassador Da Gama of Brazil, dean of the Latin-American corps, suggested that the party break up; and in silence this was done.

The episode took place at a luncheon given by John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union, in honor of his forty-seventh birthday anniversary and the thirteenth of his connection with Latin-American affairs.

The Right Rev. Charles W. Currier, Bishop of Matanzas, Cuba, said that the time ought to be near when the United States would not monopolize the term "American," but when it should be applied alike to all countries on the Western hemisphere.

Fireman Killed by Pole Slide.

When Lieut. Thomas Mitchell of Hook and Ladder 22 started down the brass pole from the third floor of his company's quarters at 760 Amsterdam Avenue yesterday morning he lost his balance and fell to the second floor, suffering injuries from which he died an hour later in the Knickerbocker Hospital. Mitchell was 51 years old, and lived at 113 West 101st Street.

RULES TO SHIELD INCOME SECRETS

Names of Bondholders to Go Direct to Treasury Instead of Through Withholding Agency.

SUBSTITUTE CERTIFICATES

These to be Issued by Collecting Banks—New Regulations Alleviate Other Tax Hardships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—To facilitate collection at the source of the income tax on interest derived from coupon bonds, without dealing unjustly with owners of such bonds or the banking world generally and at the same time safeguarding the interests of the Federal Government, the Treasury Department to-night issued three important regulations.

These regulations, it is believed, will meet the objections raised by many bondholders, bankers, and bonding house officials, who felt that the original regulations might result in the disclosure of important private information regarding the ownership of bonds. Under one of the regulations promulgated to-night, the disclosure of such secrets will be avoided, according to Treasury officials. The private information which this regulation aims to safeguard is of this character:

First—The names of holders of such bonds. The purpose is to withhold these names from possibly unscrupulous persons who might utilize the information in obtaining the names of bondholders for improper uses.

Second—The financial secrets of bankers and bonding houses.

Objection was raised that under the previous regulations it might be possible for one banking house to learn the secrets of another by ascertaining, through income tax certificates, the names of customers. The regulation dealing with this situation is believed to be so framed as to disclose the identity of holders of such coupon bonds only to the first receiving agent, who has the information in any event, and to the Federal Government. This will impose a little extra work on the Treasury Department at Washington, but it was announced there to-night that the Department was willing to bear that burden.

Substitute Certificates.

The first of the new regulations follows:

Regulations permitting the substitution under certain conditions of the certificates of banks, bankers, or other collecting agents for the certificates of the owners required to be attached to interest coupons when presented for collection, under income tax regulations of Oct. 25, 1913, and those supplementary thereto.

Treasury regulations of Oct. 25, 1913, and those supplementary thereto, require, that under the conditions therein prescribed, there shall be attached to interest coupons maturing on bonds and other similar obligations of corporations which may be presented for collection, certain certificates of ownership signed by the owners of the bonds from which the coupons were detached or by their duly authorized agents.

Notice is hereby given that responsible banks, bankers and collecting agents receiving coupons for collection with the aforesaid certificates of ownership attached may either present the coupons with the attached certificates to the debtor or withholding agent for collection, or, at the option of the collecting agent, the certificates above referred to may be detached from such coupons and forwarded direct to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, D. C., as hereinafter set forth; provided such bank, banker or collecting agent shall thereupon substitute for said owners' certificates and attach to said coupons, in lieu of said certificate of owner, a certificate signed by said bank, banker or collecting agent to whom said coupons may have been first presented for collection, in substantially the following form:

Form of certificate to be attached to interest coupons in cases where the collecting agent's certificate is substituted for the certificate of the owner. The owner's certificate, of which the following certificate is the counterpart, and bears the same number as the certificate, will be sent by the collecting agent direct to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, as prescribed by regulations.

"I (we) ——— do solemnly declare (name of collecting agent) that the owner of the ——— bonds of the ——— (name of debtor organization) from which were detached the accompanying interest coupons due ——— (maturity), 191—, amounting to $———, has filed with me (us) a duly executed certificate filled up in accordance with Treasury regulations of Oct. 25, 1913, form No. ———, which certificate has been indorsed by me (us) as follows: 'Owner's certificate No. ———, (name of collecting agency) (date), 191—;' and in which the said owner claims, with respect to the income represented by said interest, the benefit of a deduction of $———, allowed under Paragraph C, Section II., of the Federal income tax law, the total exemption to which said owner now claims to be entitled thereunder being $———; and I (we) do hereby promise and pledge myself (ourselves) to forward the above described certificate executed by the owners as stated and dated ———, 191—, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, at Washington, D. C., not later than the 20th day of next month, in accordance with Treasury regulations.

"Date ———, 191—, address ———."

The certificate of the owner, for which the foregoing certificate of the collecting agent may be thus substituted by the collecting agent in receiving said coupons for collection must be given the following endorsement by the collecting agents and should be made preferably with a rubber stamp:

Owner's certificate No. —.
(Name of collecting agency)
(give date of certificate) ——— 191—.

The counterpart of the within certificate bearing this number was attached to the coupons within mentioned for delivery to the debtor or withholding agent by whom the coupons are payable.

Must Keep a Record.

Certificates of owners for which collecting agents' certificates are substituted must be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington by the collecting agency receiving them not later than the twentieth day of the month succeeding that in which said coupons were thus received for collection.

All banks, bankers or other collecting agents who may substitute their certificates for the certificates of owners under the foregoing plan will be required to keep a complete record of all such transactions and substitutions of certificates, showing all certificates for which the collecting agents' certificates have been issued in lieu of the owners certificates.

This record should be kept by months and should give the following information: Serial number of item received; date received; name of person from whom received; address; name of debtor corporation; class of bond from which coupons were cut; face amount of coupons collected; deductions from tax claimed by owners under Paragraph C of Federal income tax law; amount of interest collected.

Until further ruling by this department, the banks, bankers, and other collecting agents who may substitute their certificates for the certificates of owners under the foregoing plan, will not be required to secure a license from the Treasury Department for being permitted to make such substitutions of their own certificates for those of the owners, provided these regulations are strictly complied with.

The permission to banks, bankers, and collecting agents to substitute their own certificates under the above regulations for those of the owners of the bonds, &c., will extend to responsible banks, bankers, and collecting agents in foreign countries, as well as to those of the United States.

W. H. OSBORN,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.
Approved: Nov. 28, 1913.
W. G. McADOO, Secretary of the Treasury.

Temporary Certificates Extended.

The second new regulation extends until Jan. 15, 1914, the time for the use of the temporary certificate, known as No. 1,005, so far as foreign holders of coupons and interest orders may be concerned. These temporary certificates were to be used only prior to Nov. 16, 1913, and were intended to certify as to who was lawfully entitled to present for payment the coupons or interest orders representing interest matured on bonds. The regulation issued to-night follows:

Extension of time for use of temporary form 1,005, from Nov. 16, 1913, to Jan. 15, 1914, so far as foreign holders of coupons and interest orders may be concerned.

The time for the use of temporary certificate, Form 1,005, shall be extended from Nov. 16, 1913, to Jan. 15, 1914, when signed by a person, firm, or corporation licensed under Paragraph "F" of the income tax law, provided such form shall only be used in cases where the coupons to which it shall relate shall have been received by such licensed person, firm, or corporation from a foreign country.

W. H. OSBORN, Commissioner.
Approved Nov. 28, 1913.
W. G. McADOO, Secretary.

The third of the new regulations provides for a waiver until March 31, 1914, of Treasury requirements for filling in on certificates the numbers of bonds of corporations, and reads as follows:

Waiver until March 31, 1914, of Treasury requirements for the filling in on certificates of the numbers of the bonds of corporations, &c., upon the interest from which the normal income tax of 1 per cent. is required to be deducted at the source under the provisions of the income Tax law.

Notice is hereby given that the Treasury regulations heretofore issued, which require that the numbers of the bonds or other like obligations of corporations, etc., from which interest coupons are detached or upon which registered interest is to be paid shall be filled in on the certificates are hereby waived so far as the filling in of the numbers of the bonds or other such obligations on the certificates is concerned until March 31, 1914.

In all other respects the certificate referred to must be filled in in accordance with the Treasury regulations before the coupons or orders for registered interest to which they may be attached shall be paid.

W. H. OSBORN,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.
Approved: Nov. 28, 1913.
W. G. McADOO, Secretary.

Five other proposed regulations were drafted and approved to-day by Secretary McAdoo, all dealing with collection of the income tax at the source. These regulations relate to the status of trustees under the new law and will be made public to-morrow by the Treasury Department. Like the regulations issued to-night the ones to be issued to-morrow are intended to serve the purposes of the Government without occasioning injury, harm, hardship, embarrassment, or invasion of rights of bondholders, bankers, bonding houses, or other agents.

ROOT TO HELP MEND FENCES

Senator Will Discuss New Party Programme Here on Dec. 5.

When the Republican leaders meet in this city on Dec. 5 to take up questions regarding the future welfare of the party a programme will be presented, it was said yesterday, calling for a direct primary bill that will contain all of the Progressives' principles except, possibly, the abolition of the State convention; a sweeping short ballot bill; the Massachusetts ballot, and the establishment of a State Board of Estimate.

Senator Elihu Root, who is to be Chairman of the meeting, has been in conference with the State leaders in the party and has agreed to the Progressive programme, it was said. The Republican leaders feel that the outlook is particularly bright for the election of their State ticket next year, but it is understood also that there must be a breaking away from the old standpat influence. A Progressive programme will be held out as a bait for Progressives to come back into the party.

If the meeting decides in favor of ballot reform as well as direct primaries it is thought that it will bring Independent Democrats as well as Progressives into the party. It is said that the short ballot will be recommended not only for the State elections, but also for municipal elections. If a State Board of Estimate is agreed upon it will be drafted along the lines of the New York City Board of Estimate, and will consist of the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the State Controller, and the Speaker of the Assembly.

Senator Root and other leaders, it was said, are in favor of the Massachusetts ballot, but will not recommend its adoption until the short ballot has been adopted by the State. The conference will also, in all probability, take up the question of Barnes's control of the State organization. No action will be taken regarding the ousting of Barnes, however, it is understood, until Ogden L. Mills returns from his round-the-State trip, where he was sent by Republican local leaders, who are opposed to Barnes, to feel out anti-Barnes sentiment. If Mr. Mills reports that the feeling against Barnes is State-wide the programme of reform will favor the expulsion of Barnes and the election of a more progressive leader in his place. Martin Saxo has been made Chairman of a Reception Committee which will have charge of the conference. Albert Ottinger is Vice Chairman, and on the committee are Elihu Root and the Republican members of Congress from the City of New York, and Mr. Barnes and the members of the Republican State Committee, as well as a number of prominent Republicans throughout the State.

SUFFRAGISTS WIN DEBATE.

Women's Team Defeats Men's at West Side Y. M. C. A. Contest.

The question, "Shall the right of suffrage be extended to women?" was the subject of a debate between teams representing the Men's Public Speaking Club of America and the Women's Speaking Club of America, held at the West Side Young Men's Christian Association last night, and the women got the verdict. From the standpoint of oratory the contest was never in doubt, despite the efforts of Harry W. Mahneke, who had left his coat unbuttoned and nearly lost it in his endeavor to add by gesture to the force of his argument.

There were twelve speakers, six women and six men, and each was limited to three minutes. All the women stopped before the gong sounded; all the men were going full blast when the warning bell was rung. Mr. Mahneke, in fact, was so vigorously applauded in appreciation of his arm exercises that he thought the applause called for an encore and started for the front of the stage again, manuscript in hand.

The women were headed by Dr. Jeanette Hammell of the Faculty of the New York School of Commerce, and included Miss Mary Craig, a school teacher; Miss Sarah Stephenson, lawyer; Miss Anne Hammell, Miss Edna R. Dolan, and Mrs. William Swan, the latter suffrage leader of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District. Harry B. Bradbury headed the men's team, and with him were C. C. Ferris, J. Batley Logan, Henry B. Hammond, George H. Burt, and Mr. Mahneke.

About every argument one could think of was used in one shape or another, and Mr. Ferris went back to the days of Adam and Eve for material. Said he: "The serpent told Eve that she was having a flat, spiritless existence, and suggested that she 'get wise.'

"Why don't you go into politics?" the serpent suggested, according to Mr. Ferris.

The women devoted their addresses to facts and figures which proved to the audience's satisfaction that they were right, despite the summing up of Mr. Bradbury. The vote was about two to one for the women debaters.

WANT HOSPITAL INQUIRY.

Doctors Complain of Management of North Hudson Institution.

Three physicians of the medical staff of the North Hudson Hospital at Weehawken, N. J., and twenty-eight other physicians practicing in North Hudson County, asked the hospital's Board of Governors yesterday to authorize an investigation of charges which have been made against the management of the hospital. The physicians offered to pay the cost of the investigation, and suggested that it should be made by Dr. George O'Hanlon, Superintendent of Bellevue and allied hospitals, and Dr. Sigismund Goldwater, Superintendent of Mount Sinai Hospital.

According to Dr. Quigley, one of those asking for the investigation, the charges have nothing to do with the finances of the institution.

"It is charged that Miss Kate B. Tully, the Superintendent, has insulted physicians and patients under her charge," he said. "It is further charged that the management has not enforced the orders of pysicians and has not prevented the falsification of charts in the wards."

Miss Tully declined to comment upon the charges last night. The President of the Board of Trustees is Lewis A. Menegaux. Mayor William Rannenberg of Union Hill and ex-Mayor Emil Groh are members of the board. The three physicians connected with the hospital who are among the complainants are Drs. H. J. Spaulding, William Meyer, and William Seesler.

TIMES SQ. STATION FAVORED BY M'CALL

Service Board Chairman Out for B. R. T. Express Stop at Traffic Centre.

PUBLIC HEARING REQUEST

Hope to Keep Crosstown Connection Open After Both Trunk Lines Are Completed—Through Trains.

The application of the Broadway Association for a public hearing on the question of the location of the subway stations at and near Times Square was received yesterday at the meeting of the Public Service Commission. The association has been urging on the commission the advisability of placing an express station on the B. R. T. Broadway line north of Forty-second Street and running up to Forty-fourth Street, in place of the commission's tentative plan to give Forty-second Street and Broadway only a local station and to run that down to Fortieth Street.

Commissioner Eustis remarked that he did not see what would be the advantage of such a public hearing. The question, he said, had been before the Committee of the Whole for a long time, and he thought the Commissioners had seen nearly everybody connected with the question at one time or another and had heard their views.

Commissioner Williams then suggested that as the Committee of the Whole was now considering the problem it would be in order to submit to that body the request of the association for a hearing. His proposal was accepted by the commission, and it will now rest with the Committee of the Whole to say whether it considers that such a public hearing should be granted.

Incidentally, in the course of the short discussion Chairman McCall remarked that he was entirely in favor of the placing of an express station on the B. R. T. in Times Square, and that he could not give his approval to the plan of the commission as it stood at present. Commissioner Williams also said that he agreed with the Chairman.

It is probable that if the hearing is held the evidence submitted will consist largely of a technical discussion of the difficulties that will be encountered by the engineers in placing an express station under Times Square from Forty-second Street to Forty-fourth Street. It is admitted by all who have studied the question that this is going to be in any circumstances one of the most delicate and difficult pieces of construction work in all the new subway systems. It is complicated by the necessity of maintaining the present Interborough crosstown line in operation during the entire period of construction.

It was learned yesterday that the Interborough and the commission's engineers have hopes that it will be possible, even after the two great east and west trunk lines are completed, to keep the cross-town connection of the Interborough system open as it is at present. From the company's point of view this is most important, as there is always a possibility of something happening to block either the Lexington Avenue or the Seventh Avenue route, and in such an emergency the possibility of rerouting its trains would be of the utmost value.

Moreover, it is even considered a possibility that at certain hours of the day through trains will continue to be operated from Brooklyn Bridge, across Forty-second Street, and up the west side line, in the way with which New Yorkers are now familiar. Of course, this will not be possible during the rush hours, for then the east and west side lines will be operated at such a small headway that any diversion of trains from the general route would cause delays that would seriously impede operation. But it is possible to run a few through trains under Forty-second Street at the less congested hours of the day.

This, however, remains one of the matters about the routing of the new subways which can only be worked out in practice. It will depend on the actual demand for such a service with all the new lines in use as well as the experience of actual operation. But it is a matter which the commission's engineers and the Interborough consider sufficiently within the range of possibility to keep in mind and to make every preparation for.

The preservation of this through route is one of the factors in the Times Square problem. Another is the finding of a means to provide an enlarged and thoroughly adequate sewer system for Times Square. It was, however, pointed out yesterday that the fact that this is a public necessity should remove one possible objection to making the B. R. T. express station at Times Square. It should certainly permit the charging up of some of the expense of the great Times Square construction to the general expenditure of the city instead of to the cost of subway construction.

To preserve itself from further liability for damages the city has to undertake the task of providing the increased sewer capacity, which the heavy rains of last Summer showed the big buildings in and near Times Square require. The cost of this, it is argued, may be fairly written off against the expense of constructing the new Times Square stations. The experts of the Broadway Association are by no means disposed to admit that their plan for creating a great traffic centre between Forty-second Street and Forty-fourth Street will be much more costly than the execution of the commission's tentative plan, but even if it is, they said yesterday, when it is remembered that it will involve the settlement of the sewer as well as the traction problem, it will be recognized that the money will be well invested.

$71,246 FOR CRIPPLES' FUND

$100,000 in All Is Sought for St. Giles Hospital.

Dr. Burr Burton Mosher, who is leading a ten days' campaign to raise $100,000 for a Brooklyn hospital and dispensary for the House of St. Giles the Cripple, which operates the only orthopaedic hospital on Long Island at Garden City, announced last night that the total contributions of the first seven days of the campaign amounted to $71,246. The amount raised yesterday was $13,405, the largest amount of any single day since the campaign began.

The amount yesterday was swelled by $4,000 which Daniel Birdsall added to his original donation of $1,000, by $2,000 contributed anonymously through Bishop Burgess, and by $1,000 from Herbert Pratt. The campaign will close on Monday evening.

LUSITANIA FIGHTS HIGH SEAS

Too Rough to Take Mails or Drop Pilot at Queenstown.

The Cunard liner Lusitania, which arrived yesterday, buffeted head seas and strong winds all the way across to New York, but never dropped her speed below 21 knots. She covered the distance of 2,812 miles in 5 days 1 hour and 43 minutes at an average speed of 23.10 knots.

It was too rough at Queenstown to stop for the mails, and more than 1,000 sacks were left there. It was also too rough to drop G. T. Collins, the company's pilot, who joined the Lusitania at Liverpool, and he had to come on to New York. It is his first trip here. When asked by the reporters what he thought of New York, he said: "It seems quite a place, and has some fine ships at the piers."

SEIZE HIDDEN ARMS ON A CLYDE LINER

Customs Inspector Finds 10,000 Rounds of Ammunition in Seminole's Bunkers.

BOUND FOR SAN DOMINGO

Belief Is That Munitions of War Represent Speculative Venture of Some of the Crew.

After Capt. Carey had made out his manifest, preparatory to sailing for revolution-ridden San Domingo this morning, Customs Inspector Albert O. Hokensen went down into the hold of the steamship Seminole of the Clyde Line at her pier at Thirty-fourth Street, Atlantic Basin, Brooklyn, late yesterday afternoon and instituted a thorough search of her bunkers and engine room.

Under the coal in the bunkers and in the unused boilers of the ship's donkey engines the Inspector found thousands of rounds of ammunition. More rounds, bringing the total up to about 10,000, were found stored in the matting-covered ventilators. Concealed under high heape of coal six automatic pistols of the latest design were unearthed, all carefully wrapped in cloth covering. All of the weapons and ammunition were seized. The pistols were taken to the Custom House and the cartridges to "Black Tom," the Government's destroying station for seized explosives in New Jersey.

Inspector Hokensen refused to discuss the seizure, saying only that it had been made by orders issued by Gen. Nelson H. Henry, Surveyor of the Port.

At his home last night, Gen. Henry said no formal report of the seizure had yet been made to him, and that he knew nothing definite about the manner in which it was carried out, what had been found, or how the ammunition and weapons had gotten into the hold of the Seminole. He would get a detailed report in the matter in the morning, he said.

"The munitions of war were probably being exported for use in Santo Domingo," said Gen. Barry, "but beyond that I have not been informed as yet."

The carrying by a ship of ammunition and arms not appearing in the Captain's manifest is a violation of the customs laws and makes the concealed articles liable to seizure.

No official of the Clyde Line could be reached last night. One of the customs officials, however, offered this explanation:

"The pistols found in the Seminole are worth about $50 each. In Santo Domingo they would bring fancy prices owing to the present troubles there. Similarly, the ammunition, worth about 75 cents a box of fifty here, could be sold easily for $4 or $5 a box in Santo Domingo. It has been customary for members of the crews of many ships cruising in Santo Domingo waters to club together secretly and surreptitiously to engage in the prosperous little business thus offered by concealing weapons and ammunition in dark parts of the ship,

WHITMAN WILL CALL SPECIAL GRAFT JURY

Fortifies Himself Against Interference by Putting Investigation in Supreme Court.

HE WILL IMPANEL EXPERTS

Jury's Subpoenas Will Carry Authority Throughout the State—Some Evidences of a Clash.

A special Grand Jury, responsible to Justice Davis in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, will be selected on Monday for the consideration of all evidence relating to District Attorney Whitman's campaign graft investigation. A special panel of 250 talesmen has been drawn.

It is expected that the men selected will be asked to be ready to serve for six months. It is understood that this Grand Jury will consider only matters relating to the graft investigation. This was interpreted yesterday as meaning that Mr. Whitman had intrenched himself against interference.

A subpoena from this Grand Jury carries weight throughout the State, and no contractor, politician, or employe of the State who is wanted in the investigation can evade the call. It is probable that the whole history of the construction of the barge canal as well as of the construction and repair of State roads in the last five years will be reviewed by this body. Men especially qualified to understand the technicalities of contracts and specifications in State work, it is understood, will be preferred for this Grand Jury.

It is considered to be significant that this Grand Jury will begin its work less than a week after the start of the Osborne investigation in Albany. A clash between the investigations is prophesied by many disinterested persons. Mr. Whitman has the advantage of Mr. Osborne in that he ca nobtain indictments, whereas Mr. Osborne, if he finds cause for action, must submit his case to a Grand Jury having jurisdiction.

Gov. Glynn, in asserting that there would be no clash of investigations, has said that Mr. Whitman would deal only with matters pertaining to this county and Mr. Osborne would have jurisdiction elsewhere. Friends of Whitman and Osborne say, however, that the matter cannot be arranged so easily.

It was asserted yesterday that Mr. Whitman had been compelled to serve a subpoena duces tecum on Assistant Secretary of State Jose E. Pidgeon before he could get possession of certain documents in the Secretary of State's office. Letters from the District Attorney's office requesting these documents, it was said, were disregarded. The documents were unimportant in themselves.

It also was asserted that it required two personal trips to Albany and a subsequent threat of another subpoena before complete records of the Canal Board could be obtained from Albany. These records arrived at the Criminal Court Building yesterday by express after the Secretary of the Canal Board had been notified that he had until to-day to produce them.

The documents brought yesterday by Assistant Secretary Pidgeon were the annual statements of receipts and expenditure filed with the Secretary of State by the Republican State Committee for the years 1910 to 1913 and of the Progressive State Committee for 1912 and 1913. The Democratic Committee's statements have been in Mr. Whitman's possession for a month. Mr. Whitman's purpose in subpoenaing the Republican and Progressive parties' statements, it was explained, was in line with his assertion that his investigation in no way would be partisan.

Information has reached the District Attorney relative to graft in the Bureau of Repairs of the Department of Highways. It was said that many road repair specifications calling for oil as a resurfacing material had been changed arbitrarily in the last year to call for tar instead. A particular company which sells tar, it was said, had been favored in this way, to the exclusion of the Standard Oil Company, the Texas Company, the United States Asphalt Refining Company, and the Sun Company. The new evidence, it was said, involved an official in the Highway Department, an ex-State official, and several go-betweens. Mr. Whitman will return to the city on Monday morning. He will obtain immediately the selection of a special Grand Jury, and several witnesses produced by John A. Hennessy may be heard in the afternoon. At 2:30 P. M. the John Doe inquiry will be resumed.

A cable dispatch from James K. McGuire reached Assistant District Attorney Clark yesterday from San Juan, Porto Rico. McGuire assured Mr. Clark that he would proceed at once to Havana, and from there would start for New York. In addition Mr. Clark received assurances from a lawyer that McGuire would be produced in court on arrival.

CONDIT DID TELL TILLSON.

Brookiyn Engineer Corroborates Oil Man's McGuire Story.

George W. Tillson, consulting engineer under Borough President L. H. Pounds of Brooklyn, acknowledged last night that he had heard from Fillmore Condit, local representative of the Union Oil Company of California, the full story of the alleged dealings of James K. McGuire with Mr. Condit. Mr. Tillson said that Mr. Condit had laid the story before him three weeks before the last election, and that he had proposed that the material be used for campaign purposes.

"Mr. Condit came to my office when Mr. Pounds was out," said Mr. Tillson. "The substance of his conversation with me was that he and his company had been treated right in the Borough of Brooklyn. He was willing, he said, that the McGuire story should be used in the campaign."

Mr. Tillson explained that the Borough of Brooklyn, under his administration as chief consulting engineer, had open asphalt specifications. These specifications, he said, permitted the use of a number of asphalts, including the product of the Union Oil Company of California. Much of the California product, he said, had been used on the streets of the borough.

"But Mr. Condit," he said, "never bid on any work himself. I suppose the borough bought some of his products through agents or brokers. I will say for Mr. Condit that I have known him for six or seven years, and that he is an honorable man. I am sure that he did not bring the McGuire story to Mr. Pounds to gain favor. What he told me about McGuire at that time corresponded exactly with his testimony."

"What did Mr. Pounds do with the McGuire story?" Mr. Tillson was asked.

"I told him what Mr. Condit had told me, and he said that he had no use for it as a campaign document. I kept the typewritten paper which contained the information."

"What did you do with this statement?" the reporter asked.

"I carried it around in my pocket for some time, and then, I believe, I destroyed it."

Borough President Pounds last night gave the same version of the Condit matter. He had no use for the information, he said, and considered it entirely extraneous to Brooklyn affairs. He added that he did not want to assume any obligations which might be interpreted as favoring any company furnishing materials.

"I remember that Mr. Tillson spoke to me about the matter," said President Pounds, "and I remember that I told him that I could not go into that story. The matter did not affect us in Brooklyn and had no place in the campaign. Besides, it didn't attract me, for I knew that it might be misinterpreted. I did not want to accept anything from any one who might desire a favor later on.

"As I look on it now there was no responsibility or obligation resting on me to make this McGuire story public."

President Pounds said that he did not know Mr. Condit and that he had never met him. As far as he knew, he said, Mr. Condit never had any business dealings with his office.

SOME RECORDS TAKE FLIGHT.

Papers Have Disappeared from State Office, Mr. May Admits.

Important papers are missing from the files of the office of the Secretary of State in Albany, it was admitted last night by Secretary of State Mitchell May at his home in Brooklyn. Mr. May said that he had been unable to trace the missing papers.

Secretary May hinted that papers were missing when a reporter asked him about a rumor that James W. Osborne had been unable to get permission to inspect certain documents in the department. Dispatches from Albany said that reports were current that Osborne had been rebuffed, but the deputies in the department said that they knew nothing about such an occurrence.

"I can't understand why Mr. Osborne should have been unable to get permission to inspect any papers in this department," said Mr. May last night. "Surely such action would not have my sanction. I do remember that I instructed my assistants to be very careful with certain papers and it might be, of course, that some one interpreted this order literally.

"Ordinarily, of course, the files are open to the public, and we allow anyone to inspect the papers unless we suspect an evil design. But my clerks, in going over the index recently, found that some papers were not in place. A thorough search showed that they were not in the building and I haven't found out since where they went or how they went. I wish I knew. I was so disturbed over the matter that I gave the stringent instructions before I left.

"I asked my assistants to be particularly careful in the care of papers which might be used in the course of any of the investigations now under way. If Mr. Osborne had asked for papers which were denied him, I think I would have received a telephonic communication to that effect."

"Do you think the missing papers included the campaign lists of receipts and expenditures?" Mr. May was asked.

"Possibly, but I don't know," replied the Secretary of State. "I am sure that I will co-operate in every way I can with both Mr. Whitman and Mr. Osborne."

GRAFT INQUIRY DELAYED.

Osborne to Begin Next Wednesday —Carlisle to Have Counsel.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 28.—James W. Osborne was to have begun his interrogation of witnesses as Gov. Glynn's special graft investigator this afternoon, but he didn't. Mr. Osborne reached here at noon with his assistant, Arthur T. Warner. After luncheon both proceeded to the Capitol, where Gov. Glynn's designation as investigator awaited Mr. Osborne. The designation was dated to-day and empowered Mr. Osborne to subpoena and enforce the attendance of witnesses, administer oaths and require the production of books and papers. Mr. Osborne being appointed a Commissioner to investigate the affairs of all departments, boards, bureaus, and commissions of the State.

When the time set by Mr. Osborne to open his inquiry arrived, John N. Carlisle, State Highway Commissioner, who was to be interrogated on the Rubino asphalt charges, asked to be allowed to be represented by counsel. Messrs. Osborne and Warner conferred with Attorney General Carmody, after which it was announced that the request would be granted. Mr. Osborne said he would give Mr. Carlisle every opportunity to defend his acts. He set the hearing for next Wednesday, Dec. 3, at 11 A. M.

Mr. Osborne decided to have Henry A. Rubino, attorney for the Liquid Asphalt interests, who made charges to the Governor that Commissioner Carlisle had discriminated in favor of the Barber Asphalt Company's material in his specifications for road building, tell his story to-day, but changed his mind. He said that the proceedings would begin Wednesday with the filing of briefs. The hearings will be public.

Patrick R. Quinlan, Vice President of the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, who also had filed charges against Commissioner Carlisle, was present to-day ready to testify. Counsel for the Barber Asphalt Company also appeared.

Mr. Osborne impressed upon all present to-day that he was not to be the judge of the evidence he extracted.

"I am not here to determine anything," he said. "I only make a report."

"The books of the Barber Company are in Philadelphia," said Mr. Rubino, "and we have no jurisdiction over them."

"I shall go very carefully and legally," said Mr. Osborne. "If you are entitled to anything I have not a doubt that you will get it."

LOOKING FOR FOYE'S LOOT.

Attachment Writs Served on Waldorf-Astoria and Banks.

Writs of attachment signed by Justices Seabury and Blanchard in the Supreme Court authorized Sheriff Harburger yesterday to seize any property he might find belonging to James Edward Foye, the $75 a month clerk of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, who stole and forged $300,000 worth of stock certificates of the General Electric Company. The writs were applied for by the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia, which is to begin an action in the Supreme Court against Foye for the recovery of $137,000, and by Charles T. Brown & Co., who will bring an action to recover from Foye $107,000.

The applications declare that Foye is about to dispose of the property in his possession and to secrete it with intent to defraud his creditors. Upon the writs the Sheriff has recovered $40,325 worth of property at the Knickerbocker Trust Company. Papers were served on the Waldorf-Astoria and on the Harriman Bank, but no property was seized at either of these two places.

When Foye was arrested there was found in his possession a certified check on the Corn Exchange National Bank for $97,000 and $5,200 in cash. This was taken by the propery clerk at Police Headquarters, upon whom a writ of attachment was also served. Up to the present time property valued at $142,525, alleged to have been part of Foye's thefts, has been recovered.

Attorneys for the Corn Exchange Bank are Davis, Auerbach & Cornell and for Charles T. Brown are Everett, Clarke & Benedict. At one time Foye was stenographer and private secretary to the late Stephen V. White. He left Mr. White's employ early in 1902 to take a position with the firm of Harris, Gates & Co. When this firm went out of business in 1904 Foye became a member of the Consolidated Exchange.

Foye is described by many who knew him during these obscure periods of his life as intelligent, industrious, reliable, and with a quiet and genial manner. He was also known to be restless and ambitious.

PRESS CLUB SNUBS SULZER.

Milwaukee Organization Declines to Let Him Address It.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 28.—Ex-Gov. Sulzer was not a guest of the Milwaukee Press Club this afternoon, although when James Garrison, his advance man, left Milwaukee last night he supposed that he had arranged to have Sulzer tell the Milwaukee newspaper men his own version of the newspaper handling of his impeachment.

The Board of Governors decided that if Sulzer had won his impeachment trial he might have been considered of sufficient importance to be received by the club, but that as a public official removed from office he was not of sufficient consequence to be an honored guest of the club. In other words, the club trustees decided not to overrule the verdict of the New York Legislature.

What hurts Sulzer's friends, however, is that he is barred by this action from being a guest of the club which has tendered receptions to pugilists, including Jack Johnson, as well as to such notables as Taft and Roosevelt.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR REALTY COMPANY

New York Real Estate Security Company Holds $16,000,000 Worth of Real Estate.

MANY BONDS OUTSTANDING

Interest on $3,000,000 at 6 Per Cent. Falls Due on Jan. 1—Fine Apartments Didn't Pay.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against the New York Real Estate Security Company, which owns equities in about $16,000,000 worth of real estate on Manhattan Island, chiefly apartment houses. Ho many dealers the action was not entirely unexpected, as there have been rumors for some time that the company, which owns the big office building at 42 Broadway, where its offices are situated, was in financial trouble. Several of the larger brokers, while admitting that the bankruptcy action would undoubtedly have a deterrent effect for the time being upon realty investments in New York City, were optimistic enough to believe that with the settlement of the company's troubles the real estate atmosphere would be considerably clarified and market conditions benefited.

The petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States District Court by Weschler & Kohn, attorneys for three creditors, the Nethul Realty Company, a creditor for $40,660, due on an agreement to purchase bonds; Berry B. Simons for $8,087, due on agreement to purchase bonds, and Hugh McAtamney for a debt of $500. Justice Hough appointed James N. Rosenberg receiver, under a bond of $50,000.

On behalf of the company it was stated that the action was a friendly suit to prevent wholesale foreclosures on its holdings, which include sixty-six parcels, and for which no ready market could be found in the present dull state of the market. There has been great difficulty, it was admitted, in getting mortgages renewed, and the action was also precipitated by the fact that interest on an issue of $3,000,000 worth of bonds fell due on Jan. 1 and there was no money to pay it. These bonds bear interest at 6 per cent. The obligations for the first six months of the year were paid on July 1.

The officers are endeavoring to obtain the consent of the bondholders to waive their claims on the interest payments for six months or a year, and if before Jan. 1 some satisfactory agreement can be made, the company hopes to pull through the dull period and restore its financial credit.

The New York Real Estate Security Company was organized in October, 1908, with a capital of $3,950,000. Its officers are: Thomas B. Hidden, President; W. E. G. Gaillard, Vice President; Legaré Walker, Treasurer; Charles R. McCarthy, Secretary, while the Directors include these officers and C. E. Bateson, C. F. Lenz, O. B. Hill, H. P. Rice, and N. J. Mitchell.

The Company's Statement.

Gustavus A Rogers of Rogers & Rogers, attorneys for the company, in a statement yesterday, called it a temporary embarrassment. He said:

By reason of the non-payment of taxes for the current year many holders of the company's mortgages have threatened to foreclose, and other creditors have threatened action, and in order to conserve the property for the benefit of all the creditors this proceeding was commenced by certain creditors on whose application receivers have been appointed. The company, in view of the conditions existing, decided that it was wise to consent to the appointment of receivers, although it believes the present acute condition of its affairs to be temporary only, and believes that the management of its properties under the direction of the court will conserve the interest of all and prevent precipitate action by individual creditors to the detriment of the creditors at large. The action of the company in consenting to the appointment was arrived at after consultation with the firm of Stetson, Jennings & Russell, representing a number of its general mortgage bonds.

The last annual statement of the company on Jan. 1, 1913, showed assets $14,013,814 and liabilities $9,965,878 exclusive of capital stock and surplus, which were $4,052,036. The assets consisted of real estate owned (at cost) $12,828,911; loans and investments, including prepaid charges and first preferred stock in treasury, $919,492; furniture and fixtures, $6,452; sinking fund, accrued interest, rent, &c., $7,678, and cash in banks and trust companies, $175,978.

The liabilities were: mortgages on real estate owned, including accrued interest to date, $8,281,208; fifteen-year gold mortgage bonds, including accrued interest to date, $1,563,896; other liabilities, $21,372; reserves for depreciation and other contingencies, $100,000.

Since this statement was issued the company has announced that its assets have increased $3,000,000 through the purchase of additional property. Among the recent purchases were two six-story apartments on the west side of Broadway from 140th to 141st Street, bought a few months ago from ex-Gov. Levi P. Morton, who, it is said, took $300,000 in bonds.

Foreclosure Started.

A hint of its financial difficulties was given early in the week, when Emily Loevy filed a lis pendens to foreclose a third mortgage on the eleven-story Concord Hall apartment, carrying a plot 100 by 100 on the southeast corner of Riverside Drive and 119th Street, and Charles L. Kingsley was appointed receiver.

The company owns the two-story apartments known as Stadium View and Shore View, from 445 to 449 Riverside Drive, north of 116th Street, nine-story apartments at 218 to 222 and 466 to 472 Riverside Drive, and 385 and 386 Central Park West in addition to a number of six-story houses on the upper west side and in Harlem. There are also four or five parcels in the Bronx.

In the downtown district the company owns the office buildings at 7 Pine Street and 42 Broadway, the latter being its largest individual holding. The building runs through to New Street and is twenty-one stories high. It was purchased on Dec. 31, 1910, at a price given as $7,500,000, but which was actually about $4,925,000. It stands assessed at $4,200,000. In a suit brought at the time by the architect, Henry Ives Cobb, for unpaid architect's fees against the former owners to prevent the transfer, he stated that the cash payment was but $815,000. A first mortgage of $3,000,000 is held by the Equitable Life Assurance Society. Mr. Cobb's suit was settled for cash.

After obtaining the building the New York Real Estate Security Company began to issue bonds. They were made attractive for the small investor by being issued as low as $500, and a large quantity was sold. No statement was made yesterday regarding the number of bondholders or their distribution, although Mr. Gaillard said that he thought most of them were held in the vicinity of New York. The stock of the company was to pay 7 per cent., but no dividend has been paid.

While some of the large apartments owned by the company have been fairly well rented, it was admitted that the rentals had been poor, and it is doubtful if many of the apartment holdings paid 6 per cent. on the investment. Mr. McAtmney, one of the bankruptcy petitioners, said that the high cost of living which has created many vacancies in the higher-priced houses, was one of the indirect causes of the failure to obtain a proper income.

In speaking of the failure and its probable effect, Charles H. Kelsey, President of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, said yesterday:

"I do not think there is anything in this failure to discourage the legitimate investor. I mean by this the man who has a fair equity in his property and does not expect the return to exceed that paid by other first-class investments. The company in question borrowed most of the money on which it operated by the sale of so-called real estate bonds at a high rate of interest. It takes a very skillful operator in these days to manage property in a way that will earn 6 per cent. If there are heavy expenses and commissions paid to agents on the sale of securities it is not to be wondered that New York real estate could not stand the strain."

TO INSPECT OUR RAILROADS.

Sir Guy Granet Will Study Electrification of American Lines.

Sir Guy Granet, General Manager of the Midland Railway of England, arrived on the Lusitania yesterday to see if he could obtain from us any improvements for his line. He said that his observations would be confined to the electrification of railroads for the most part, as his company was very much interested in that method of propulsion. Sir Guy will begin his inspection with a trip over the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

Stevenson Taylor, President of the Fall River Steamboat Company, arrived on the Lusitania.

PHONE HEARING SUSPENDED

Witnesses Say Bell Apparatus Has Been Little Improved Since 1900.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Hearings in the Government anti-trust suit against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company were suspended at the end of to-day's proceedings. The hearing will be resumed in Baltimore on Tuesday.

Engineers representing manufacturers of independent telephone apparatus testified that the improvement in the Bell service since 1900 had been chiefly in increased efficiency of operators. Switchboards virtually are the same as in 1900, according to the witnesses.

W. G. Vivian, Secretary of the Independent Telephone Association, placed in evidence a copy of the by-laws of the association. Clifford Arrick, publicity director of the Chicago Telephone Company, testified that he knew nothing of a pamphlet said to have been circulated among Eastern bankers to the detriment of the financing of independent telephone enterprises.

LOST PROFESSOR A SUICIDE.

Body of A. B. Nichols of Simmons College Found in Concord Woods.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The mystery attending the disappearance on Sept. 9 of Alfred Bull Nichols, Professor of German at Simmons College, was dispelled to-day when the body of a man who had shot himself in the woods near Concord was identified as that of the missing teacher. The body was found yesterday by hunters.

Prof. Nichols had been in ill-health for about a year. On the morning of Sept. 9 he left his home, presumably for Mattocks, Me. He checked his luggage at the North Station, and no further trace of him was found until his body was discovered in the Concord woods.

Prof. Nichols had been connected with Simmons College only a short time. For twelve years he was a member of the Harvard University Faculty. He was not married, and had no near relatives.

DANISH PROPOSAL TO 'SWAP' TERRITORY

Plan to Give Greenland to This Country in Return for the Island of Mindanao.

THEN DEAL WITH GERMANY

Empire, It Is Thought, Might Accept One of Philippine Group in Exchange for Schleswig Provinces.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—From quarters sufficiently authoritative to withstand the inevitable "official denial," news has just reached THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent of an interesting political project which, if carried out, would simultaneously alter the maps of Europe, America, and Asia. It concerns a three-cornered exchange of territory between Germany, Denmark, and the United States.

The most important phase of the proposed "deal" concerns Germany's cession of part of Schleswig-Holstein to its former Danish owners. The transfer, as planned by the distinguished and influential Danes who evolved and formally submitted the scheme to the United States Government, would take place in the following ingenious way.

The United States, in return for Greenland, would give Denmark the Island of Mindanao, one of the most important of the Philippine group. Greenland, it is represented by the Danes, is capable of becoming "a second Alaska."

The arrangement would simultaneously confer Denmark's right to transfer Mindanao to Germany in return for Schleswig, which includes the Danish provinces conquered by Prussia and Austria in 1864.

My information is not clear on this particular point, but evidently the Danish promoters of the transaction have canvassed the situation sufficiently to think that Germany might regard an extensive foothold in the Philippine Islands as a quid pro quo for the surrender of the Danish sections of Schleswig-Holstein.

Germany might welcome a larger place in the Far Eastern sun than her present base at Kiau-chow, but it is a grave question if she would regard Mindanao as adequate compensation for a territory bought, like Alsace-Lorraine, with German lives.

AMUSES WASHINGTON.

Skeptical Smiles Greet Story of Mindanao Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Skeptical smiles to-night greeted the rumor that Denmark was trying to get the Prussian province of Schleswig in exchange for the American island of Mindanao, provided the United States would exchange the island for Greenland.

The Administration has just pledged itself to the independence of the Philippines, so that the first step in the transaction, involving the permanent transfer of one of the largest of the group to a foreign power, is almost inconceivable.

But from a German point of view those here in a position to know consider the proposed exchange equally impossible. Two bloody wars have been fought for the possession of the Duchy of Schleswig-Holstein, the Duchy is essentially German, and the German Empress is a Schleswig Princess. Still more significant is the fact that the cession of Schleswig would bring the Danish frontier within ten miles of the great Kiel canal, connecting Germany's great naval base at Kiel with the mouth of the Elbe River and the North Sea.

IS LIKELY TO EXHIBIT.

Belief That German Government Will Give Way Regarding Fair.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—It is pretty certain that all parties in the Reichstag will seek to move the Government to recede from its present position with regard to the San Francisco Exhibition.

The matter was a subject of active negotiation among the parties this afternoon, and rumors are persistent that the Government will finally consent to an arrangement by which a vote for expenses will be laid before the House as a supplementary estimate.

Should the Government thus give way it will be a great victory for Herr Ballin, the Director General of the Hamburg-American Line.

FRIAS RETURNS TO CUBA.

Government Will Guard Alleged Perjurer Against Enemies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 28.—José Antonio Frias, who is under $10,000 bonds to return to New York to answer to charges of perjury and forgery of documents in the name of Hugh J. Reilly, the New York, Havana and Cienfuegos contractor, arrived here to-night from Florida. He says he is going to Cienfuegos to visit his father.

The Cuban Government will probably take special measures to insure Frias's safety while he is in Cienfuegos, as great animosity is felt against him on account of his alleged complicity in the killing of Congressman Villuendas several years ago. Until now, Frias has not visited Cuba since that event.

KIEFF IN BAD REPUTE.

Unable to Float a Loan Owing to the Effects of the Beilis Case.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 29.—A Daily Mail dispatch from Odessa says that the Mayor of Kieff, who, with two members of the Kieff Municipal Council has returned from England, announces the failure of his attempt to float a municipal loan of $7,885,000 in London.

The Mayor informed a representative of the Kievskoe Myssl that his mission had failed owing to the evil repute into which Kieff had fallen on account of the trial of Beilis on the "ritual murder" charge.

DUEL OVER STENOGRAPHER.

Lawyer Boxes Ears of Officer He Finds with Girl—No One Hurt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—The perils of entertaining somebody else's pretty stenographer were illustrated in court-martial proceedings in Berlin yesterday.

A few weeks ago a typist employed by a lawyer was discovered at a well-known restaurant in the company of a Lieutenant, an attaché of the Army Engineers' Academy.

When the lawyer recognized the young woman he strode up to the Lieutenant to chastise him for showing her such conspicuous attentions.

In the course of the dispute the lawyer boxed the officer's ears, and the Lieutenant, in accordance with the code of his caste, retorted by demanding the other's card with a view to a duel, which took place next day in the Grunewald Forest, on the outskirts of Berlin.

Although arranged under the usual "deadly" conditions—an exchange of three shots at fifteen paces—the combat ended without bloodshed.

At yesterday's court-martial the only defendant was the junior Lieutenant, who had carried his comrade's card to the lawyer. In view of the fact that the insult which caused the duel was a grave one, the court imposed the minimum punishment of one day's detention in a fortress.

WASHINGTON LETTER IS SOLD FOR $900

Unpublished Holograph Document Refers to First Attack of Madness of George III.

BURNS MSS. IN DEMAND

Collection Brings $1,250—High Prices Realized at Sotheby's for Japanese Color Prints.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—One of the most important holograph letters of George Washington ever offered for sale in Great Britain was bought by Stevens & Brown at Sotheby's to-day for $900. It is three pages quarto, is dated "Mount Vernon, Feb. 5, 1789," and is addressed to Samuel Powell. In it Washington refers to George III's first attack of madness, saying "Be the cause of the British King's insanity what it may, his situation (if alive) merits commisseration. Better, perhaps, would it have been for his nation, though not for ours (under present prospect) if the event had happened at the time." It was written the day after Washington was elected the first President of the United States, and is said to be entirely unpublished.

An important collection of letters and manuscripts by or referring to Robert Burns, &c., went to J. B. Rown for $1,250.

A series of five long and gossipy letters addressed by Mary W. Shelley, the second wife of the poet, Percy B. Shelley, to Leigh Hunt and his wife, brought $275.

The original war letters of John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough, to George I, relative to the Spanish Succession, sold for $600.

The original patent, signed "Carol," by the Emperor Charles V, doubling the pension granted by him to the painter, Titian, dated June 10, 1548, brought $160.

Woollscot gave $625 for a folio letter, Dec. 30, 1591, of Sir Walter Raleigh to Sir John Gilbert, his half brother. It refers to an equipment of a squadron, mainly fitted out at Raleigh's expense in 1592. He thanks Gilbert on behalf of Queen Elizabeth for his care in her service. Six months after this letter was written, Raleigh was committed to the Tower of London for carrying on an intrigue with Elizabeth Throgmorton, one of the Queen's maids of honor (whom he eventually married) while professing a lover-like devotion to the Queen.

Jaggard paid $925 for two indentures signed by Henry Fielding, the novelist, his brother and sisters, relative to the family estates dated February, 1737.

The day's total amounted to $10,640.

The sale at Sotheby's of Japanese color prints was ended this afternoon. To-day's session realized $4,460.

A half-length portrait of Ichikawa Monnosuke the Second, signed by Toshiusai Sharaku, brought $245.

Another half-length portrait by the same artist of Bando Hikosaburo sold for $370.

Half-length portraits of Arashi Riuzo and of Sakalya Shukaku, both by Sharaku, were knocked down for respectively $235 and $250.

A lock of George Washington's hair, which is said to have been cut from his head after he was placed in his coffin, brought $100 in a sale yesterday by the George H. Richmond Company, 19 East Forty-fifth Street. It was accompanied by a letter of Lewis S. Coryell, dated New Hope, Nov. 24, 1845, and addressed to Samuel R. Brooks of this city. Coryell in the letter says that his uncle, George Coryell, "one of the 6 who laid the General in his vault, cut the lock of hair from the head, so that there can be no 2d hand in the business." There was also a statement signed by Lewis S. Coryell that "these six were the officers of the Masonic Lodge to which the General belonged."

PANAMA, Nov. 28.—Slides at Cucaracha continue to bother the dredges. The last, which occurred two nights ago, set in motion 150,000 cubic yards of material, one-third of which entered the canal channel.

Six steam shovels are operating on the upper levels of the slides at Culebra to reduce the pressure, and will continue till Dec. 15. Four others are working on the east bank, and will continue indefinitely.

SKIPPER WINS; NAVY LOSES.

British Attorney General Intervenes to Stop Suit for Damages.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The grizzled skipper of a fishing smack, who might have stepped out of one of W. W. Jacobs's novels, has emerged triumphant from a conflict with the Admiralty. The battle was not fought at sea, but in Lord Chief Justice Isaacs's court.

Capt. George Walton, master of the trawler Explorator, sued officers of the gunboat Tennyson for damages for alleged trespass on the Explorator and for false imprisonment.

The case occupied two days, causing no little merriment, and came to an unexpected end to-day by the intervention of Attorney General Simon on behalf of the Crown.

The skipper charged that while his boat was in the harbor of Lerwick the Commander of the Tennyson put aboard Lieut. Higgins, who took charge of the Explorator, removed her to a dangerous anchorage, and detained Walton two hours. The defendants pleaded that they had acted under instructions from the Harbor Master.

Attorney General Simon said that he had read about the suit in the newspapers, and intervened because the public interest involved was far above the private interests concerned. He added that he had arranged a settlement, and that the Crown and not the defendants should pay the damages the skipper had sustained, the object being to promote renewed good feeling—if possible, even better feeling—between the fishermen and the Admiralty.

Lord Chief Justice Isaacs said that the worst that could be said about the defendants was not a serious charge against young navy officers, and that they had perhaps been unduly impressed with the importance of being officers of the navy.

POSTUM

The relief is likely to be so marked; the change so pleasant and easy, that Postum is sure to become the regular table drink instead of coffee.

Postum is a pure food-drink made of wheat and a small percentage of New Orleans molasses. It is absolutely free from the drug, "caffeine," found in coffee, or any other injurious substance.

Postum now comes in two forms,

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolved in a cup of hot water, with the addition of cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly.

WIRELESS AND CABLE TO THE TIMES

ENGLISH TONGUE TOPIC OF EDUCATORS

Sir Walter Raleigh Objects to Cast-Iron System Affected by Pedants.

REVOLT IN UNITED STATES

Dr. Maxwell Criticises High School Teaching—Fines for Faulty Speech in the West.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Sir Walter Raleigh, presiding at the meeting of the Academic Committee of the Royal Society of Literature, at which the Edmond de Polignac prize of £100 ($500) was awarded to James Stephens for his "Crock of Gold," said that in a recent manifesto, largely inspired by the Poet Laureate, were set forth the possibilities for a movement for pure English.

As he read the manifesto, Sir Walter said, he saw that what the movement meant by pure English was what some persons would hastily call impure English. What had to be battled with to-day was not ignorance, or dialect, or the native vigor and self-expression of a man, but the cast-iron, half-educated system of those who had newly learned to read, or, worse than that, of those who had newly learned to teach that pedantry, quite unknown in English literature of old, which had become almost the rule with a large circle of readers.

HIGH SCHOOL ENGLISH POOR.

Dr. Maxwell Outlines His Idea of a Proper Course for Pupils.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 28.—Supt. of Schools William H. Maxwell of New York aroused the interest of the convention of college Presidents, school teachers and Principals in the State Board of Education Building to-day by expressing the view that in the high schools insufficient attention was paid to the teaching of English. This was coupled with the further statement that in order to teach English properly it was not necessary to devote five periods a week for four years.

He said that teachers other than those of English could be of material assistance if they would insist that in their classrooms nothing but the best of English be spoken. This could be done just as well in the room where Latin was taught as in any other room.

"The American schools," he declared, "spend four times as much money as do the English, Scotch, and Irish schools. Do you get any better writing from your American student? Not at all! You are compelling the students to write daily themes whether they have anything to say or not. You can only get good writing when the writer has something to say.

"Another thing I do not believe—that it is necessary to force the high school students to read classical English literature. To compel them when they are not ready for this kind of reading only disgusts them."

In outlining his idea of a high school course Supt. Maxwell said he would include geometry, not so much for what it taught the student as because it was the best possible training to lead up to proper reading. He would teach the rudiments of geography, biology, physics, and chemistry, and only the great events of history. In addition to these subjects, he would pick out two to run through the entire course upon which close work should be done. This choice might be between Latin or Greek and two of the modern languages and the sciences.

FINES FOR FAULTY SPEECH.

Educator Suggests a Society to Prevent Cruelty to Words.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Joseph Jastrow of the University of Wisconsin, speaking here to-day before the National Council of Teachers of English, told of an experiment in assessing fines for the use of fifty objectionable expressions in ordinary conversation. The fines were graduated from 1 cent to $1, as each offense appealed to the indignation of the hearer. The judges, sixty-eight in number, were chosen, half from the territory east of the Alleghanies and half from the rest of the country. Among them were college professors, newspaper editors, and readers for prominent publishing houses.

An average fine of nearly 43 cents for each offense was the outcome. Prof. Jastrow suggested that the revenues from enforcement of the fines against violations of good English would make a substantial fund to be distributed in prizes by a society for the prevention of cruelty to English speech.

F. N. Scott of the University of Michigan, whose topic was "The Undefined Gate," asked: "Of what use is it to drill pupils in grammar, to sweat over compositions, to spend month after month in the reading and study of English masterpieces, if steadily, day by day, some powerful disintegrating agency nullifies all that we have accomplished?"

Not even the Bible, Prof. Scott said, could now compete with the daily newspaper as the most powerful and most pervasive influence of our day and nation. Accordingly Prof. Scott urged that the language as well as the spirit of the newspaper should be the equal of that required of any other daily visitor to the daily circle.

Moving pictures were blamed by Percival Chubb of St. Louis as one of the direct influences in debasing the language. He urged a return to the use of all the senses. Culture, he said, was becoming increasingly eye-minded, and he urged the development of ear-mindedness, making auditory sensitiveness and responsiveness the touchstone of good usage.

PRAISES NEWSPAPER STYLE.

Becoming More Essential to Writers' Equipment, Says Prof. Beckman.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 28.—"The newspaper style, which is becoming more and more essential in the equipment of every successful writer, is the clearest, most concise, and most interesting style in which things can be written," said Prof. F. W. Beckman of the Department of Journalism of Iowa State College to-day, in addressing the American Conference of Teachers of Journalism.

"The news sense, the ability to see what is new and its new meaning to the great mass of humanity, is necessary to men in every field of endeavor, but especially to men who write.

"It is the news sense which enables the writer to see through a mass of non-essentials to the essential, through dead rubbish to living facts, through husks and shells to the kernels of truth. It is the news sense that gives the writer understanding of and sympathy with common activities of men so that he can find what will interest them."

LAW AND CARSON IN DUBLIN.

Suffragettes Try to Reach the Unionist Leader and Are Arrested.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—The Unionist Party to-day carried the war into the enemy's territory, Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons; Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Unionists, and other prominent men arriving here to deliver in the Irish capital a series of speeches on Home Rule.

In reply to a deputation which welcomed him, Mr. Bonar Law reiterated that the Unionists had opposed consistently and completely the whole idea of the separation of Ireland from the United Kingdom, and insisted that the Government must seek the sanction of the people before attempting to make the change.

'SUFFRAGE MARTYR' SAID TO BE ALIVE

Votes for Women Is Asking for Funds for a Monument to William Bethell.

FORMER TACTICS REVIVED

Militant Padlocks Herself to a Chair and Interrupts a Meeting—Miss Forbes-Robertson Freed.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 29.—The Daily Mail gives prominence to a story entitled "A Suffragette Martyr."

The pathetic narrative in The Mail is inspired by one told in Votes for Women. It is of the sad death of a "young suffragist martyr," William Bethell, aged 19, who, it is alleged, died from injuries received while being forcibly ejected from a meeting addressed by Dr. Macnamara at Camberwell. Subscriptions are asked to raise a worthy memorial over his grave.

Unfortunately, according to The Daily Mail, despite the wide publicity given to the case, the most exhaustive inquiries have failed to discover whether Bethell died, who saw him die, who certified to his death, and where he is buried. Bethell's father, moreover, is convinced that his son is alive and well with his wife and two children in Canada.

Votes for Women recorded with the deepest regret the death of William Bethell, heading the paragraph: "Death Cannot Kill What Cannot Die," and adding in a later issue, "It is of the utmost importance that the facts be sifted to the bottom."

The Mail has now investigated, with the result that it announces that there is no evidence of the death of the "suffragist martyr," William Bethell, beyond the word of an unknown young man, who told William's brother that he had died under the circumstances related in Votes for Women.

Scotland Yard has been communicated with and Coroners have searched the records of deaths, but have found no trace of Bethell.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Militant suffragettes are returning to their old tactics. One of them fastened herself to a chair in Caxton Hall to-night with a chain and padlock and shrieked "Votes for Women!"

The Right Hon. Joseph Albert Pease was forced to suspend his speech for several minutes while the stewards endeavored to remove the suffragette. They had to smash the chair before this could be done.

Two suffragettes, who resolutely refused to give their names, were committed for trial at Leeds to-day on a charge of arson. Both complained to the Magistrate of the cruelty of the doctors and male warders in an attempt to overcome their resistance to having their fingerprints taken. The Magistrate promised to refer the matter to the Home Office.

BIRMINGHAM, Nov. 28.—Miss Forbes-Robertson, sister of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, the actor-manager, has been released from prison.

She was sentenced on Nov. 24 to a term of two weeks on a charge of smashing a window on the occasion of Premier Asquith's visit to Birmingham in July and immediately went on a hunger strike. Her condition became such that her release was considered advisable.

Some Important Announcements for 1914

Theodore Roosevelt in South America

He will contribute to Scribner's Magazine the account of his trip of adventure and research into the Paraguayan and Brazilian interiors, through the great tropical forests which so few white men have ever traversed.

From the New York Sun:

COLONEL ROOSEVELT IN HIS MOST ATTRACTIVE RÔLE

No living American can be better qualified to explore the wilds of South America and to describe its flora and fauna and its savage and tremendous scenery with a sympathetic and kindling interest than Theodore Roosevelt.

A Famous Writer's First Long Novel

Early in the year the Magazine hopes to begin the first long novel by an American author whose work has been not only of the first rank but based upon a deep and unfailing optimism. His short stories and poems are among the best known wherever the English language is read, and his first novel will be awaited with uncommon interest.

By Madame Waddington

A new series of articles—"My First Years as a Frenchwoman, 1876-9." The political and social aspects of these years, important personages of the times in diplomacy, literature, and art, the people met at state functions, dinners, balls, the opera, the theatres, are commented upon in the author's own inimitable and delightful way.

Articles by Price Collier

The late Price Collier, author of "England and the English from an American Point of View," "Germany and the Germans from an American Point of View," etc., had completed several of his projected articles on the SCANDINAVIAN countries. These are expected to appear in the Magazine during the coming year.

By Richard Harding Davis

"Breaking into the Movies." Some of the excitement and humor of staging a great moving picture play.

Short Stories

A Short Serial: Maje

A Love Story by Armistead C. Gordon. A tender idyllic story of the old South.

GENERAL ELECTRIC STRIKE SETTLED

Compromise Agreement to be Signed To-day and Entire Force to Return Monday.

PART-TIME WORK FOR ALL

Dujay and Miss Leslie to be Transferred—Strike of Trolley Employes Averted.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Although no definite announcement was made to-night at the termination of a conference of General Electric officials, the strike committee, and Mayor Lunn, it was learned that an agreement had been reached for the settlement of the General Electric strike which had been in progress all week.

The conferees adjourned until 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, when it is expected the agreement in proper form will be signed, in which case the 14,000 strikers will return to work next Monday morning. It is known that the plan will be adopted of taking all employes back on part time instead of allowing some to work the full number of hours and others to be laid off altogether, an arrangement to which the employers objected. Frank Dujay and Miss Leslie, whose lay-off caused the strike, will have employment, but not in the same departments as before. They will have work, however, that will allow them to earn the same wages as before.

By this compromise neither company nor strikers can claim a victory. The conference started early this morning, and after an hour and a half adjourned until 3:30 o'clock. From that time until 8 o'clock the committee and officials were closeted in Mayor Lunn's office.

No Change in Management.

After this morning's conference General Manager G. E. Emmons of the company issued this statement:

In view of current reports which seem to have been widely accepted by the employes of the General Electric Company to the effect that the management of other works has influenced the situation in Schenectady, even to the extent of a contemplated change of management and policy of the company, I desire to say that all such rumors have been, and are, unqualifiedly false and absolutely without foundation.

On the contrary, I have recently received marked evidence that my policy during the eighteen years that I have had full charge of the Schenectady works has received the most cordial and complete indorsement of the Chairman, President, and Directors of this company. It will be my constant endeavor to deal with all differences which may arise with the same consideration and spirit of fairness by, which I have been guided in the past.

Mr. Emmons announced that W. C. Fish, Manager of the Lynn, Mass., plant, would not become Manager of the local factory. Mr. Emmons said he would remain in charge at Schenectady. The men said that Fish was antagonistic to union labor.

State Mediators Arrive.

William C. Rogers and James McManus of the Board of Mediation and Arbitration of the State Labor Department arrived here to-day to do what they could for the settlement of the strike. They said James M. Lynch, State Labor Commissioner, who was asked by Governor Glynn to endeavor to bring about an amicable settlement, was ready to come to this city should his presence be deemed necessary.

The 14,000 strikers, headed by a drum corps, marched to the works shortly after 1 o'clock, and received their weekly pay, it being the policy of the company to keep one week's wages. There was not the slightest disorder.

Many thought yesterday that a trolley strike was inevitable. The difficulty, however, was satisfactorily adjusted this morning. Until to-day street cars were operated over a loop right into the property of the General Electric Company. Employes who did not walk out could stay in these cars and ride into the plant without coming into contact with the pickets. The traction employes determined yesterday that the trip over the loop should be eliminated, and this morning the cars began to unload their passengers outside the plant. Officials of the traction company consented. Only 200 employes besides the office staff went to work this morning.

DEFENDS SISTINE MADONNA.

Saxon Minister Indignantly Denies That It is a Copy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—"The Sistine Madonna is a genuine Raphael," was the declaration made in stentorian tones in the Saxon Parliament at Dresden to-day by the Saxon Minister of Education, who said that no time must be lost in denying, "before the whole world," a story just put into circulation to the effect that the greatest gem in the Dresden Gallery, before which so many thousands of American picture lovers have worshipped, is only a "copy."

The Minister went on to explain that the story had arisen from a chance remark of his to the effect that the Holbein Madonna in the Dresden Gallery was a 100-year-old copy of the original, which hangs in Darmstadt.

In some unexplained manner the version got abroad that the Minister had pronounced the "Sistine Madonna" to be a copy.

Addressing the House with great feeling, the Minister asserted that he must protest with all emphasis against these irresponsible aspersions on "one of the greatest art treasures of all ages," and against such an affront to the honor of the Dresden Gallery.

JAIL FOR THIS CHAUFFEUR.

Made Zigzags with Auto After Drinking Too Much.

Found guilty of driving an automobile when he had been drinking too much, Charles R. Seyler, a young chauffeur employed by D. Wyatt Aiken of 326 Walton Avenue, Yonkers, was given his choice between $75 fine and thirty days in jail yesterday by Magistrate House in the Harlem Court.

He was also fined $2 or two days on each of two other charges, one that he had failed to display his badge and the other that he had been driving with his front and tail lights out.

Seyler was arrested on Thursday night when he was taking the car down to Delmonico's, where Mr. Aiken was waiting for it. Policemen Gleason and Weis saw the machine zigzagging down Eighth Avenue, commandeered another car and chased Seyler for two miles.

Wilbert Brown of 332 West Forty-seventh Street, a companion of the chauffeur, who tried to prevent the arrest, was fined $10, and, as neither man could pay, both were sent to jail.

Dinner to Joseph S. Marcus.

The Directors of the Hebrew Kindergarten and Day Nursery of 29 Montgomery Street gave a dinner last night in honor of Joseph S. Marcus, President of the Bank of the United States, at Beethoven Hall, Fifth Street near Third Avenue, in recognition of his services on behalf of the institution. Among those present were Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle, Assemblyman Sufrin, Abraham S. Sarssohn, and Judge Otto A. Rosalsky.

Living Owe Duty to Unselfish Dead, His Thanksgiving Thought.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Speaking to an audience of 2,000 at the Thanksgiving celebration to-day of the employes of the Government Printing Office, Secretary Bryan said that people now living owed a duty of thanks not only to God but to men and women long since dead who had labored in the cause of humanity. These thanks, said the Secretary, should take the form of definite service.

"We owe it," said Mr. Bryan, "to those whose labors have enabled us to enjoy our political privileges, our religious ideals, and our educational advantages to so live that we leave the world better than we entered it."

THE GREAT "WANT AD" DIRECTORY

FOR FEDERAL-OWNED RAILWAY IN ALASKA

Bill Reported to House Authorizes $35,000,000 Bond Issue to Build System.

EXPECT WILSON'S SUPPORT

Secretary Lane Outspoken In Approval of the Project—Similar Bill Now Pending in Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—A bill that is expected to have the support of the Wilson Administration, committing the Federal Government to a policy of Government ownership of railroads in Alaska, has been agreed upon by the House Territories Committee as a general substitute for various pending measures dealing with the subject. A similar bill already has been reported to the Senate and will come up for consideration on Dec. 8. The measure will be bitterly fought by opponents of Government activity in spheres of private business.

The bill, which has been favorably submitted to the House, with an elaborate report that was made public today, provides for the construction by the Government of a standard-gauge railroad system in Alaska. The road would connect one or more of the Pacific Ocean harbors on the southern coast of Alaska with the navigable waters in the interior and with coal fields yielding coal sufficient in quantity and quality for naval uses.

The cost of the project is limited to $35,000,000. The bill would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow on the credit of the Government $35,000,000 on a bond issue triannually redeemable in ten years and payable in thirty years, with interest at 3 per cent. annually. The funds so derived would pay the cost of the railroad. In addition, it is proposed to appropriate $1,000,000 directly out of the Federal Treasury to pay the incidental expenses of the project.

Approved by Secretary Lane.

At least one member of President Wilson's Cabinet is strongly on record in favor of a government-owned road. This is Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, which has immediate jurisdiction over Alaskan affairs. The report made public by Representative Houston to-day contained a letter from Secretary Lane, who had been asked for his opinion on a Government road in Alaska.

"I favor the adoption of this policy," said Secretary Lane's letter. "I believe it to be that under which Alaska will develop most safely and most speedily, and under which the resources of that territory will most certainly become available to the whole world.

"There is but one way to make any country a real part of the world—by the construction of railroads into it. This has been the heart of England's policy in Africa, of Russia's policy in Western Asia, and it is the prompting hope of the new movement in China. The policy of governmental ownership of railroads in Alaska seems to me to be the one that will most certainly make for her lasting welfare.

Could Support Millions.

"I have talked with many who know that country well, and I am convinced that we should think of Alaska as a land not only of mines and fisheries, but of towns, farms, mills, and factories, supporting millions of people of the hardiest and most wholesome of the race. If this conception of a possible Alaska is a true one, our legislation should be such as to most surely bring about this possibility, and it seems to me there is less of hazard as to Alaska's future if the Government of the United States owns the railroads which will make its fertile interior valleys accessible from the coast and bring its coal, iron, copper, and other mineral resources within the reach of the world."

"In case of war," says Mr. Houston's report, referring to figures supplied last year by Mr. Meyer, then Secretary of the Navy, "the freight on coal for one year's supply for the Pacific Fleet would amount to $19,200,000—2,400,000 tons at $8 per ton. Suppose the Panama Canal is completed and the freight is reduced one-half, it is still $9,100,000 a year, paid for carrying coal in foreign bottoms with foreign crews from Newport News to the Pacific base, when nearly the whole sum may be saved by the construction of the railroad provided for in this bill."

NEW ROTHSCHILD SUIT.

Thomson Seeks an Accounting from Cotton Brokers.

Richard Thomson, a cotton merchant of Paris, Ontario, has begun suit against the brokerage firm of Morris H. Rothschild & Co. for an accounting. Mr. Thomson says in his complaint that at the solicitation of the firm he opened with them an account on a discretionary or optional basis to trade in cotton. The arrangement lasted from Dec. 1, 1910, until Nov. 30, 1911. He says that the firm never made any statement of the account and paid no attention to repeated demands for it.

Mr. Thomson alleges that the firm owes him about $35,000, but the firm denies this and says that Mr. Thomson is indebted to the concern for $14,000. Mr. Thomson admits that the intention of both sides in the controversy was "merely to gamble" on futures in cotton.

Mr. Thomson said he was told by employes of the firm that accounts were often "bucketed." Robert Louis Hoguet is counsel for Mr. Thomson. He said yesterday that the purpose of the suit was to force Rothschild & Co. to render an accounting in order that his client's standing might be made clear.

Two other suits against Rothschild & Co. also were begun through Lawyer Robert M. Frank by Mrs. Mary C. Peters for $3,000 and Harry E. Samuels for $1,500. These plaintiffs say their money was used "irregularly." All of the suits are similar to the one begun by Louis Cohen on Nov. 19 for a return by the firm of $7,735. Mr. Cohen said in his complaint that his alleged dealings in cotton through the firm "were known and intended by both plaintiff and defendants to be such wagers and bets, made to depend upon chance, casualty, and unknown and contingent events, to wit, the range of quotations on the New York Stock Exchange.

FORESEES A POTATO CORNER

Speculators Buying Up the Country's Crop, Says Irish Official.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—A new phase of the cost of living problem was brought to the attention of the Department of Agriculture to-day. T. P. Gill, Secretary of the Irish Board of Agriculture, told Secretary Houston that speculators in the large cities of the United States were actively buying up this year's short American potato crop and planning to hold out for high prices, counting upon the existing quarantine against potatoes from many foreign countries to aid them in their undertaking.

Mr. Gill is here to urge the removal of the embargo on potatoes from his country. He insists that the powdery scab found on potatoes imported from Ireland is no cause for a quarantine, because a similar blemish already is common in the United States, and says that continuance of the embargo will contribute to the growing cost of living.

Secretary Houston and the Federal Horticultural Board held a conference after Mr. Gill's statement, but no action was announced.

Representative McKellar of Tennessee, author of a pending bill to prohibit the keeping of products in cold storage for more than ninety days, was in conference to-day with Department of Justice officials over the department's investigation of the storage of eggs, poultry, and dairy products. It is said that a preliminary inquiry has revealed that 55 per cent. of the present egg supply held in storage is in the hands of the great meat packers of the country.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—The Canadian Government will shortly create a commission to inquire into the high cost of living, according to an Ottawa dispatch.

The Government, it is said, has had the subject under consideration for some time, and statistical experts of the Labor Department have been making a searching analysis of prices throughout the Dominion, comparing them with those of other countries, especially the United States.

Mrs. Thomas Here for Operation.

Mrs. R. H. Thomas returned on the Lusitania yesterday from England, suffering from appendicitis, and will go to a sanitarium immediately to undergo an operation. She was accompanied by her husband, and said that she intended to return to Paris after the operation.

ROBS OUR CONSUL GENERAL

GENOA, Nov. 28.—While the American Consul General, Dr. John E. Jones, was visiting Rear Admiral Beatty of the United States battleship Connecticut today a thief slipped into his room at a hotel and stole jewelry to the value of $600.

The Consul General has notified the Genoa authorities of his loss.

M'ADOO TO AID BANKS UNDER NEW SYSTEM

Treasury Resources Available if Needed to Comply with Currency Law, He Says.

WILL SUFFER NO HARDSHIPS

Restricting Credits Needless—Glass Answers Vanderlip on Fiat Money—Bill Still in Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Complaints to the effect that the national banks of the country have been restricting credit to the injury of business by refusing to handle commercial paper in usual quantities induced Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury Department to issue a statement late this afternoon, saying there was no ground for apprehension over the requirements of the proposed currency law. The Secretary also offered thirty days' grace for the repayment of deposits granted to banks for crop-moving purposes.

According to the information submitted to Secretary McAdoo, the banks were curtailing credits, based on commercial paper, and advising bankers throughout the country to keep the assets as liquid as possible in order to be able to meet the requirements of the new currency law. Secretary McAdoo asserts in his announcement that if this is the reason for any curtailment of credit the bankers are acting under a wholly mistaken point of view, because the new currency law will impose no hardships on the banks, and the Treasury Department has large available resources which Mr. McAdoo will not hesitate to use for the purpose of aiding the banks to comply with the new currency law. Secretary McAdoo said in part:

"Senator Pomerene to-day sent to the Secretary a letter from a prominent manufacturer in Ohio, in which he says:

> It has, of course, been quite as apparent to you as to those of us who are trying to manufacture and market commodities that during the past Summer and Fall business in all lines has been considerably inconvenienced by the disposition on the part of many bankers to refuse to handle commercial paper in anything near the usual volume when according to all indications idle funds were available.
>
> "A prominent note broker advised the Ohio manufacturer as follows:
>
> The large banks in the large cities have not been buying any paper since March, and have advised their country correspondents to make themselves just as liquid as possible, and stay so, in order to meet the provisions of the bill. In consequence we are absolutely at a standstill.

"The Secretary said that similar complaints had come to him from other parts of the country.

"The Secretary expressed the conviction that the new law will impose no hardships on the banks, and that the transfers of capital and reserves to the proposed Federal reserve banks will be accomplished with little or no inconvenience to the banks and to general business. The Secretary said that the Treasury Department had large available resources at its command; that he should not hesitate to use them for the purpose of aiding the banks to comply with the new law, and that, in his opinion, the banks could with perfect safety proceed with the granting of accommodations to their customers in the normal and usual way.

"The Secretary said that he did not, of course, assume to advise the banks—he only wanted them and the business public to know that there is no ground for apprehension, and that the attitude of the Treasury Department is to be helpful, and that he thought it could be effectively helpful. He said that if any banks are laboring under the impression that the new law will not necessitate or occasion a restriction of credits, they are controlled by error, as no such thing will result.

"The Secretary stated that up to date the banks had called upon the Treasury for only $34,661,000 for crop-moving purposes; that these deposits were, under the arrangements, to be returned in four installments beginning Dec. 15 and ending March 1.

"The Secretary said that he would consider favorably, and upon its merits, the application of any national bank holding crop-moving deposits for a postponement for thirty days of the time for beginning repayments, so that payments may begin on Jan. 15, 1914, instead of on Dec. 15 next, as now provided."

CAUCUS VOTE TO BE BINDING.

Leaders Plan Such Action on Bill—No Republican Caucus.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The caucus of the Democratic Senators, with a sparse attendance, continued to-day its consideration of the Owen-Glass Currency bill. While several matters of importance have so far been passed over, the leaders hope to complete their work by to-morrow night. Enough votes already have been taken to make it practically certain that the bill will not be materially altered from the draft presented to the Senate by the Democratic half of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

No secret was made to-day of the intention of the leaders to pass a resolution making the action of the caucus binding upon all Democrats. But this action will not be important. The mere fact that a caucus reaches a certain decision in itself exerts all the pressure upon a member of the party that a binding resolution exerts. Senators like Mr. Hitchcock of Nebraska and Mr. Lane of Oregon, who have already announced their refusal to abide by caucus action, will persist in their attitude. But even they will vote as nearly as their consciences permit in accord with the will of their party.

The conference defeated a proposal to broaden the redemption features of the bill so that the proposed Treasury notes would be redeemable at the United States Treasury in "lawful money." The committee had recommended that the final redemption be limited strictly to gold, and after a lengthy debate tonight this position was upheld by the conference. The bill as now agreed to permits a note to be redeemable in either gold or "lawful money" at the regional banks, but in gold only at the Treasury.

A change was agreed to making the new Treasury notes acceptable for the payment of customs duties. This was opposed by the committee that drafted the bill on the ground that the customs receipts furnished one certain method of getting gold in time of need for the use of the Treasury.

To prevent the use of positions on the Federal Reserve Board as steppingstones to banking positions where their experience would be of great benefit, the caucus adopted an amendment making a member of the board ineligible for two years to any office connected with a member bank. Though this action does not strike at fundamentals, it is as sweeping as any that the caucus has so far ordered.

The paragraph allowing national banks to act as executors and administrators was referred back to the committee, to be so drawn that it would not conflict with the laws of various States.

The question of the number of regional reserve banks to be created has been left open, and probably will be taken up to-morrow for settlement. The Georgia Senators insist that if the South is to have a regional bank it should be located in Atlanta.

Republican Senators will probably not take up the Currency bill as a party measure. Leaders said that they had no plans for a Republican conference, and that their efforts to amend the bill would be taken up on the floor without regard to any agreement the Democrats may reach.

RAILWAY CASUALTIES UP.

June Quarter Shows Increase Over 1912—Total Killed 2,535.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Interstate Commerce Commission's accident bulletin for the quarter ended June 30, 1913, shows that, as compared with the corresponding quarter of 1912, there was a total increase of 140 in the number of persons killed and of 8,283 in the number injured in railroad accidents in the United States. There was an increase of 124 in the number of train accidents. Defective roadway and defective equipment together caused more than 69 per cent. of all derailments reported, 15.1 per cent. being caused by broken rails.

The total casualties were 2,535 killed and 49,911 injured. The collisions and derailments numbered 3,596. The financial damage caused by the accidents was $3,234,289, a material increase.

Dr. Grenfell Visits Hospital.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, the famous missionary, made two visits to the New York Orthopedic Dispensary and Hospital on East Fifty-ninth Street yesterday, in order to study the methods used in that institution for the correction of various orthopedic deformities, and particularly the treatment of Potts's disease. In the afternoon a special demonstration was given for him in the operating room.

TRUNK LINE COST IS TELEPHONE PUZZLE

"Fair Charge to Consumer," Welch Asserts, Is the Company's Policy.

FIGHT FOR LOWER RATES

Commissioner Decker Asserts That In Fairness a Basis Should Be Found for Variable Rates.

The hearing of complaints against the New York Telephone Company, made by the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, the Globe Realty Company, Harrison B. Weil, and the Postal Telegraph-Cable company, demanding a reduction of rates in apartment houses and for switchboard service in this city, was held before Chairman Decker of the up-State Public Service Commission in the commission's rooms in the Metropolitan Tower yesterday. In an all-day questioning of A. D. Welch, commercial engineer and rate-making expert of the New York Telephone Company, interesting facts were brought out as concerns the unchangeableness of telephone rates in this city in the face of a doubling of business and the methods adopted by the company in apportioning its charges, not to a cost basis, but to a basis which it considered to be "fair and equitable to the public."

Harrison B. Weil, appearing as counsel in his own behalf, conducted the questioning of Mr. Welch. R. H. Overbaugh appeared for the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company and L. J. Batzle for Douglas Robinson and Charles S. Brown. T. C. Blake represented B. G. Faulhaber, A. E. Weslow, and A. F. Koelble a committee from the Washington Heights Taxpayers' Association interested especially in telephone rates for apartment houses. The company was represented by its chief counsel, J. H. Swayze. In the morning Public Service Commissioner Douglas sat with Chairman Decker at the hearing.

Mr. Welch acknowledged on the stand that the New York Telephone Company had a monopoly of the telephone business in the City of New York. In 1906, he said, there were approximately 250,000 telephones in this city. This year the number is more than 500,000. It was pointed out that although the business of the New York Telephone Company has more than doubled, the rates have remained the same. One reason for this, the witness insisted, was the increased cost of obtaining new business. Mr. Welch could not produce the exact figures in relation to this part of the business. The amount, he said, was substantial.

The greater relative growth of the business in this city as compared with Chicago, he thought accounted for the fact that the cost of canvassing for new business in Chicago was a relatively small amount.

The standard of comparison on which the complainants base their demand for a reduction of rates is the scale in force in Chicago, where the charge for equipment is eliminated and the actual cost of telephone service is about 2½ cents a call, or about half the average cost in this city.

Many Private Exchanges.

It was brought out that approximately 48 per cent. of the total number of telephones in this city are in private branch exchange systems, the minimum charge for which is $204. This amount, according to Mr. Weil, is arrived at by making a charge of $36 for the switchboard, $48 for the two trunk lines, $12 for two extensions, and $108 for service, allowing 3,600 calls a year. This makes the average cost a call a little less than six cents in New York. Additional calls are paid for at the rate of $3 a hundred.

Mr. Weil prepared to show that the charge of $6 for each extension set was exorbitant, by bringing out that the Western Electric Company, the manufacturing company controlled by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, sold the extension desk sets to the public for $2.57, that they last on the average ten years each, and that on that basis, allowing 6 per cent. interest on the stock of the company and a little more than 5 per cent. on its bonds, the cost of the article to the company could not be more than $3.34, or about 35 cents a year for ten years. Mr. Welch said he refused to accept those figures, although he was not prepared to testify what actually was the cost a year of a telephone desk set to his company. He was not prepared, he said, to testify as to the cost to the company of the trunk wires between the telephone and the central exchange.

"Isn't it true that when you charge $30 for an auxiliary line it means $6 for the extension and $24 for the trunk line?" asked Mr. Weil. "Isn't that the basis on which you make your charge?"

"No," replied the witness. "It is made up on the basis of a fair charge to the consumer."

There was some laughter at the reply.

"Now, you and I know perfectly well," interrupted Chairman Decker, "that if I were to have a second trunk line put into my office the company would charge me $24 for it, and $6 a set for each additional extension."

"Yes," replied the witness, "but the fact that there happens to be a similar charge for a private branch exchange just happens to work out consistently with that. The $30 charge is not arrived at on a basis of cost. It is made $30 because it has to be consistent, that's all."

"So that it is a fact that whether the charges are high or low, they have to be consistent?" asked Mr. Weil.

"I suppose they must," replied the witness.

"Isn't that arriving at rates by means of a process of mental aviation?" asked Mr. Weil. The witness and the counsel for the telephone company smiled.

"Now, aside from the company's general principles of generous consideration of the public," insisted Mr. Weil, "how is that figure of $30 arrived at?"

Rate Fixed by Judgment.

"It's a matter of judgment, not of specific cost," persisted Mr. Welch.

"So that's another instance of the company's doing business by instinctive judgment?"

"Yes. The same procedure of apportioning charges on that basis is employed by gas and railroad companies," insisted the witness.

"Yes," replied Mr. Weil, "and gas and railroad rates have been reduced, and probably these will now be reduced, too."

Mr. Welch acknowledged that it did not cost much to put in a second wire with a new extension, but that the company's charges for this were just the same as for the first.

"Why?" asked Mr. Weil.

"We know why," replied the witness.

"Another instinctive intuition?" insisted the lawyer.

"The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that the reasonableness of an individual rate cannot be determined in and of itself," parried the witness. "It must be taken into consideration with other charges."

Chairman Decker cautioned the witness to leave legal citations for the lawyers in their argument.

"Simple arithmetic is not applicable to such rate charges," said Mr. Welch. "If it were, some subscribers would have to pay $15 and some $50, and no two would be paying alike."

Pressed by Mr. Weil to tell, as a result of his twelve years' experience with the telephone company, how its charge of $24 for a trunk wire was arrived at, the witness said he was unable to do so except to say that it was "made to fit in with the general scale of rates."

"Is it true that you charge $30 in New York City for the same switchboard equipment that you charge $12 for up-State?" asked Mr. Weil.

There was no reply to this question.

Chairman Decker's Suggestions.

Chairman Decker brought out that on the basis of the same $24 charge for each of two trunk wires, the same installation as to trunks could at present be amplified by telephone extensions indefinitely to the limits of the trunk in use. He suggested to counsel for the complainants as well as for the company the need of finding a basis for variable rates to meet the variable number of telephone extensions which at present have the same message use.

It would seem, he said, that the private subscriber who uses only 600 calls should not pay as much as one who uses a much larger number, or that the larger users should not have to pay only as much as the smaller, but that there should be some method of apportioning the charge to the cost to the company.

Mr. Weil brought out that the telephone company estimated its depreciation account in the State as from 6½ to 7 per cent., on the basis of the cost of the depreciable property, and a little less than 6 per cent. in this city, where the depreciation was slight, owing to the large amount of subterranean installation. But the depreciation account for the city, Mr. Welch thought, had not been separated from that for the State.

The hearing will be continued on Dec. 22, when also will be heard further argument on the elimination of interborough tolls and the establishment of a minimum city rate.

DIVORCE DETECTIVE SUES.

George Schlegel Says Bill for "Pip's" Auto Is Illegal.

George Schlegel, a wealthy lithographer, of Seventy-third Street and Ridge Boulevard, Bay Ridge, who obtained a divorce from his wife, Gertrude, two years ago, has been sued by Benjamin I. Colvin, a private detective, for $5,986, the balance of a bill of $11,751. Colvin asked Justice Maddox in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, for an order directing Schlegel to submit to an examination before trial. Decision was reserved.

A bill of particulars filed in the action contains items of expenses which the detective says he paid while working for Schlegel in the divorce action. The corespondent named by Schlegel was known as "Pip" Peris of New Jersey. The detective, in his bill, calls a series of items in which Peris figures, "affairs of the automobile." The items are:

Paid for car	$400.00
Paid for Jersey	7.00
Repair bill when "Pip" smashed car	80.84
Gasoline and sundries for Westwood trip	34.35
Two months garage charges	20.00
Repairs to put car in condition to sell	45.00
Five months' dead storage	25.00
Total	$612.19

Another item in this series says that half of this bill was "met by Pip."

After Schlegel began his suit against his wife, Mrs. Sarah Peris brought an action against Mrs. Schlegel for alienating her husband's affections. Part of the detective's bill includes items of expenses he said he paid to Mrs. Peris in her alienation suit. One item reads: "Paid Sarah P. for bringing the action, $200." Another reads: "Paid to Sarah P. for withdrawing the suit $50." The detective says he paid $100 to "Alice, sister of Sarah P., for supporting suit." Other items are for the payment of lawyers' fees in this action.

Schlegel, through his attorney, made a general denial of the charges and says the detective's bill is "illegal and void as being contrary to good morals and public policy."

DIED TO SPARE HIS WIFE.

Man Who Took Bichloride by Mistake Didn't Let Her Know It.

William Northrup, a clothing manufacturer of 44 East Fourteenth Street, died of bichloride of mercury poisoning yesterday morning in Harlem Hospital. When on Tuesday night he was awakened by pain he guessed that he had taken a mercury tablet by mistake for the quinine he had meant to take at bedtime, but, fearing to distress Mrs. Northrup, he said nothing and waited until morning. Then, after breakfast, he started off as if for business from his home, at 120 West 131st Street, but, once around the corner he ran to the hospital. It was this delay which made the action of the poison fatal, although the dose taken had been small.

Charles J. McManus of 136 West Sixty-third Street is gravely ill of the same poison at Bellevue Hospital. Lovesick and melancholy, he swallowed bichloride tablets, and his mother found him writhing on the floor early yesterday afternoon. He is a prisoner, charged with attempted suicide.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 28.—Frederick J. Lindabury, who lived with his brother, Theodore, on Cherry Street, this city, is in the Memorial Hospital here suffering from the effects of bichloride of mercury tablets. Yesterday afternoon he took from a shelf in a closet what he supposed was a bottle of headache medicine. Instead of that the bottle contained bichloride of mercury tablets.

BOARD OF HEALTH HAS NEW BUREAUS

Reorganization Made Necessary by More Work and Increase of Employes.

SEVERAL DIVISIONS RAISED

Will Be Made Bureaus, Having Grown to Places of Importance in the City's Welfare.

Health Commissioner Ernst J. Lederle announced yesterday the practical reorganization of the Health Department methods of conducting business. The changes are the most important that have occurred in the department for years and they were made necessary because of the growth of the department and the extension of its work. The Commissioner said that the rapid expansion of the department and the great increase in the number of employes had made necessary the creation of several new divisions. Some of these have grown from small beginnings until they are now of the first importance.

The changes announced yesterday were made possible by resolution adopted at a meeting of the Board of Health some weeks ago. The raising to the rank of bureaus of several branches formerly organized as divisions makes them coordinate with the Sanitary Bureau and the Bureau of Records, which have existed for several years.

The following are the bureaus through which the department will carry on its activities: The Bureau of General Administration, under Eugene W. Scheffer; the Sanitary Bureau, under the Sanitary Superintendent; the Bureau of Infectious Diseases, under Dr. John S. Billings; the Bureau of Child Hygiene, under Dr. S. Josephine Baker; Bureau of Hospitals, under Dr. Robert J. Wilson, Superintendent of Hospitals; Bureau of Laboratories, under Dr. William H. Park; Bureau of Food Inspection, under Dr. Marion B. McMillan, and the Bureau of Records, under Dr. William Guilfoy, Registrar of Records.

The Bureau of Administration was originally created in January, 1912, and it has been under the supervision of the Secretary of the board. It has included the offices of the Chief Clerk and the Assistant Chief Clerks in the several boroughs, the Law Clerk, and since July, 1912, the office of the Filing Clerk. Now the bureau will include two new divisions, one to be known as the Division of Supplies and the other the Division of Audits and Accounts. These divisions will be developed under the direction of the Secretary from the employes now under the Chief Clerk. The two divisions will continue the work now performed in the Chief Clerk's office.

James McC. Miller, Chief Clerk, has been assigned to duty as head of the Division of Supplies, and charged with the duties of superintending the purchase of all departmental supplies, the supervision and care of all buildings and offices, with the exception of those belonging to the hosnital service; the preparation of plans and extensions and repairs to buildings, and the sale of laboratory products.

Louis C. Connolly, examiner, has been made head of the Division of Audit and Accounts. He is charged with the responsibility of the auditing and accounting work of the department and with the supervision of bookkeepers and other employes detailed to accounts and auditing.

The Bureau of Infectious Diseases will now include the divisions of contagious diseases, tuberculosis, venereal, and veterinary diseases, institution inspection, typhoid fever, nurses, and the diagnosis laboratory.

The Bureau of Child Hygiene will comprise the following divisions: Midwife and foundling inspection, institutions and day nurseries, school of medical inspection, employment certificates, infants' milk stations, and children's clinics.

The Bureau of Food Inspection will comprise these divisions: Meat, fish, vegetables, and drug inspection, city and county milk inspection, and the Pasteurizing plants.

The chief executives of the several bureaus will be required to report directly to the Commissioner of Health. They will be held responsible for the conduct of the work and the efficiency of the employes under their supervision.

Sultan's Claim Denied by Court.

The Appellate Division dismissed the appeal yesterday of the Sultan of Turkey from an order denying his Consul General in New York letters of administration on the estate of Hovannee Tavshanjian, an Armenian rug dealer, who was assassinated in 1907. The Sultan claimed the estate on the ground that Tavshanjian's mother, who would have received his property had she lived, had died in Constantinople, and that by Turkish law the money reverted to the crown. The estate, amounting to more than $10,000, was claimed by cousins of Tavshanjian in this city. The Appellate Division announced that the Sultan's representative would have permission to amend his complaint on payment of costs.

Cookery is an Art

Cookery is probably the most ancient art in the world.

From the legend of Eden to the present day, people have had to eat.

And so highly has the culinary art been esteemed in past epochs that chefs have been knighted for a pudding and raised to the highest eminence for a sauce.

The Claridge seeks neither knighthood nor political advancement, but only that appreciation which is the right and due of culinary competence.

It is well that you should know where good cooking is to be found.

RADIO TRIAL RESUMED.

New Foreman Selected for Jury in Trial of Stock Promoters.

It was necessary to begin over again yesterday the trial of James Dunlop Smith, Lee De Forest, Samuel E. Darby, and Elmer E. Burlingame before Judge Hunt and a jury in the Federal District Court for the misuse of the mails in connection with the Radio Telephone Company and its stockselling agency, the Fiscal Agency Company. The trial was halted on Wednesday, its first day, when the foreman of the jury was called away on account of illness at his home. Yesterday a new foreman, McCloud McKesson, was sworn in and Assistant District Attorney Stephenson outlined the Government's case.

Randall T. Ivory, a Director of the Radio Telephone Company, was recalled as a witness and the testimony which he had given on Wednesday was read over by the stenographer. When this was completed Mr. Stephenson continued his examination. The Government contends that Ivory was nothing but a dummy on the board of the wireless company and that he left the real direction of affairs to the defendants.

While he was testifying, documentary evidence on which the Government founds its case, and which included letters, account books, and circulars belonging to the Radio Telephone Company and its subsidiaries were offered in evidence. This, with the repetition of the proceedings last Wednesday, took up the entire morning session of the court.

Most of the letters and documents which were thus put in evidence referred to the years 1907 and 1908, which is the date at which the Government alleges the swindle was conceived. Much of the correspondence consisted of circulars, which Mr. Ivory said had been distributed through the mails at the direction of the defendant Smith, who was the President of both the Radio Telephone Company and the Fiscal Agency Company.

"Then these circulars," asked Assistant District Attorney Stephenson, "were sent out by you with the approval of Mr. Smith?"

The defense objected because, it said, the question was too broad, and so Mr. Stephenson by a series of interrogations established the fact that Smith was responsible primarily for the issue of the circulars, as, so soon as they were received from the printers, Mr. Ivory took them to him for his approval.

"We had a list of names," he said, "from one of those mailing agencies, which will sell you as many names of men in different walks of life as you want. That constituted our mailing list for circulars."

Through cross-examination it was ascertained that Mr. Ivory, though a Director of the wireless company, had never attended a meeting of the board.

"Yet from time to time," he was asked, "you made entries in the minute books and marked yourself down as present?"

"Yes, Sir," said the witness: "I did it at Mr. Smith's direction."

Questioned as to the position which the defendant Burlingame occupied toward the Radio Telephone Company and the alleged mail frauds, Mr. Ivory said that he had always understood Burlingame's connection with the concern was that of a stock salesman, and that he had seen him frequently visit Mr. Smith's office.

Miss Florence Borden, who had the supervision of the office staff in Burlingame's office, was the second witness called yesterday. She identified wireless telephone circulars, which had passed through his office. She explained the routine of the establishment and the trial was then adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

ARMY-NAVY GAME AT THE POLO GROUNDS TO-DAY---BASKET BALL RULES CHANGED---GOLF

NAVY PICKED TO WIN BIG FOOTBALL GAME

42,000 Persons Will View Military and Athletic Spectacle To-day.

COMING OF CADET CORPS

Middies and West Pointers Will Arrive Just Before Game—Teams Practice on Polo Grounds.

The annual football game between the Army and Navy, Uncle Sam's two service academies, which promises to be the most picturesque athletic spectacle ever seen in New York, will be played at the Polo Grounds this afternoon at 2 o'clock. With fair weather a record crowd of 42,000 spectators will witness the struggle. Never has the game attracted such attention as this year. It is the first time in the eighteen years the academies have been playing that New York is the scene of the conflict, and, as it is the first time in a decade that a big gridiron game has been played here, the event has attracted wide attention.

With the President of the United States and his Cabinet officers, with Senators and Congressmen from every State in the Union, with distinguished diplomats, and naval and military men, prominent society people, and with the uniformed corps of West Point cadets and blue-coated Midshipmen, this game will be far more impressive than any athletic event which has ever taken place in Manhattan. It will be a gathering different from the roystering mobs of enthusiastic students which used to make Broadway hum with their yells in the old days when Yale and Princeton clashed at old Manhattan Field. It will be different from the world's series baseball games. This Army-Navy assemblage will be quiet and dignified.

New York is ready to act as hospitable host to its distinguished guests. The hotels are gay with the gold and gray of the Army and the gold and blue of the Navy. Tall, broad-shouldered officers in gold braid ambled through the hotel corridors and dining rooms last night. The after-theatre crowds mingled with the newcomers and gazed with admiration on the scene, which was unusual to New York's restaurant life.

All Is Ready for Game.

Everything is in readiness for to-day's big game. The whistle of Referee Langford will start the game at 2 o'clock sharp. The crowds are advised to go to the Brush Stadium early to see the corps of cadets and battalions of midshipmen as they march over the gridiron to their seats, headed by the band from each academy.

The Army team arrived here at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and, carefully guarded by coaches and officers, were hurried to the Hotel Astor, where they immediately went to the eighth floor, which had been reserved for them. The great secrecy surrounded the advent of the squad to the hotel. They entered by the side door and avoided the hotel lobby, where a crowd of Army enthusiasts cheered them as they disappeared into the elevators. No one, not even the cadets' fond relatives, were allowed to see them. A line of guards was strung along the corridors on the eighth floor, and the elevators rushed past that floor without even hesitating. The telephones were plugged. Not even a Major General was allowed in the carefully guarded Army camp without the countersign. The Army players are watched as if Head Coach Daly was afraid some of his stars would be kidnapped. The cadets did not dine in the lower dining rooms, but were given a special training table in the Belvidere, on the Hotel Astor roof.

The Navy players were watched just as carefully. Last night after dinner the middies were taken to a private room high up in the Vanderbilt. Ed Edwards had engaged a number of colored musicians to play and sing ragtime songs to the players until it was time to retire at 10 o'clock. Always under the eyes of the coaches, the middies were not permitted to see any friends or relatives. These will go into the game this afternoon as fit physically and as well schooled mentally in football as any two elevens which ever played.

West Pointers Coming at 1 o'Clock.

The only cripple in the Army ranks is Meacham, the big linesman, who hobbles about on crutches. Houston will play in his place at guard. The Cadet Corps will leave West Point at 11 o'clock this morning, and the "Point" will be deserted. They will arrive at High Bridge about 1 o'clock, and they will go to the Polo Grounds at 157th Street. The cadets will return to the "Point" immediately after the game, but the team will not return until Sunday morning. The cadets plan a big demonstration for the team at the Polo Grounds to-day with songs and cheers, and the midshipmen will come prepared to match them in this line of endeavor.

The Army mule, West Point's time-honored mascot, will come carefully guarded in the baggage car of the cadets' special train this morning. The cadets will form in companies on Eighth Avenue and march to the Polo Grounds and across the gridiron. The cheering will be led by Cadet Milliken, the baseball Captain, and Cadet Byron of Maryland will be the song leader.

The midshipmen will arrive in Jersey City to-day on a special train at 11 o'clock, and will go up the Hudson River on ferryboats to 155th Street. The battalion will form there and march over 155th Street to the Polo Grounds.

All that is needed to make this game a notable one in football annals is a fair day, although the weather outlook last night was a bit dubious.

It is going to be a hard-fought game. The teams are evenly matched, and the Army has come prepared to wipe out the memories of three successive defeats by the Naval Academy. There is as much real bitter rivalry between these teams as there is between Yale and Harvard. It will be a spirited fight from start to finish, but one fine feature about these service games is that they are cleanly fought. What roughness there is comes from hard, earnest playing and the tensity of battle, not from personal grudge.

Navy a Slight Favorite.

Before the Army came to town there was talk of the Navy offering odds of 10 to 7, but the feeling quickly changed when Coach Charley Daly brought his charges here. Although the Navy team is heavier, the Army is ready to offset this advantage with as well drilled a football team as has ever been developed on the "Plains." The betting last night was 5 to 4 on the Navy, but before the game starts it is likely that even money will be obtainable.

Learning a lesson from their games with other teams this year, it is very likely that the contest will show much open, running football. The close, rushing tactics have proved futile in many of the season's big matches. The Army, it is said, has developed an effective forward pass, but, with a pair of ends like Gilchrist and Ingram of the Navy, a defense has been built for just this sort of play. It will be a kicking game from the start, and it is in this one thing that the Navy has an advantage.

The foot of John Brown won for the Navy last year, and much faith is placed in his kicking ability this year. The Army does not say much about its kickers, but Daly, a wonderful drop kicker himself, is likely to spring a surprise in this kind of game with the men he has coached.

The officials of the game will be: Referee, W. S. Langford, Trinity; umpire, Al. Sharpe, Yale, and head linesman, Carl Marshall, Harvard.

Gov. Glynn Here for Game.

Gov. Martin H. Glynn came to the city last night, and with his military staff reviewed the Sixty-ninth Infantry Regiment at the armory at 68 Lexington Avenue. After the review a luncheon was served at the armory by the officers of the regiment. The Governor said he had come down to review the regiment and attend the Army-Navy football game to-day, and not to talk politics. The Governor is stopping at the Vanderbilt Hotel.

CADETS AT POLO GROUNDS.

Sailors and Soldiers in Final Secret Practice.

Signal drills, at which each team spent an hour on the Polo Grounds gridiron yesterday afternoon, brought to a close the long season's practice of the Army and Navy elevens for to-day's big game. The Navy team first had its turn at the field, and the West Point boys appeared a few minutes after the middies had left. The gates were closed to the public while the practice was going on. At 4 o'clock both squads had completed their final workouts, and the usher squad, made up of 150 Columbia students, took part in another drill, through which they acquainted themselves with the seating arrangements in the big stands.

While the two teams were working out, a big section at the east end of the gridiron was cleared of the hay and straw which had been spread in the morning. The removal allowed practice in drop kicking and kicks from placement, and both teams took full advantage of their opportunity. Kicking has won all three games for the Navy during the last three years, and undoubtedly will play a prominent part in to-day's engagement. After the practice the field was again covered with hay and straw, which will remain until within an hour of the time for play to begin. If the weather is clear, the field will be uncovered early this morning.

The Navy squad, in charge of Head Coach Lieut. Douglas Howard, was composed of thirty-three players. All were in uniform, and took some part in the workout, but most of the time was devoted to the regulars and those substitutes who are likely to be called upon to-day. No attempt was made at scrimmaging, owing to the possibility of injury on the eve of such an important contest, and at the finish Lieut. Howard said that all his regulars were physically fit for a hard game. Lieut. Howard was assisted by Field Coach Jim Reilly and Assistant Coaches "Bo" Olcutt, Jack Cates, and Paul Dashiel.

Brown, the big Navy guard, whose kicking carried the middies to victory over the cadets with a brace of field goals in last year's game, practiced his specialty from various angles yesterday, and he sent enough goals over the cross bar to indicate that the Army will have to keep the middies out of the drop kick zone this afternoon. Quarter back Nichols also practiced punting. It is upon these two men that the Navy will rely for the kicking at to-day's game. Some of the other players took the opportunity to get away a few kicks, but unless Brown or Nicholls is injured none of the others will have any opportunity to display his prowess of foot against the Army.

The Navy coaches are not lacking in confidence, but they are not anticipating an easy time. The Army team is not held cheaply by the Annapolis football mentors, despite the fact that the season's records to date point strongly in the Navy's favor.

"When we play the Army we know we have a fight on our hands all the way," one of the Navy leaders said yesterday, "and the Army feels the same way about us. We hope to win, but expect nothing easy."

The Army squad numbered about forty, and was in charge of Head Coach Charley Daly. His assistants were Boyers, Graves, Hammond, Stillwell, Stearns, and Hayes. Mowan, the 195-pound centre, practiced at kicking goals from placement, and the punting was done by Capt. Hoge, Hobbs, and Lamphier. The team spent considerable time rehearsing the new plays which have been arranged for to-day's game, and also had a drill at forward passing which Coach Daly has been working on for the past three weeks.

The Army has only one injured player on its list. He is Meacham, who has been substituting at guard for Huston. He was injured badly in the game against Springfield Y. M. C. A. last Saturday that there is no chance of his getting into the big game. Huston, the heaviest of the West Point regulars, has recovered sufficiently to start to-day's game, and his return, coupled with that of Hodgson and Benedict, who were also on the injured list, has proved a big bracer for the hopes of the cadets. The Army boys were put through the same tactics as the middies, so as to avoid any surprises being attempted.

President Harry N. Hempstead of the New York Baseball Club took charge of the Army and Navy football mentors at the Polo Grounds, and led them in a tour of inspection. All were much pleased at the accommodations and the arrangements both as regards the stands and the playing field. Temporary stands and boxes have been set up in front of the centre field bleachers, and a big new temporary stand has been erected in left field. It covers all the baseball seats from the grandstand to the turn in centre field, and extends from the top fence far down into the left field playing section. This temporary stand is patterned after the stand at Yale Field, and it adds greatly to the seating capacity. The stands and boxes, as arranged for to-day's game, add about 5,000 seats to the capacity of the grounds.

COMING OF THE MIDDIES.

Two Special Trains Will Bring Cadets to New York.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 28.—Though the regular work of the Naval Academy is being carried on to-day, every one connected with the Academy and city is thinking about the big game to-morrow at the Polo Grounds. The fact that the team is now in New York makes the interest even greater. The order for the trip to New York was issued to-day. The brigade will be moved by battalions, going by the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroads respectively.

The midshipmen will be on cars and ferry boats for fourteen hours of the nineteen which will elapse between the time they will leave Arnapolis and return. They will lunch on the ferry between Jersey City and West 158th Street, and dine on the cars on the return. The midshipmen will be allowed to spend the time after the game until the embarkation at 5:15 o'clock as they wish, but will not be allowed to leave the Polo Grounds. They were warned that all Naval Academy regulations will be inforced during the trip.

Reveille will be sounded at 4:15 A. M. to-morrow. The first battalion under Lieut. Commander Chauncey Shackford will leave over the Pennsylvania Railroad at 6.15 o'clock. The train is scheduled to reach Jersey City at 11:30, and the ride on the ferry will take one hour. The second battalion, commanded by Lieut. W. A. Glassford, will leave over the Baltimore & Ohio at 6:30. It is scheduled to reach Jersey City at 11:30, and the ferry trip will also take one hour.

A surgeon and a hospital steward will go with each section. The midshipmen have already been assigned their seats at the Polo Grounds.

TOWN FULL OF GOLD LACE.

Army and Navy People Here for the Game Fill the Hotels.

New York last night contained more men who have worn gold lace than it has held at any time since the Dewey parade, according to the hotel managers. Naval and military officers, active and retired, kept flocking in this direction all day and part of the night, and the arrivals at many of the hotels were much more numerous than on any day this Fall.

Not only wives and daughters of army and navy men and the families of cadets were in the throng, but people whose interest in the army and navy is only general, arrived by hundreds and even thousands. Football centres like Boston and New Haven sent big representations. Washington, where so many retired army and naval officers live, and with which the army and navy are more closely connected, seemed to have emptied its society and official population in this direction. Philadelphia, which has for years been the scene of the big game, and whose people have come to appreciate what the spectacle means, sent a great many people.

After the mid-afternoon train from Boston got in the lobby of the Belmont was filled with one party of Bostonians, all of whom seemed to be provided with football tickets. Many persons who came to town yesterday without having taken this precaution in advance, found, of course, that tickets were hard to get. Some discovered, however, that by paying a good price, such a thing was not impossible, for in spite of all the precautions taken, many tickets have changed hands more than once, and generally at an increasing price. One woman who wanted to get two good tickets Thursday night and didn't mind the price, paid $20 apiece for them, and one heard of tickets that were being held yesterday at $25 a pair. At one hotel the manager of the ticket stand told inquirers it was impossible to procure tickets, and referred those who wished them to the assistant manager, who had been told of several persons who had bought tickets and then found it was impossible to attend the games.

Beside the theatres, the visitors will find entertainment provided at numerous places to-night. The Plaza had announced a dinner dance, and the Astor, where many officers are stopping, will have a similar entertainment in its grand ballroom. Two brass field pieces in the lobby of the Astor threaten the person who enters by the front door, but they are only a part of the decorations. The lobbies of the Belmont and several other hotels have been decorated in honor of the military and naval visitors. Officers at the navy yard and at Governors Island and the other nearby military posts are entertaining many guests who came here for the game.

Some of the visitors who have arrived are:

Mrs. Mackay Smith and Miss Smith, Major Henry Leonard and party, Mr. and Mrs. George Shiras, 3d, Mrs. L. S. McKee, Mrs. E. K. Webster and Miss Frances Webster of Washington, Lieut. F. C. Seibert, U. S. A., and Mrs. Seibert; Lieut. E. W. Todd, U. S. N.; Mrs. W. R. Huntington and Miss Huntington of Elyria, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Arnold and the Misses Arnold of Haverhill, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Knowles and Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell Putnam of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. William Disston, Mr. and Mrs. William Lord Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Wyeth, and Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Siter of Philadelphia.

COMPLIMENTARY SEATS SOLD.

Many Army and Navy Invitations Get Into Hands of Speculators.

The past twenty-four hours witnessed a big slump in the price of seats for the Army-Navy football game. Choice seats were quoted at $20 each on Thursday night, and the price was fairly well maintained until the Army and Navy followers began to arrive in the city yesterday, when the increased supply forced the price down, until last night the general price at the ticket agencies was $15 for two. A few choice seats, however, commanded $10 each.

The ruling price may have caused the possessors of the seats to hold off until yesterday in hope of a still further increase in price. In this respect the holders were disappointed, as the rain and the steady flow of incoming tickets gradually forced the price down. Early in the day many speculators paid as high as $10 apiece for tickets, but under the steady influence the market gradually receded until last night the best price offered for tickets was $5.

It was noticeable that few tickets were offered for sale in bulk, and six was about the largest number obtainable from any person. A number of these were invitations sent to West Point and Annapolis. Big prices were asked for these, which were in the uncovered stands. As the weather indications pointed to rain, there was a decline in the demand for these, and the west stand seats, which are under cover, received the preference.

A few straggling sales were made of boxes, but the announcement of the New York Baseball Club that boxes could be purchased at the club headquarters for $50 apiece kept the sale of these down to a minimum. The best price obtainable from the speculators for boxes was $70.

It was, however, in the invitation tickets that the bulk of the business was transacted yesterday. The two academies received 25,000 of these for distribution among the officers of the two branches and the service and the cadets. These invitations found their way into the hands of outsiders, who took advantage of the extraordinary demand for seats, and probably 3,000 found their way into the hands of speculators. These seats, which were distributed free, were sold at an average price of $7 apiece and resold by the speculators at $10.50.

Should the weather clear to-day it is expected that there will be another boom in the prices, and several of the speculators are holding their seats with the hope of getting a higher price than prevailed last night.

Secretary John B. Foster of the New York Baseball Club said last night that less than 100 reserved seats had been returned to the office. This, he said, was a record for Army-Navy football games and indicated the unusual interest in the contest.

CARNIVAL OF SONG FOR FOOTBALL GAME

Army and Navy Will Introduce Many Original Songs and Yells.

The Army-Navy football game to-day will be a gala song festival, and the rival brigades will have a number of new songs set to popular refrains, while several original service yells will be introduced for the first time. At no football game are songs sung with the vigor and earnestness that mark the vocal efforts of the middies and cadets, as, with the accompaniment of the rival bands, the inspiring songs float across the gridiron.

From the first strains of the Navy band as the young midshipmen march on the field to the triumphant songs of the victorious team there will be one continuous performance of choral efforts which will go far to help swell the din of the gridiron battle. The honor of making the first entrance to the Polo Grounds belongs to Annapolis, through their being victors one year ago. Led by the Academy band in their Copenhagen blue coats with lurid red-lined capes, the sailor brigade will make a gorgeous picture as they march through the gate at the entrance to the playing field.

In the front ranks will be the giants of the school and then the brigade will taper off to the little fellows who have not yet got their growth. There will be eight companies. Each cadet will be in his long blue overcoat, splashed with an aigrette of twisted blue and gold braid, and a rosette of the same color pinned to his manly bosom. Every middy will have a flag. The Navy goat, which is almost as much an institution as the game, will be led by a cadet and will be decorated with more braid and festooning than an Admiral

Following the midshipmen will be the West Point Corps of about 600. The Army mule, as sacred at the Navy goat, will have the post of honor. Everything about the West Point battalion will be sober and subdued. The traditional gray uniforms will be in striking contrast to the appearance of the Annapolis Corps. The band will precede the battalions and as the two corps march around the field before the game the stands will burst into a veritable storm of cheers, applause, and fluttering color.

The parade of the two corps will be continued around the field, and the President with his Cabinet officers will be saluted. Surrounding the latter will be the heads of the War and Navy Departments, together with the leading officers of both branches of the service from Washington, West Point, Annapolis, the forts in the Department of the East, and the officers of the naval stations and war vessels in or near New York. Ordinary plebeians will be out of place in this parade and swirl of color and fun.

With the parade ended the corps will break ranks and scramble to the seats which have been assigned to them on either side of the gridiron. Directly in front of the two rival sections the bands will be located and a dozen choruses will lead the songs that the two brigades will take up their stands. From this point until the winner is returned the stands will resound with the rhythm of the songs and the swaying of the solid bodies of future Generals and Admirals as the refrain is wafted across the playing field.

The Navy songs will include "Anchors Aweigh," "The Ocean Waves May Roll," "You're in the Navy Now," "Row, Row, Row," "When I Get You Alone To-Night," and "Das Haben Die Madchen So Gerne." While the yells will be the "Siren," "Automobile," "Nine Rahs," "Four N," "Yes Team," and "Touchdown." The Army melodies set to the tunes of "In My Harem," "Row, Row, Row," "West Point Night To-night," "Benny Havena," "On the Mississippi," "Good Night Nurse," "Here Comes My Daddy Now," "The Army Mule," and "Midnight Choo Choo," while the yells will include the "Rocket," "Short Corps," "Cavalry Charge," "Spell," "Horse," "Army, Army, Army," "Long Corps," and "Point." The songs follow:

Navy Song.

TUNE: "ANCHORS AWEIGH."

Stand, Navy, down the field,
Sails set to the sky,
We'll never change our course,
So, Army, you steer shy-y-y-y.
Roll up the map, Navy,
Anchors aweigh,
Sail, Navy, down the field
And sink the Army,
Sink the Army Gray.

TUNE: "THE OCEAN WAVES MAY ROLL."

O, Navy Team, just sail a steady course,
And we'll tack right up from alee,
We'll call all hands and bury Army Gray,
In the bottom of the deep blue sea.
Chorus.
O, the Army team may score,
But the Navy will score more;
For the Navy team is always on the top,
And the Gray Legs way down below, below, below,
And the Gray Legs way down below.

Then out sailed our team on the Polo Grounds,
And a right good team were they;
O, the wind is fair, we'll rake 'em fore and aft,
And we'll sink old Army Gray.

O, Navy Team, we're setting all our sail,
And we'll bear right down on their goal,
Away all boats, the Army's sinking fast,
They'll go down with the next big roll.

TUNE: "YOU'RE IN THE NAVY NOW."

You're playing the Navy now,
We'll ram you with our bow,
The poor Army team.
They haven't the steam
To hold the Navy now.

You'll smash the Army Gray,
You'll smash the Army play,
The Navy Blue
Goes through and through
When they get under way.

The Navy wins to-day, to-day,
The Navy wins, the Navy wins.
The Navy wins to-day, to-day,
The Navy wins to-day, to-day.

TUNE: "ROW, ROW, ROW."

You've got to FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT,
For dear old Navy.
You must FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT
For dear old Navy.
You must smash right through that line,
Fighting all the time,
Hit 'em hard and hit 'em low,
And change the six to nine,
But you must FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT.
Don't let them stop you.
You must FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT,
Every inch that you gain
Will bring the Navy fame,
So you must FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT.
—GEARING.

Tune: "WHEN I GET YOU ALONE TONIGHT."

All aboard for a Navy day,
Fight your way through the Army Gray,
Fight your way down the field,
And roll up the score, Navy,
And drag old West Point under once more.
Fade away, black and gold and gray;
Change your course and just roll away.
Army, Army, you're a blunder;
Take a tip and stand from under;
Gangway, let a deep-sea wave roll by.
—Breed.

Tune: "DAS HABEN DIE MADCHEN SO GERNE."

Oh, the Gold and the Blue of the Navy
Are the colors triumphant to-day.
For the men of the sea are in battle,
And there isn't a chance for the Gray.
Oh, the day of the Army is over,
For defeat us they never can do;
There is nothing in sight but the Navy;
We're all for the Gold and the Blue.
—G. W. Grove.

Army Songs.

AIR, "IN MY HAREM."

It's the Army, the Army,
That brave old team, the Army,
They freeze right on the ball,
Go crashing through them all,
When they meet that Middy team;
There'll be a mournful wail,
And when they get that Navy's goat,
They'll surely twist its tail
With a score, a score,
All teams must bow before,
And we'll greet each play,
That sets us on our way,
With a shout for the Army team.

Hear that rear, roar, roar,
It sets me crazy,
It's the Corps, Corps, Corps
To lick the Navy.
We will kick it now and then,
They will tell us when;
We'll run around and run around,
And run around the end;
Then we'll bore, bore, bore,
A little farther we will bor-or-or-or-ore,
Then we'll kick it some more,
Take a whack at that score,
Then we'll roar, roar, roar.

WEST POINT TO-NIGHT, TO-NIGHT.

Fight away, oh, fight away,
All you Army men in gray.
Go charging down the field,
A-smashing every play.
Through Navy's line every time,
Break through with your might.
No Navy in the world
Can stop old Army's Fight, Fight, Fight.

"BENNY HAVENS."

Come fill your glasses, fellows,
And stand up in a row,
To singing sentimentally,
We're going for to go.
In the Army there's sobriety,
Promotion's very slow,
So we'll sing our reminiscences
Of Benny Havens, Oh.
(Chorus.)
Oh, Benny Havens, Oh,
Oh, Benny Havens, Oh,
We'll sing our reminiscences
Of Benny Havens, Oh.

AIR, "ON THE MISSISSIPPI."

On the Hudson River, at the U. S. M. A.,
The football team is waiting for that Navy fray;
They know how to rush through the line,
At long end runs they surely are fine;
A snappy bunch of fighters and, they're out to play,
A game to beat the Navy on that Navy day;
That is the sort of stuff we yield
To the team that meets those Middies on the Polo Field, Then
(Chorus.)
Down In New York City,
Hear that same old ditty,
Army smears, the foe,
There we'll down the Navy,
Smear their line so wavy,
Then we'll break on through.
Hear those stands all ringing,
And those Kaydets singing,
West Point sure is playing
Navy's line a-swaying.
Then the Army Blue will join the gray with you, and Sink that Navy team.

AIR "GOOD NIGHT, NURSE."

Each kaydet's dream an Army team
To represent our spirit true,
And triumph o'er the Navy blue,
And so this year we do not fear
For we have a team at last
To avenge those four years past.
Our Army spirit we teach us
To greet our gray clad warriors from the bleacher.
(Chorus.)
Army team, we're waiting here to chear you;
Brave old team, we know why the Middies fear you.
You know how to rush through them all,
Cross their goal you'll carry the ball,
Kick that ball down the gridiron, let it soar,
Make it fall o'er the bar for one more score.
Par above the Navies you'll stand supreme,
All the corps behind you, Army team.

THE ARMY TEAM.

The Army team's the pride and dream
Of every heart in gray.
The Army line you'll ever find
A terror in the fray.
And when this team is fighting
For the Black, Gray, and Gold
We're always near with song and cheer,
And this is the thing we're told:
The Army team (bang)
(Whistle) Rah! Rah! Rah! (Boom.)
(Chorus.)
On, brave old Army team;
On to the fray;
Fight on to victory,
For that's the fearless Army way.

AIR, "HERE COMES MY DADDY NOW."

Old Navy Blue has cause to fear us to-day,
Black, Gold and Gray, U. S. M. A.
They will be blue to hear the people all say,
Army's got the ball
Fight that old Navy team,
Wreck that old Navy team,
Sink that old Navy team—Now.

(Chorus.)
Here comes that Army team now,
They'll show that Navy team how Fighting for the Corps,
Piling up a score,
Sink their ship once more
On that Navy shore.
Here comes that Army band now,
Bound for that promised land, Oh,
Just let that Navy see
We've got the victory.
West Point is fighting them now.

AIR, "MIDNIGHT, CHOO CHOO."

We're busy all the Fall
Just a practicing football,
Getting ready for that game on Navy Day.
Now we've got a team of men,
Headed by our Captain Ben,
Who will show that Navy outfit how to play.
You can bet we're going to beat them in the fray.

To Fly Over Polo Grounds.

An army aeroplane decorated with army flags may be seen above the Polo Grounds prior to the football game between West Point and Annapolis to-day. Sergt. Samuel Katzman of the Artillery Corps at West Point announced last night that he had received permission from the military and football authorities to make the flight. Sergt. Katzman said he would start from Governors Island some time before the football game begins, weather permitting. He left here last night for Nyack, N. Y., intending to fly from there to Governors Island this morning.

Chaffee Wins at Ridgewood Traps.

Fifteen shooters faced the traps of the Ridgewood Country Club in the regular holiday shoot held Thanksgiving Day. Two events were contested, which resulted in one of the best day's sport at the Jersey traps. In the 100-bird handicap Mrs. Williams accounted for the top honors with a gross score of 100. J. J. Smith proved the best of the scratch men, breaking 98 blue rocks, while Chaffee was the next best of the scratch contingent with one less than Smith. In the 25-bird scratch event for the club trophy Chaffee was the winner with 21. The other scores were: Smith, 20; H. White, 20; R. Musey, 19. The club holds special events every Saturday and on all holidays throughout the trap shooting season.

American Riflemen Defeated.

NICE, France, Nov. 28.—A naval rifle team from the American warships was beaten by 188 points to-day in a match against a team from the crack Nice Rifle Club. There was a large attendance. The American riflemen were Ensigns Oscar C. Badger and John M. Kates and Seamen Hartung, Bedoski, Sharpless, Byrnes, de Sommers, and Drustrup.

Moran Joins Vailsburg Cyclists.

Jimmy Moran, the six-day cyclist, has shifted his training quarters from Boston to the Vailsburg track, at Newark, and will work with his partner, Ait Grenda, the Australian. Moran, in addition to a six-day bicycle race, which starts at Madison Square Garden on Dec. 7, is to take part in the Australian vs. American pursuit race, which is to be one of the big features of the championship meet which will be held Saturday night. He will have as partners in this event Root and Fogler. The Australian combination will include Grenda, Gonilet, and McNamara. Grenda, who has been noted for several years as one of the strongest riders in the game, rode in such great form in the Berlin six-day race last year that he brought the contest to a sudden halt, when the German, Belgian, and French riders left the track, and refused to continue the race until the big Australian was taken out of the contest.

Paul Withington Hurt in Game.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Nov. 28.—Paul Withington, former Harvard football star, is in a local hospital, the victim of an accident in the Thanksgiving Day football game between a local eleven and a team made up largely of present and former Harvard players. He failed to rise after a scrimmage and had to be helped off the stand. Although he insisted on watching the rest of the game, he was later forced to consult a physician. The doctor said a bone in Withington's leg had been dislocated, but had slipped back into place again. Withington played centre on the Harvard 'Varsity teams of 1908 and 1909.

Sweeney for Reds Manager.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The name of Capt. Bill Sweeney of the Boston Nationals was brought into the field of possible candidates for the position of manager of the Cincinnati team to-day in a letter sent to Sweeney from New York by President James J. Gaffney of the local club. Saying that he took into consideration the fact that in other years the Cincinnati Club had tried to secure Sweeney as manager, Gaffney notified the Boston Captain that he had permission to negotiate for the position if he desired to. "Were you to succeed it would bring a mingled sense of reluctance and pleasure to me," President Gaffney wrote. Sweeney said to-night he would take the matter under consideration.

GOLF FAVORITES WIN AT LAKEWOOD

Travis and Marston Among Those Who Come Through Victors of Matches.

Favorites survived the first and second rounds of match play in the annual Fall golf tournament of the Country Club of Lakewood yesterday when Walter J. Travis of Garden City and Max R. Marston of Baltusrol won both the contests in which they were engaged.

Travis had little difficulty in first disposing of the aspirations of Harold A. Steiner, the champion of the Inwood and Hollywood Clubs, 4 and 3, and then the veteran put out C. T. Richardson of the home club with even greater ease, the score being 6 and 4. Travis always had his last match well in hand. In fact, the Garden City man stood 4 up at the turn and was never in danger.

Marston's first opponent was Garfield Scott of Philadelphia, and the last named gave his man a few uncomfortable moments. It was a nip and tuck race to the turn, all holes but two being halved and each won one of these, so the contest was level. On the tenth and eleventh, both short, Marston failed to get the greens on his tee shots and needed four for each hole. Scott, on the other hand, got par threes and became two up. The Philadelphian, however, could not keep up the pace and the intersc

COLLEGIANS AMEND BASKET BALL CODE

Important Changes Made in Winter Sport by the Rules Committee.

Members of the Basket Ball Rules Committee, coaches, officials, and players representing nearly all of the universities playing the game in the East and the Middle West, held their annual conclave yesterday at the Hotel Astor and discussed the various changes and interpretations of the rules of the game for the ensuing year most exhaustively.

Dr. Joseph E. Raycrott of Princeton was the Chairman of the session, and he found his time pretty well taken up returning answers to the volleys of questions which were tired at him in regard to the changes. Dr. Raycroft said:

"The changes in the rules this year are few, and are made in the interest of clearness and definiteness. Two changes of a good deal of importance were made and are worthy of some consideration.

"The 'jump ball' has always been the subject of criticism and complaint because of the many fouls which have been committed in connection with this play, whether in the inner circle, or, as so often happens, near the side lines. The committee attacked the situation from two points of view; first, to lessen the number of opportunities for the play itself, and, second, to change the rule governing the play so as to make it more difficult to commit an intentional foul and easier for the official to detect it when it is made.

"Since a very large number of 'jump balls' occur on the side line, where, owing to the closeness of the spectators, it is often difficult for an official to decide who is entitled to the ball, the rule governing possession of the ball out-of-bounds, has been changed so that when the ball goes out-of-bounds it is awarded to an opponent of the player who was last touched by the ball before it crossed the line.

"This change in the rule will not only do away with the necessity of many 'jump balls,' but will practically eliminate the charging into the spectators and the chances of injury and delay to the game that so frequently followed. Furthermore, this change makes it possible for the official to make his decision more promptly and to avoid many of the delays that attended the administration of the old rule:

"The second change in the rule governing the 'jump ball' is to require the man jumping to place, and to keep one hand behind the back at the waist line until the ball has been touched on the jump. This regulation will undoubtedly lessen the height to which a player can jump; but this is not a serious matter and not to be considered in view of the fact that the opportunities for holding, pushing and so on that have been so freely used in this play will be reduced to a minimum."

After it developed that there was nothing in the rules which specified what was to be done if the ball is thrown out of bounds from the centre circle on the jump off, the question whether it should be brought back to centre, or tossed up from the side line was the occasion for much discussion.

When put to a vote as to whether it should be from centre or side lines, the advocates for centre won by 22 votes to 19. Immediately following this, Dr. Raycroft made an appeal that the delegates and coaches reconsider the vote, and, as the result of the further discussion and vote, the decision was reversed, and, almost unanimously the side line idea prevailed.

Fred Dawson, the former Princeton player, who is now coach at Union College, aided in the clearing up of what appeared a perplexing situation in regard to blocking when he suggested that "A player is entitled to take any position on the court; but, if in taking a position he faces an opponent and makes bodily contact with an opponent so as to interfere with the latter's progress, he is blocking. "And" in the foregoing paragraph was inserted to take the place of "or," as the note originally read, and proved acceptable to all.

In connection with that portion of Rule 20, Section 1, which treats on position in centre circle, upon suggestion by Dr. Al Sharpe, it was agreed that the men shall stand with the shoulders at right angles to a line drawn between both baskets.

In their desire for a proper code of rules and their interpretation it was the contention of those desiring to aid in forwarding the sport that the primary object was that men in a game should play the ball and not the man.

Those who took part in the session were Harry A. Fisher, Columbia; Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, Cornell; Ralph Morgan, Pennsylvania; M. Walker, Columbia; C. Carlson, Wesleyan; Alfred S. Melick, Trenton; J. Degner, Columbia; F. W. Luehring, Princeton; Carl A. Reid, Dartmouth; E. C. Lincoln, Williams; Edwin Fauon, Princeton; Edward Fauver, Wesleyan; Fred T. Dawson, Union; Henry McLean, Union; George J. New York A. C. Billiardist Loses.

C. F. Appleby of New York City last night defeated Robert Weld of the New York A. C. in the continuation of play in the 18.2 balk line tournament at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, by the score of 200 to 104 in thirty-seven innings. The winner showed superior cue work from the start and scored nearly two points to his opponent's one, making a record high run for the tournament with a tally of 42 in the twentieth inning. Appleby had high runs of 45, 22, and 18, averaging 5 15-37, while the Mercury Foot player had runs of only 16, 14, and 10 for an average of 2 30-37.

Fitzgerald Wins Road Race.

J. Fitzgerald, the Pacific Coast professional champion, outdistanced a large field of runners in the weekly road race of the Greek-American A. C. held last night over a course measuring four and three-quarter miles. The Western runner started from the clubhouse thirty seconds after the last runner had been sent on his way and finished 3 minutes ahead of C. Molinos, a Greek-American athlete, in the excellent time of 23:22. Molinos' time was 27:01, while J. Forio, running unattached, was third in 27:30.

Knockouts at New Polo.

Followers of boxing at the New Polo A. A. last night were rewarded with some hard fighting, during which two knockouts were registered, while in another of the scheduled ten-round bouts the referee was compelled to stop the go, as one of the men was apparently outclassed. It was in the latter affair that Young Gilbert was a winner over Danny Burns after five rounds. In a bout at the middleweight limit Dave Katz knocked out Bob Deery in the second round with a right hand smash to the jaw, which sent the defeated man down for the count. Eddie Morrisey administered the sleep punch in the shape of a left swing to the solar plexus to Johnny Weber, in the second round of what was to have been a ten-round encounter. These lads scaled 125 pounds. Frank Conifrey had the better of his go against Joe Carter in a battle which went ten rounds.

Maupome Again Defeats Gallagher.

Pierre Maupome, the St. Louis billiardist, added to his lead in his three-cushion carrom billiard match with Tom Gallagher, the New York veteran, at Doyle's Billiard Academy last night when he defeated Gallagher in the fourth block by the score of 40 to 30 in fifty-six innings. The St. Louis player displayed excellent form and made many difficult shots, at one stage of the contest totaling nine caroms before missing. This victory places Maupome twenty points ahead of his opponent, the total for the four nights' play now being: Maupome, 160; Gallagher, 140. The final block of the mach will be decided this evening.

Willard Case Still Undecided.

It was said yesterday at the office of the New York State Athletic Commission that no word had been received by the commission from those interested in the fight between Jess Willard and Carl Morris, scheduled to take place at Madison Square Garden on next Wednesday night, as to whether the Queensberry Athletic Club of Buffalo has withdrawn its objection to permitting Willard to fight. It is understood that if the Queensberry Club will agree to let Willard fight the State Boxing Commission will have no objection to the match.

LAWRENCE FIREMEN RETURN

Compromise Wins in Two of the Large Textile Mills.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 28.—Under a compromise agreement, the terms of which were not disclosed by either side, the striking firemen employed at the mills of the American Woolen Company returned to work to-day. Later the United States Worsted Company settled with its firemen on the basis of a ten-hour day without wage reduction. This was a compromise, as the men, who had been working twelve hours, struck for an eight-hour day.

The Central Labor Union to-day offered to call a sympathetic strike in other trades if the firemen desired it.

All factories continued in operation to-day, the owners asserting that licensed firemen had taken the places of the strikers.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—A recommendation that the firemen employed in the textile mills at Lawrence receive a reduction in the hours of labor was made to-day by the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, which has been investigating the strike.

The board suggests that the firemen's hours of labor shall not exceed the six-day working period of employes in other departments of the textile industry.

SUIT OVER GATES TAX.

Minnesota Asserts It Was Testators' Residence—Widow Says Texas.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 28.—A suit to determine the legal residence of the late Charles G. Gates, and which State—Minnesota or Texas—shall collect the inheritance tax—was begun in Probate Court to-day.

William J. Stevens, assistant State's Attorney General, filed a petition to probate the estate, asserting that Mr. Gates's home was in Minneapolis. Later Frank T. Corriston, representing Mrs. Gates and other heirs, filed a copy of the will and a petition with the court. Both Mr. Corriston's and the State's actions will be heard on Jan. 8.

Mrs. Gates's petition argued that her husband's legal residence was at Port Arthur, Texas. The heirs' estimate of the Minnesota portion of the estate is $500,000.

Young Sharps was walking slightly in advance of Wildrick when the later's gun was accidently discharged.

CITY BREVITIES.

The twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the Emanu-El Sisterhood will be held at the Temple Emanuel, Forty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, on Sunday, Dec. 7.

The Directors of Washington Heights Hospital, Broadway and 165th Street, will, on Dec. 8, start a campaign to obtain $150,000 with which it is intended to put up a new building with modern equipment. The present structure has been found inadequate to the demands made upon it. An auxiliary committee of women, headed by Mrs. Adolph Heller, initiated the campaign, which depends for its success on local support. Ernest A. Limburg of 25 Broad Street is Treasurer.

The sixth annual meeting of the Council of Women for Home Missions will be held in the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, 5 West Forty-sixth Street, on Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 3 and 4. This council is composed of the representatives of fifteen National Women's Home Mission Boards of evangelical denominations. The meeting at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 4, will be open to the public. At the end of the afternoon session members and friends of the council will gather at the Hotel Manhattan for a buffet supper and "get-together" evening.

Notes of the Athletes.

Van Cortlandt Park will be the scene of the annual national junior cross-country championship of America this afternoon, the race, over the six-mile route, being scheduled to start at 3 o'clock. Teams from the New York A. C., Irish-American A. C., Yonkers Y. M. C. A., Long Island A. C. and Bronx Church House and a number of individuals will contest for the honors. Indications point to a victory by the Winged Foot team, with Sid Leslie, the Metropolitan champion, and R. Springsteen of Yonkers, the favorites for the individual title.

Willie Kolehmainen, the professional champion distance runner, will sail for Scotland this morning. He will make Edinburgh his headquarters in his preparation for the Powderhall New Year's race at fifteen miles, in which he will meet, among others, Hans Holmer, the "West Farms Express," who has been beating all comers abroad.

The Eighth Artillery A. A. will hold a series of athletic events to-night in the armory at Park Avenue and Ninety-fourth Street, beginning at 8:30 P. M. The events will include 90 yards, 220 yards and one mile runs, all handicaps; 600 yards run for novices, one-mile walk, running high jump, and one-mile intercompany relay race.

COLLATERAL LOANS FOR SAVINGS BANKS

Van Tuyl Sub-Committee Considers Plan to Widen Institutions' Investment Field.

FUNDS QUICKLY REALIZABLE

Bank Opposition Likely for Laws for Equipment Trust Investments and Bigger Surpluses.

The Sub-Committee on Savings Banks of the Van Tuyl Commission appointed to prepare a revision of the State laws relating to banking has under consideration several proposals that are regarded in some of the savings institutions as radical departures from existing practices.

Among these are laws permitting savings banks to make loans on Stock Exchange collateral, which would make them a factor in the call money market; authorizing the investment of savings deposits in equipment trust obligations of railroads, as well as general mortgage bonds, and requiring the gradual accumulation of larger surpluses of guaranty funds.

It is not understood that the sub-committee, and still less the full commission, is committed to all these propositions. If they are finally recommended by the sub-committee, it is expected that they will be the subject of public hearings before the full commission, and from what savings bank men say privately there is likely to be stiff opposition to all but the equipment trust matter.

From talks with officers of several representative savings banks it does not appear that there has been any pressure from them to let down the bars to Stock Exchange loans. The members of the sub-committee, it is said, came to a favorable consideration of such a departure through discussing the need of a third line of defense against runs or insolvency, such as commercial banks have, cash in vault and money on deposits in other banks constituting the first two lines.

Equipment trust obligations, which are usually issued in series running from one to ten years, offer a field for assets more quickly realizable than real estate mortgages or general mortgage bonds, but do not supply the degree of liquidity which the committee considers necessary.

Against Commercial Paper.

To the committee there seemed to be only two means of supplying this need. One would be investment in commercial paper and the other collateral loans. It was argued that banks which invested in commercial paper had to be in touch with commercial conditions and credits at all times, and that opening this form of investment to savings banks would make possible abuses growing out of favoritism and lack of information. It was practically decided that it would be unwise to open this field to savings bank funds.

The question of Stock Exchange loans was then taken up. It was proposed that such loans by savings banks be restricted to the stocks of companies whose bonds are now legal investments for their funds; in other words, companies that have paid dividends for the preceding ten years. It was pointed out that there is always a market for dividend-paying stocks, even in a panic, at some price, and that if the loans were made on a sufficient margin there would be no danger of loss. By this means, it was argued, savings banks could put themselves quickly in funds in times of stress without being compelled to sell their bonds at a sacrifice.

Some of the members balked at the idea of "putting a ticker in a savings bank" as being out of character. They found no objection in theory to the proposed change, but did not like the practical aspect of it. They argued also that savings bank officers were not at present in close touch with the stock market, and some of the individuals were hardly of the kind that would be needed to watch sudden fluctuations on the Stock Exchange. Still, the sentiment was favorable to the change rather than the reverse, and there the matter rests for the present.

Equipment Trust Bonds.

Little opposition developed in the committee to the plan for making equipment trust bonds and notes legal investments for savings banks. The equipment trust is essentially a chattel mortgage, and some of the committee thought it more secure than a general mortgage bond. Even if a railroad went into receivership, it was argued, it would have to keep up the payment of interest and principal on its equipment trusts, as otherwise the equipment itself could be removed and the operation of the road hampered or stopped. Following the panic of 1893, it was said, equipment trust obligations proved for this reason to be at least as good investments as bonds.

The question of surplus is one that has been agitating the savings bank world for many months. In recent years there has been a marked decline in the size of surpluses maintained by the institutions of the State. There is no law requiring the maintenance of a surplus, but the practice of the stronger banks is to keep 5 or 6 per cent. In many cases this surplus corresponds closely to the amount kept on deposit with other banks, which has been called the second line of defense.

The shrinkage in bond values that has been in progress for several years has had the effect of greatly reducing these surpluses and an attempt was made at the legislative session last Winter to enact a law requiring a gradual accumulation of larger ones. This was supported in principal by Supt. Van Tuyl of the Banking Department, but was defeated by the smaller banks on the ground that they could not continue to pay 4 per cent. interest if required to set aside part of their income, with the predicted result that they would lose deposits to other banks that already had larger surpluses and could continue the 4 per cent. rate.

There is no doubt that the commission will recommend a law requiring the establishment of a surplus or guaranty fund of perhaps as much as 10 per cent. of the deposits, but just how this is to be accumulated and how rapidly is a matter to be determined.

KANSAS CROPS YIELD LESS.

Corn Lowest Since 1874—Wheat and Oats Exceed Average.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 28.—A report of the year's agriculture in Kansas issued to-day by the State Board of Agriculture says that, despite unseasonable rainfall last Summer, the aggregate value of farm products, with live stock added, was $507,000,000, an amount exceeded only by the four years immediately preceding. The value of the crops, however, is less than for any year since 1901, and about $95,000,000 under that of a year ago. It is evident, therefore, that the shortage is attributable in the main to low yields, for prices as a general thing have ruled high.

"The Kansas yield of corn in 1913," says the report, "is 18,420,052 bushels, the smallest since 1874, with little, if any, of commercial grades, while wheat, with its total of 72,458,031 bushels, and oats, with 28,125,677 bushels, exceed the twenty-year average. The National Department of Agriculture, which presumably has no particular bias in favor of our State, in its statements issued recently says Kansas raised 20 per cent. more wheat, about 29 per cent. more corn, and 31 per cent. more oats than is here indicated. While the Government's figures appear inexplicably high, their showing, which corresponds with those of other years, effectually disproves the claim occasionally advanced by tiresome carpers and pessimists that Kansas's figures are magnified for advertising purposes or for the benefit of interests inimical to producers. A much more justifiable criticism would be that Kansas statistics are always too conservative."

ALLEGES RATE FAVORITISM.

Pacific Navigation Co. Complains Against Transcontinental Roads.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Pacific Navigation Company, operating in Pacific waters from San Francisco, today began a proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Southern Pacific Company and other transcontinental railroads, demanding that the railways make through routes and rates with the complainant on passenger traffic.

It is alleged that the roads discriminate against the Pacific Navigation Company and give preferential advantages to its competitors by denying it membership in the Transcontinental Passenger Association, which automatically would entitle it to the through routes and joint rates.

New Printing Process in the Christmas Number of The New York Times

Sunday, Dec. 7, 1913

There will be two remarkable illustrated supplements in The Times's Christmas Edition. One will be a reproduction of John S. Sargent's famous mural paintings, "The Prophets," in the original colors. The other, containing 29 extraordinary photographs of typical American girls selected by a committee of artists from hundreds of photographs submitted by Times readers, will be the first eight-page newspaper supplement printed in America by the revolutionary roto-gravure process. That process will soon be used in all the regular picture sections of The Times.

THE GIRL OF TO-DAY

29 Photographs of Typical American Girls, in an Eight-Page Section

This supplement will introduce the new German rotogravure process to American newspaper readers for the first time in an entire illustrated section. The photographs were selected by seven well-known artists from hundreds submitted after The Times asked for pictures typical of the American girl. So many attractive photographs were found by the judges that it was decided not to limit the choices to the twenty-nine, as originally planned. The artists selected ninety altogether. The remaining sixty-one will be reproduced in a second rotogravure section on Dec. 14—one week later than the Christmas Number. Soon afterward the rotogravure method will be used in all the regular pictorial sections of The Times.

"THE PROPHETS"

John S. Sargent's Famous Mural Paintings in the Original Colors

This frieze is one of the features of the Boston Public Library. It will be reproduced in the original colors on heavy paper. The complete frieze, as reproduced from a Copley Print copyright by Curtis & Cameron of Boston, is in three parts, 55 inches long and 10 inches wide. It will be suitable for framing, as there is no printing on the back. The picture is equal to anything ever offered in Christmas publications costing fifty cents and a dollar.

Christmas Number of The New York Times

WARNING

When issuing previous Special Editions, The New York Times urged its readers to place their orders in advance, but thousands disregarded the warnings and were unable to get the editions. The Christmas Number of Dec. 7 is sure to be sold out far in advance. Unless you order early, you will be unable to get a copy.

The conditions are the same whenever The Times issues an unusual illustrated number. As preference is given to regular readers by newsdealers, the way to get all the Special Editions is to order The Times delivered to you every day.

LORD HALDANE ON THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

We have never been troubled by doubts as to the attitude of England toward the Monroe Doctrine. The proclaiming of that Doctrine by President MONROE ninety years ago was received in England "not only with satisfaction but with enthusiasm," and the motives of policy which then prompted England's assent to the Doctrine are now even more obvious, and they will be a continuing force in years to come. To whatever extremities she may be led through misunderstandings with the neighboring Powers of Europe, the security of her great possessions in North America will never be a source of anxiety to her so long as we adhere to the principle of MONROE'S message. It is with gratification, but not with surprise, therefore, that Americans have read the words of Lord HALDANE, joining to approbation of our national policies cordial praise of President WILSON for his just and righteous aims. Americans have not forgotten the Lord High Chancellor's profession of faith in his remarkable address at the meeting of the American Bar Association in Montreal last September, when he dwelt upon the common interests of Canada and Great Britain on the one hand and of the United States on the other, and pointed to the possibility of establishing "a true unison" between these countries which might serve as an example "for international faith "of a kind that is new in the history of the world." The words of this great jurist upon matters of national concern are sure of attention in this country, and the friendly import of his Thanksgiving Day address in London commends it to our welcome.

Americans will read with deep interest, but without assent, however, some of Lord HALDANE'S observations upon the Monroe Doctrine, which give a meaning to that pronouncement that is foreign to its author's intent, and a scope which lies somewhat beyond the limits of the Doctrine's application consistently observed in our policy. The Doctrine, Lord HALDANE conceives, "remains to be completed," and his Lordship appears to cherish the belief, or the hope, that "the true inwardness" of some recent declarations of President WILSON foreshadows a very considerable broadening of our undertakings. Lord HALDANE said > that, just as his Government in the days of MONROE assumed a great responsibility for the protection of the nations south of the United States on the great American continent, so today the United States feels that the responsibility must be extended to securing good government and fair treatment for all those who live and trade in those countries.

My interpretation is that the United States is ready to accept responsibility, not merely for insuring good government and good treatment in the interest of her own subjects, but in the interest of the world at large, so that all who live and trade on the great American continent may feel that she has set before her a high ideal to secure for them equally with her own subjects that justice and righteousness of which President WILSON has spoken.

The Lord High Chancellor certainly does not misunderstand the Monroe Doctrine, a fault more frequently chargeable against some of our own ill-informed commentators than against jurists of the Old World. He knows that nothing in President MONROE'S message, nothing in our policy and practice for nearly a century, assures or implies either a protectorate over our sister republics of the New World or a guarantee of the security of any other than our own nationals therein residing. Plainly, it is only by an extension of the Doctrine that he would have it include these matters. It is well to remember, always to remember, in considering the Monroe Doctrine that, in the words of WEBSTER, it "must "be considered as founded on our "rights and to spring mainly from a "regard to their preservation." The Doctrine, as Mr. HAMILTON FISH, when Secretary of State, put it, "opposes "the creation of European dominion "on American soil or its transfer to "other European Powers," but "it "does not contemplate forcible intervention in any legitimate contest." In no sense does it impose upon us the obligation "to become involved in "the constantly recurring quarrels "of the republics of this hemisphere "with other States," nor does it obligate us to protect our American neighbors "from responsibilities which "attend the exercise of independent "sovereignty." These precepts, all cited from official authority, are sustained by our practice. There is nothing in the Monroe Doctrine which constrains us to forbid a European Power to adopt its own proper measures for redressing grievances sustained at the hands of one of our sister republics. To the joint note of the Spanish, French, and British Ministers in 1861, announcing their intention of combined action against Mexico for redress of grievances, Secretary SEWARD replied that "the "sovereigns represented have un- "doubted right to decide for them- "selves the fact whether they have "sustained grievances and to resort "to war against Mexico for the re- "dress thereof, and have the right "also to levy the war severally or "jointly." It was only when France, left to herself, carried her procedures to an unavowed extreme and set up an Emperor in Mexico that we interposed our firm protest, which would have been followed by war had it not been heeded.

In short, if a lesson must be given to some misbehaving Government of a Latin American republic for wrongs done to the citizens or subjects of a European Power, we are content that the Power aggrieved should administer it; the Monroe Doctrine merely requires that such occasions shall not become the pretext for establishing dominion. Mr. ROOSEVELT in his message to Congress in December, 1901, stated the principle correctly:

> This Doctrine has nothing to do with the commercial relations of any American power, save that it in truth allows each of them to form such as it desires. * * * We do not guarantee any State against punishment if it misconducts itself, provided the punishment does not take the form of the acquisition of territory by any non-American power.

The principle has also been well stated by Mr. JOHN W. FOSTER, once Secretary of State:

> The United States does not contemplate a protectorate over any other American nation, seek to control the latter's conduct in relation to other nations, nor become responsible for its acts.

These citations are more necessary for the information of some who discourse upon the Monroe Doctrine in this country, where there is a deal of loose thinking upon the subject, than for any admonitory purpose in respect to Lord HALDANE'S address, for he, obviously, was speaking of some hoped-for extension of the Monroe Doctrine. For him and for those who share his expectations they will serve, however, to show that our policy has unfailingly stood opposed to the assumption of the new obligations indicated. When we undertake to guarantee at all times the protection of the lives and property of Englishmen, Frenchmen, or Germans in Mexico or in Central or South America, we shall proceed not under the Monroe Doctrine, or anything like the Monroe Doctrine, but under some as yet unformulated, we may as well say impossible, theory of national duty and interest. The Monroe Doctrine is the public system of the New World, as the Concert of Europe is the public system of that Continent. The Concert of Europe obligates no nation to guarantee the protection of Americans within European territory, nor does our Doctrine interfere with freedom of action of any European Power in respect to its own nationals and their lawful interests so long as interference does not take the form of conquest, acquisition, or control of national destiny.

CANADA'S COST OF LIVING.

Canada eats only one-quarter of the breadstuffs it raises, but the cost of living in Canada has risen 51 per cent., while the cost of living in the Motherland has risen 7 per cent., although the Motherland supplies its needs in the Canadian market. This is the burning question in Canada, and is the result in part of our new tariff. It opened a new market to Canada, and the requirements of a population tenfold larger than the Dominion's has swept off its market the floating supply. Doubtless in time Canada can increase its production up to any extent that the price induces, but it cannot do so at once. It is easier and quicker to find relief by removing the restrictions upon its buying more cheaply. At present the cost of food in Canada includes freight over continental distances, while cheaper food is accessible within a few score or hundred miles across our border. It needs the relief we granted to ourselves, and only its own Government stands in the way. The opposition is quick to see the opening afforded it, and on Wednesday Sir WILFRID LAURIER made good use of the opportunity in a speech which has received much acclaim in Canada. According to Canadian reports Sir WILFRID demands from the Government "a policy "of absolutely free food—food free "from customs duty," a demand that was received with prolonged cheering.

Premier BORDEN sees the point as well as Sir WILFRID. He is about to return home from his visit of recuperation at the Virginia Hot Springs, and on the way he is calling at Washington. Secretary BRYAN was to have him to dinner last night, and he had an interview with the President yesterday forenoon. But to what purpose, beyond an exchange of amenities? The United States gave Canada for nothing more than it had arranged to purchase by reciprocal concessions, and Premier BORDEN came into office on the plea that Sir WILFRID'S bargain was betrayal of Canada and treason to the Empire. It is not reasonable to expect that the Premier seeks or can get from us further concessions, those already granted having proved too much of a good thing from the point of view of Canadian Conservatives. Canadians must look for relief to Ottawa, not Washington. The enactment of the Canadian half of reciprocity is what the case calls for, however it embarrasses the Premier to recognize it. We wish him a pleasant visit at our Capitol, and a good deliverance from his troubles at his own.

DR. WILEY AS NEW YORK'S HEALTH COMMISSIONER.

We suppose the appointment of Dr. HARVEY W. WILEY as Health Commissioner for New York City would be at once the most popular and the most effective measure which Mayor-elect MITCHEL could take for the protection of the public health.

Dr. WILEY'S successor as head of the Bureau of Chemistry at Washington recently, and pertinently, pointed out that the question of Federal control of foods and drugs is quite secondary to that of local control. The police powers given to the State and the community are broad and sweeping. If we may rely upon the testimony of experts, this city is the headquarters of the adulterators of food and drugs in the United States. No extra-legal Remsen Board, no McCABE, no insistent lobby of selfish interests could stand between Dr. WILEY and the rigorous enforcement of New York's health laws. He would be answerable to Mayor MITCHEL, and the Mayor would give him a free hand.

MISDIRECTED CRITICISM.

It is only too easy to understand the sincerity of the feeling underlying the criticism by some of the Protestant clergy of the action of President WILSON in attending the Pan-American Thanksgiving mass in Washington. Dr. MACKAY of the Presbyterian Church probably expressed the sentiment really felt by all the others. It is a sentiment of jealous pride in one's "own Church." It often goes with hearty and self-sacrificing devotion; and it is the root of much genuine and valuable service.

We confess that it appears to us a little narrow, and not quite in harmony with the spirit of true Christianity. No one can doubt the attachment of the President to "his" Church, but it does not seem to require, on a pubic occasion, when the representatives of friendly States were meeting at a religious ceremony intended to celebrate and consecrate the tie that binds them to us and to each other, that the President should absent himself because the ceremony was not held in a Presbyterian church and with Presbyterian rites. The great body of our fellow Americans of the South happen to be Catholics. A very considerable part of the people of our own country are also Catholics. The attendance of the President at St. Patrick's Church on Thanksgiving was but a proper expression of sympathy with the sentiment of the occasion.

A COMMENDABLE REFORM.

The world will be keenly interested in the royal effort in England to preserve the dignities of men's attire, to banish the bowler, the soft hat, and the detestable cap from the heads of men of quality when they are in the heart of London, and to keep the jacket from invading the domain of the skirted coat. The order, signed by Major Gen. Sir FRANCIS LLOYD, commanding officers of the Guard, out of uniform, to wear black frock coats and high silk hats when "in the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace," will be far-reaching. What the officers of the Guard wear, in the way of civilian attire, will be accounted essential for the wear of all other London gentlemen, and especially for all who are battling for the reputation of gentlemen. The neighborhood of Buckingham Palace might be restricted to Constitution Hill, Bird Cage Walk, and a part of Belgravia, but a man who is out of an afternoon cannot run home and change his clothes every little while, so that the order applies fairly to all the town between Kensington Palace and Leicester Square, to all St. James's Parish and much more.

It will be generally approved. A well-built Englishman is a heroic figure in his golfing, hunting, and shooting clothes, but when he undertakes to dress "comfortably" in town he makes a bad mess of it and is the most uncomfortable looking person in the world. The recent democratic tendency toward undress in London needed the check it received. The Englishman was born to wear a top hat and a frock coat; and the restoration of this civilian uniform in London, "in the neighborhood of Buckingham Palace," means its speedy restoration in the proper circumstances throughout the kingdom.

THE MEETINGS OF SCIENTISTS.

The preliminary announcement of the meeting in Atlanta, Ga., from Dec. 29, 1913, to Jan. 3, 1914, of the American Association for the Advancement of Science—the sixty-fifth and most important of that association's meetings—prompts the reflection that the life of the present day is largely based on the work of scientists. There is hardly a modern department of business that does not require the fundamental aid of scientific experts.

At the meeting of the British Association in England last September, Prof. SODDY remarked that the application of science now resembles the "increase of a capital sum under compound interest." The whole aspect of human affairs has been changed. By the intelligent use of larger and purely inanimate sources of energy, the old social and political orders based on physical force of men and beasts are bursting like a chrysalis into new life. But the things that have been accomplished, Prof. SODDY thinks, are but an earnest of what will be done in future. For instance, the observance in nature of a new form of energy a million times as great as that given out in any previous change known—the energy, that is, liberated by the radioactive elements—furnishes ground for belief that inexhaustible stores of power may be found in breaking up the atoms of elements now regarded as non-radioactive and unchanging. Such a discovery would put man:ind not only beyond want for the necessaries of life, it would enable the race to play a cosmical rôle, and to transmit impulses to other planets.

However that may be, it suffices to note that at every great meeting of scientists, like that which will convene in Georgia, representing all the affiliated scientific societies of the United States, announcements of increasing importance are made, recording the advances of effort in the control of nature for the benefit of humanity. The companies of men devoted to research and discovery are being augmented. Their work is immediately utilized in transforming the material and mental environment of their fellows.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Why Make a Lonely Exception?

Without feeling any particular fondness for the sometime President of Nicaragua, one can still view with something of disquietude and repugnance the present proposal to send him to meet the fate to which he has already been condemned, in effect, by one of his successors in office.

It is not that Gen. ZELAYA, while exercising the powers of a military dictator, did nothing reprehensible when judged by our standards of official conduct. His enemies say, with more than plausibility, that the methods by which he seized, and for a while retained, office were such as to cause a considerable and highly informal mortality, first among those whom he ousted, and later among those who sought to oust him. And, hasty as was his departure, there is a curious, but familiar, discrepancy between the salaries he received as a soldier and a civilian and his present command of cash in large amounts. However, though, from all indications and reports, Señor ZELAYA did not appreciably elevate the moral average of his class, there is little if anything to show that he lowered it, or that he has not a right as good as that possessed by the majority of its members for calling "political" the acts which mark his highly accidented career. That being the case, there is no very obvious reason for treating him otherwise than as many another like visitor has been treated here.

Certainly, should Gen. ZELAYA be extradited, the State Department will be busy until such time as there are no more exiles here with whom somebody in the little southern republics has an unbalanced account. We have never been so obliging before, and there is not a chance that Gen. ZELAYA could not remain in any European country as long as he chose—and could pay his bills. There his direct, measurable responsibility for the killing of the men he is charged with murdering would be held more than dubious, and of the dubiety, there, as so often here, in the past, such men as he always get the benefit.

This Plan Without Precedent.

"Important if true" is the first and most natural comment excited by the report that a rich Chicago woman is planning and actively preparing to adopt fifteen babies, each of a race different from all the others. To get the required variety, it is said, she is searching other countries—which seems needless, as this one has a population so widely assorted—and no prejudices of color or creed are to detract from the catholicity of her collection.

Possibly this report, if true, is rather more interesting than important, but certainly it is not without importance from several points of view. Biologists, for instance, if they be also sociologists, as most of them are nowadays, will get a precious chance to get new light on the relative importance of heredity and environment. Of course no single experiment of this sort proves much, but it really should be possible to learn something from observing the behavior, character, and career of fifteen children so diverse in origin when subjected, as these by assumption will be, to conditions approximately the same.

Exactly alike the conditions cannot be. Inevitably the foster mother will develop preferences, and her charges themselves will surely see to it that all do not have precisely the same treatment in that companionship that counts so much as environment. Moreover, the experiment will be affected by the fact that the babies will not "start fair." To do that each would have to be of exactly the same grade as representative of his own race, for, to speak in extremes, the brightest negro is vastly superior to the dullest white, and probably there are gentle Malays as there are fierce Chinese. Such peculiarities as these the foster mother by wholesale will not be able to discover until years after her choices are made.

With all the obvious difficulties, however, the queer undertaking does have importance as well as interest, and not only as regards the children. That such an adoption could be even planned is significant, for seemingly it is the result of something quite different from the instinct of motherhood. That could not cover so broad a field—would never have suggested a plan that ignores "natural" repugnances so many and so strong. The adoption, if it occurs, cannot be more than legal—a product of scientific curiosity aroused by current discussion.

Clemency Ill Rewarded.

Something of criticism of Gov. BLEASE will be excited in South Carolina, it seems probable, as a result of the way in which the criminals pardoned by him are acting. For the beneficiaries of his widely inclusive clemency are failing, in what one would expect to be a startling number of cases, to make of their liberty such use as would prove that they deserved it.

Several of the ante-Thanksgiving lot of over 100 have fallen back already into the murder habit which caused their imprisonment, and others reveal that an original inability to distinguish between their own property and the property of their neighbors has not been removed either by justice or mercy. The thieves apparently think—as well they may—that the Governor has given them that "license to steal" which long since was recognized by humorists as highly desirable, and the victims of a homicidal tendency are doubtless congratulating themselves on the little risk they run in yielding to it.

In thinking imprisonment a crude device for either the prevention or the punishment of crime, Gov. BLEASE is not alone, by any means. Unlike most critics of the old penology, however, he proposes nothing except its practical abolition by scattering pardons broadcast. That, too, without exaggeration or undue harshness, can be called crude. It is also misuse of a power given, not to defeat the law, but to remedy its ascertained mistakes. This fact Gov. BLEASE seems not to know, or else he ignores it, which is perhaps more unfortunate.

To shut men up behind stone and steel is known to make them worse, in most instances, than they were before, and is therefore a pretty stupid proceeding, but for it there is at least the excuse that for the time being society is safe from their direct attacks. To set criminals free without any assurance or expectation that their reformation is accomplished or intended, lacks even that poor palliation, but it is Gov. BLEASE'S way.

A BLUNDER THAT SHOULD NOT BE REPEATED.

(From The Brooklyn Eagle.)

The present Subway should never have been built without provision for an express station at Times Square, the intersection of Broadway and Forty-second Street. The omission of such a station at that point and the confinement of a heavy traffic to the meagre facilities of a local station constituted a blunder which it is now seriously proposed to repeat in the construction of the Broadway line of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's system. Merchants and hotel men in the immediate neighborhood of Times Square are doing their best to induce a change of plan on the part of the Public Service Commission, so that the express station which is projected for Forty-ninth Street shall be transferred to Times Square.

The most formidable, or at least the most conspicuous, argument against the change is that too much congestion would be created at one point with an express station side by side with a local station. To meet this objection it is proposed that the station on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's line be placed under the Interborough station and that a concourse be built stretching from Forty-second to Forty-fourth Street and from the eastern side of Broadway to the western side of Seventh Avenue, to afford ample space for the distribution of passengers. The feasibility and cost of this arrangement must necessarily be determined by expert engineers, but whether this or some other plan be preferable, we believe that an express station should be built, and that the building of it is an undertaking of great public convenience which the experts should earnestly endeavor to accomplish rather than to obstruct.

Without the railroad traffic handled by the Grand Central Station, without the enormous advantages as a distributing point belonging to the Atlantic Avenue Station, without any of the express facilities at the Brooklyn Bridge and Fourteenth Street stations, the local station at Times Square already sells nearly 38,000 tickets a day. It has become the distributing point for a great and growing hotel, theatre, and store patronage. Proper express transit at that point is the especial concern of Brooklynites, who, in order to reach the heart of the uptown district of Manhattan, have to transfer from Brooklyn Subway trains at the Grand Central and to make a second transfer at the same point on their way home. When the case is fully presented to the Public Service Commission it will be surprising, indeed, if they do not reconsider their decision and place the express station where it will do the greatest good to the greatest number.

THE FORTY-SECOND STREET EXPRESS STATION.

[From The Brooklyn Standard Union.]

No sensible man need have any doubt where the uptown Manhattan west side stations of the B. R. T. subway should be placed to serve the public. At Thirty-third Street and the Pennsylvania-Long Island junction; at Forty-second and the Grand Central, New England, Long Island and Interborough systems, and at Fifty-ninth, where the line sweeps around to the east and the Queensboro Bridge, are the points which even a blind man can see must necessarily be those of stops and transfers of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Statistics of existing traffic demonstrate these conclusions, and there is no dobut that with increase of facilities, increase of demands, which can only be met by stations at these central, focal points, will be inevitable. A four-deck station at Times Square may, it is true, cost more at the beginning than a single, shallower one at Forty-eighth, but it will be much the cheapest in the long run; for time is money in this day and generation and nobody wants to be spending time and strength in making up that lost by others' stupidity or foolishness.

It will be a great pity if through pride of engineering opinion, penny-wise-and-pound-foolish economy, or any inside real estate speculation the free and effective use of this costly and magnificent system of transportation, through which the currents of travel, as of blood in the body, should circulate, is constricted, impeded and robbed of any part of its efficiency value. It would be a capital crime to add another example to the long list of blunders of bridges, stations, and terminals, which fail of their purpose and are monuments only to the wrong-headedness of the men who planned and built them.

Subway Station at 123d Street.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Hundreds of hours of time and energy are wasted daily at the Broadway Subway, between 116th and 129th Streets. There should be by all means a Subway station at 123d Street and Broadway. There are thousands of persons who must daily spend time and energy to make a long surface trip from the immediate vicinity of 123d Street in order to reach a Subway entrance. It is a shame that there has not been an entrance put at 123d Street long before now. The population in this neighborhood is so dense now that the people have reached the limit of endurance.

LEIPSIC EXHIBITION

Should Have Support of American Printing Industries.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Department of State at Washington expresses the opinion that the time is now too short to obtain an appropriation and prepare and install a suitable national exhibit of the book and printing industries of the United States at the International Exhibit of the Book Industry and the Graphic Arts to be held at Leipsic, May to October, 1914. One may hope that this opinion is not final, and that Congress may still be induced to take action.

The printing business, together with paper making, book binding, type founding, engraving, lithographing, advertising, &c., forms one of the largest and certainly the most important of all the great enterprises of our country. The exhibit at Leipsic is international in scope. We have every assurance that it will be efficiently managed, and that a display from this country would be heartily welcomed and would receive generous consideration. It is not surprising that the Department of State finds it difficult to see how the United States Government can make an exhibition at this late day; but it is very surprising that the enormous printing, paper-making, book-publishing, and advertising interests of this country do not see at once that Germany is offering them an opportunity to exploit their activities which it would be very bad business policy to neglect.

Even if we were to assume that the direct results of the exhibit which Leipsic invites them to make will be small and not easily discovered, there still remain the good results which will of necessity follow the co-operation between all the great interests allied to printing in the preparing and adequate presentation to the world of the work they are doing.

We must assume that those engaged in the "production of print and picture," with all that the phrase implies, are well equipped, in both intelligence and self-interest, to see the value of their participation in a great world-wide exhibit of their industries. It should then be plain to them that an exhibition of printing and graphic arts, in the heart of one of the most progressive of modern nations, in a city long famous as the home of a great school of printing and of a great museum of the craft, confined by its very nature to a limited range of subjects and presenting those subjects in a full, elaborate, and intensive manner, offers an opportunity for the exploitation of our most important and most rapidly growing industry which should not be neglected.

OLD LANDMARKS GOING.

Astor House Nearly the Last of Famous Broadway Hotels.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The passing of the old Astor House and the demolition of the southern half of the building mark the disappearance of about the last of the old landmarks in lower New York. All of the formerly well-known hotels below Union Square have disappeared, and few of the present generation can recall more than one or two of them.

Broadway from time immemorial has always been the "Main Street" of New York. From the time of old Wouter Van Twiller, then Governor of New Amsterdam, down to the present time it has always been the centre of the life and bustle of the great metropolis. When the City Hall was built, in 1804, the upper end of Broadway was at Chambers Street, and the story is vouched for in history that the city authorities sought to economize by using brownstone for the north side or back of the building, instead of white marble, as it was so far uptown few people would see that side of the building, and the brownstone is there to-day, painted white to conform with the rest of the building.

Up to the early seventies nearly all the theatres and a large number of the hotels were below Fourteenth Street, Twenty-third Street being considered uptown, even as late as 1880. In addition to the Astor House, the old Stevens House was at Morris Street, the Merchants' Hotel on Greenwich Street, at the corner of Dey Street; French's Hotel on the site of the present Pulitzer Building, Delmonico's at Chambers Street, the Metropolitan at Prince Street, including Niblo's Garden; Grand Central (now Broadway Central) at Bond Street, the Prescott House, the Ashland, St. Nicholas, New York, (afterward Cranston's;) St. Denis, Sinclair House, all of these were below Fourteenth Street, with the Continental at Twenty-first Street, and the Langham at Twenty-second Street and Fifth Avenue. Of all the above the only ones left are the old Broadway Central and the St. Denis.

Mrs. Sarah J. Hale.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As one of the descendants of Mrs. Sarah Josepha Hale, I cordially thank you for your generous and just appreciation of her works, literary and otherwise. Her authorship of the poem, "Mary's Lamb," has been frequently denied, and I am glad to see that you have given your powerful testimony in her favor.

I do not know if her organization of a bazaar was meritorious, and I am inclined to believe that such as have had to attend her imitators' efforts do not bless her memory. But her motive, which you forgot to give, was certainly a good one. The money collected through that bazaar, and by her other efforts, was used to complete the Bunker Hill Monument at Boston, where it rears its proud head, but does not lie.

In regard to Mrs. Hale's relationship with the Canadian philologist you have fallen into a curious error, which I beg leave to correct. Horatio Hale was her son, the second of three, and not a connection by marriage. He married a lady of Canada and settled in that country, and on that account has been included in the British Dictionary of National Biography. He was born in 1817 at Newport, N. H., and never, to my knowledge, renounced his allegiance to America.

Thanksgiving Day Nuisances.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot say whether your recent editorial article, "Thanksgiving Nuisance," has had a good effect or not, but the "young brigands" to whom you then referred have been noticeably this Thanksgiving less of a nuisance than previous Thanksgivings. They at least have not been so abundant or so pertinacious in this Borough of Brooklyn. This is a step in the right direction.

But there are worse nuisances that need abating, among them cowbells and fishhorns, not to mention the nerve-racking din of a continuous inferno on most of our thoroughfares.

Street Signs Cannot Be Seen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The names of our New York streets cannot be seen at night from approaching street cars, as they are in shadow. It would be well to have an additional sign on the side of each post facing the street cars, where it would come under the light of the lamps and could be plainly seen. This would be an advantage to both passengers and conductors.

Don't Pay the Overcharge.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I had occasion to use a taxicab to-day and was charged 15 cents over the new rate. I asked the chauffeur if they were not conforming to the new decisions. He replied, "No, because no one has notified us." Is that necessary, or when I use a taxicab should I refuse to pay the old rate and be driven to the station house?

ART NOTES.

French 18th Century Paintings at Fischer's—C. Calusd's Pictures.

The Boston Evening Transcript, in commenting on the purchase of Gainsborough's "Market Cart" by Judge Elbert H. Gary, speaks of it as the most recent Gainsborough to be "pried loose from Europe." It was bought from the Agnews, who paid, it will be remembered, $100,000 for it at Christie's several months ago. This particular firm has done rather a rushing business in Gainsboroughs. It sold to Mr. Morgan the famous "Duchess of Devonshire" and also the beautiful "Miss Linley and Her Brother," now on view in the Bond Street Gallery, and causing the English critics publicly to agonize because they are so soon to lose it. The portrait of "Mrs. Payne-Gallway and Son," by Reynolds, is in the same exhibition, and is extolled by the critics of the press on the same note of lamentation.

***

The Armenian painter, C. Calusd, is showing his pictures at 46 West Sixty-ninth Street until Dec. 22, under the auspices of H. H. Topakyan, Persian Consul General in New York. Mr. Calusd has painted a number of New York subjects, among them a canvas entitled "Castles of Wealth," which must be supposed fairly to fit our sky-scrapers as they are seen by the ambitious foreigner who seeks this particular harbor. The subject in which the artist shows himself at his best, however, is the open sea, where he is quite literally at home. He makes an almost exciting statement of cross movements of the waves and the great swell of the underlying currents for those who are happy at sea, and those who are not will hardly care to gaze long at his "Tremendously Ruffled." In "Belated Help" one gets a keen sensation of the cold salt air and stinging spray, and there are other pictures that proclaim the right of the painter to say something about midocean conditions. In marked contrast with these strong and genuine records of vigorous experience are the admirable little studies of farmyard subjects, cocks fighting, ducks preening themselves, nonchalant turkeys, all seen with an eye keen to catch the beauty of brilliant feathers against the tawny and neutral hues of the barnyard.

***

An exhibition of French eighteenth century pictures of unusual interest opened at the Fischer Galleries this week. There is a Watteau, strolling players and a background of verdure, which has been too drastically brightened up and has lost its characteristic mystery, but there are Paters which represent that excellent painter on his highest plane, with his native sturdiness of spirit somewhat subdued and refined to a more than usual delicacy of line, a more than usual daintiness of color. How gallant were the gentlemen, how gay the ladies in the eighteenth century gardens. One thinks of nothing but flowers. But they were not quite French flowers in Watteau's hands and Pater's. They had something of the robust quality of the Flemish roses that bloom in season and out, and speak of a race that grew strong plants and loved plump ladies. The Pater pictures come from the Jules Porges collection.

François Hubert Drouais is light of hand and scrupulous in his delightful portrait of a lady with her dog, and Danleau is enchanting in his portrait of a little girl, her blonde hair brushed high above a face like a rose leaf, and her arms filled with flowers. Nettier is sincere beyond his habit in his fine portrait of the fat and fair Madame Miromesnil, and it is rare to see a better Largillière than this of Mademoiselle Duclos, the famous actress, as she appears in her armchair, her animated and intelligent face for the nonce assuming no other than its natural expression. This portrait is much to be preferred to that in Paris, where the lady is represented as somewhat too energetically flinging her arms toward the sympathetic heavens, and failing to triumph wholly over the disadvantages of embonpoint.

***

A loan exhibition of the works of Edouard Manet, retrospective in character, opens to-day at the new Durand-Ruel Galleries and gives the public an opportunity to trace the same untroubled development of the painter from the pictures he painted in Paris before he was thirty, through his "Spanish period," to the high and happy key of the river pictures painted with Monet on the Seine at Argenteuil.

First Dutch Sermon In 121 Years.

For the first time since the close of the eighteenth century a sermon in Dutch will be preached to-morrow in the First Reformed Church of Brooklyn, Seventh Avenue and Carroll Street. The preacher will be the Rev. Seth van der Werf of Michigan, Secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church. He is a native of Holland and will deliver a short sermon in Dutch, after the Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar, the pastor, has preached to the congregation at the morning service. In 1792, after a controversy, English supplanted Dutch in the service at the old First Church of Brooklyn.

Mr. Flexner's Appointment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My observation convinces me that Mr. Flexner's appointment to the Board of Education is most wise and admirable. Mr. Flexner's associates on the board will find him both able and ready to shed light upon perplexing questions, to co-operate, to confer, and to direct bewildered minds. His truly wonderful capacity in educational matters will inaugurate satisfying combinations in the educational system of the city, which will be found solid at any point.

SUNSET SKIES.

Sunset Skies! Sunset Skies!
Light, in radiant protest dies;
Over the marsh a curlew flies;
A marsh-hen, hidden, hoarsely cries,
And coming Darkness, loud defies;
A plaintive note, her faith belies;
Home, from his quest, the fisher hies,
Warned by your beacons, Sunset Skies!

Sunset Skies! Sunset Skies!
Day, who the reign of gloom decries,
Paints his robes with your flaring dyes;
His mural crown first claim denies
To moon-crowned Night, whom he descries
Moving stealthily, to surprise;
Across the west, day's banner flies,
Bright with your colors, Sunset Skies!

Sunset Skies! Sunset Skies!
One last pennant, triumphant, flies
Defiance to Night's scornful eyes;
Passionate Day, reluctant, dies;
Roseate Water softly sighs,
And, sighing soft, the Wind replies;
Night flies no truce to Day's allies!
But, jealous, routs you, Sunset Skies!

Sunset Skies! Sunset Skies!
Visions of other lands arise,
Whose changeless splendor never dies;
Yet, I wonder if Paradise
Fairer seems to wakening eyes
That, weary of earth's tears and sighs,
Trials, sorrows, and sad good-byes,
Close to your beauty, Sunset Skies!

TAXI OWNERS WIN POINT AGAINST CITY

Need Not Show Books in Suit to Set Aside New Rates as Confiscatory.

WILL HASTEN THE TRIAL

Haverty's Counsel Advises Ignoring Ordinance in Serving Hotels After Magistrate's Decision.

The Yellow Taxicab Company won a point yesterday in its fight to resist the new public hack ordinance when the Appellate Division granted its appeal from an order obtained by the Corporation Counsel to inspect its books, papers, and documents. The court held that the city was not entitled to such an examination since the burden of proof that the new taxicab rates and conditions of business prescribed by the new ordinance were confiscatory was on the company.

The Corporation Counsel had asked for the inspection on the allegation that these papers and books were material to the most important question at issue, and that the city would be at a disadvantage if it could not inspect the books before trial.

The granting of the appeal also removes the ground for the city's objection to an immediate trial of the company's suit to break the ordinance, which was based on the allegation that it would take a long time to make the requisite examination of the company's data.

The Yellow Taxicab Company is the only large owner of taxicabs which failed to take out public licenses for its cars after the Appellate Division dismissed the temporary injunctions against the enforcement of the ordinance pending trial of the suits to break the injunction. Since this action of the court the company has been operating only as a private hackman, and has solicited no trade from the public stands which it formerly occupied as private stands under agreements with hotels.

Two non-union chauffeurs, John Binney and John O'Grady, who were arrested in the taxicab strike in which Mrs. Catharine Haverty played the leading part, were discharged yesterday by Magistrate Nolan in the Yorkville Court. The men were arrested because they did not have the proper license and by an arrangement with the Corporation Counsel and the District Attorney's office they were discharged because their alleged offense was committed before the Appellate Division dissolved the injunction restraining the operation of the new taxicab ordinance.

But John W. Browne, counsel for Haverty's Taxicabs, which serve the Belmont and Murray Hill Hotels, said that the dismissal was in fact a decision against the legality of the ordinance so far as it applied to the hotels. He pointed to this section of the law:

> This ordinance shall not apply to or govern any vehicle hired or obtained from a livery stable or garage and which does not solicit patronage upon the streets; nor to any omnibus running by authority of any ordinance, law, charter, or permit upon a fixed route through the city.

"The Haverty taxicabs that are set apart for the hotel service do not solicit patronage on the strets," said Mr. Browne, "and I maintain that Magistrate Nolan by his action to-day has expressed the same opinion. It is clear that a hotel may order as many taxicabs as it pleases in anticipation of trade, just as it may buy meat or coffee or anything else that is certain to be needed in the running of its business. The ordinance is subordinate to the rights of the abutting owners, and these owners have a right to have their vehicles stand in front of their property. The Appellate Division has held that the abutting owner has the right of free use of his easement, and this right is superior to any ordinance.

"The new ordinance is certainly faulty. In view of Magistrate Nolan's action to-day I shall instruct my clients to use the vehicles assigned to hotels as freely as they ever did, and to charge the same fares as were charged before the ordinance was enacted. If there is any interference from the authorities the interference will be restrained by the courts until the new issue raised by Magistrate Nolan's decision is settled."

O. K. WASHINGTON SURVEY.

Lines Run by First President When Lad of 19 Found Perfect.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—George Washington's surveying done in 1751, when, as a lad of 19, he ran lines through the Virginia wilderness for Lord Fairfax, has been checked up by Government surveyors, who have found the work perfect. Washington, running his lines with primitive instruments and bonfires on hilltops, left monuments and boundaries to which technically educated surveyors, using high power transits and all the refined and accurate methods modern instruments allow, have been able to find no variation.

Conductor, Arturo Toscanini.

"Boris Godunow," by Moussorgsky, was recognized as one of the most interesting new productions of recent years at the Metropolitan Opera House last season, when it was heard for the first time in this country. Its repetition was therefore a foregone conclusion, and the performance of it last evening was welcomed. Its effect is produced notwithstanding a lack of certain operatic elements that might well make the conventional operatic manager suspicious of it.

There is no prima donna; the hero is a basso; the "love interest" is of an entirely episodic and unimportant character, and the chorus is raised to an interest and significance entirely out of keeping with the notion that makes a chorus an agreeable interlude and diversion, if that notion still anywhere survives.

The originality, native strength, almost barbaric wildness, and the potent expressiveness of Moussorgsky's music were again deeply felt. Its strength is often crude, often rude and rough. There is monotony in its coldness; a sullen monotony; pitiless repetition, use of those 'ostinato "—obstinately repeated in passages familiar in Russian music.

The music is racy of the Russian soil through the use of the Russian folk tunes that are wound so closely into its fibre, or of the spirit of those folk tunes that dominates it. Moussorgsky's harmony is bold, sometimes fiercely harsh, modern to-day in its effect, and its modernity is remarkable when the listener remembers that this work was composed in Russia forty years ago, and that, moreover, some of its venturesomeness has been modified by the cautious Rimsky Korsakoff's revision.

This elemental power in inspiration and execution, this vividness of emotional expression, this picturesqueness, and remoteness of scene, give the opera a strange power over the occidental audience. There is a novel and seizing imaginative quality in the work, rude and unpolished as it is in certain passages, filled now with a grim sadness and gloom, now with boisterous gayety, now with grace and vivacity, and rising with relentless power to a tragic culmination.

The performance last season was one of the triumphs of the Metropolitan's recent years in its completeness and the success with which the score was given powerful effects, especially the representation of a cowed and finally rebellious populace, aimed at by the composer were realized. This success was fully repeated last evening. Again the chorus may properly be said to have been the star performers of the occasion.

The stunning effects of the first and third scenes of the first act, and the first one of the last act, were fully realized. It was appropriate that after the first act Mr. Setti, the chorusmaster, and Mr. Speck, the stage manager, should have appeared with Mr. Didur to receive the applause that was given, even though probably few in the audience knew to whom they were paying tribute.

The cast of the principal solo singers was the same as last season, except that the Czarewitch Theodore was represented by a newcomer, Miss Sophie Braslau, and Marina by Miss Margarete Ober. The programme correctly stated it to be Miss Braslau's first appearance, though she had sung the music of the Voice of the Hell of the Grail in the Thanksgiving performances of "Parsifal"—without "appearing."

This first attempt was successful, pleasing, and sympathetic, both in voice and in action, and showing an unexpected assurance. Miss Ober effected a striking appearance as Marina, but the part has little significance in the development of the drama, but she made a highly effective episode. Her voice was brilliant and powerful, much less injuriously affected by her energetic dramatic temperament than at her first appearance as Ortrud, yet there were some traces of such injurious influence.

Mr. Didur repeated his remarkable impersonation of the usurping Czar, Boris Godounow, that showed so fine a tragic power, so far-reaching a command of histrionic resources. There may be at certain points an exaggeration of his effects; but his scenes in the Kremlin, ending with his agonizing death, are memorable passages of acting. Much credit is due to the others in the cast who have less important, but still significant, parts—Mme. Maubourg as the Nurse, Mr. Bada as Schouisky, Mr. Rothier as Pimenn, Mr. Althouse as Dimitri, Mr. Segurola as Varlaam, Mme. Maubourg as the Innkeeper, and Mr. Reiss as the "Simpleton." Of Mr. Toscanini's part in the results of "Boris Godunow" it is scarcely possible to speak duly, so much ground would have to be covered. The achievements of the orchestra under his direction were astonishing.

The scenery, of unimagined barbaric richness, and the gorgeous costumes aroused as much admiration as they did last season.

There will be a change in the programme at the Princess Theatre next Friday evening, when "Fear" will be withdrawn to make room for two new plays. "Hari Kari," a tragedy of the Diplomatic Service in Washington, by Julian Johnson, and "Russia," an episode of the revolution in St. Petersburg, which was presented at a private performance at the Princess just before the season opened and then withdrawn.

Oliver Morosco has received an offer of $100,000 for three months of Laurette Taylor and her present company in "Peg o' My Heart" at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, during the Summer of 1915.

PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

Music of the Classical Masters—A Clarinet Concerto by Mozart.

The Philharmonic Society's concert in its afternoon series yesterday was devoted to the "classical" writers, Bach, Mozart, Haydn, and Beethoven. The classical writers have not lost their attractiveness, apparently, and the concert was enjoyable. Nothing in it was more enjoyable than Bach's splendid Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, in G major, for stringed instruments, music of inexhaustible vitality and inextinguishable fire, played with great sonority. Something new to many from the vast treasures of Mozart's works was offered in the concerto for clarinet and orchestra, played by Mr. Leroy, first clarinettist of the orchestra. It is music in the agreeable style, though not perhaps the greatest style, of Mozart, and written with that instinctive feeling for the true and characteristic effect of the instrument that so rarely failed him, for whatever medium he was writing. Mr. Leroy played it with fluency and agreeable tone, with artistic phrasing; and gave pleasure with it. Perhaps somewhat more pleasure would have been given had the orchestral accompaniment been a little more finished and more thoroughly in accord with the soloist's intentions; and this is something that may often be said of Mr. Stransky's accompaniments.

Haydn was represented by his so-called "Military" symphony, which Mr. Stransky played with sympathy, as he often has before in Haydn's works. Finally came Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony, which has had two performances in New York in a musical season still young.

PRAISES MODERN SEX PLAYS

"Good for Society," Says Poet Keeler to Theatrical Association.

At a meeting of the United Theatrical Association, held yesterday at the Hotel Astor, it was declared by Charles Augustus Keeler, the California poet and author, that the modern sex plays were a good thing for the stage and society. Mr. Keeler also came out strongly for vaudeville and musical comedy.

"New York is an American centre," said Mr. Keeler, "and it is a great educational centre; its magazines, its daily newspapers, and its dramas are all serving their sphere in the uplift of the country's art and literature."

After stating that he had seen all of the leading productions, the poet said:

"I am glad to have seen the problem plays, and I am glad to say that I admire the courage of those who have so ably presented them. These productions, bearing so firmly and intelligently on great questions and problems of the day, have a good reason for a place in the niche of progress in the drama. This applies to problem plays whether touching upon social justice or sex. 'Damaged Goods' and similar plays should be encouraged.

"We are not wholly a materialistic country; the policy of President Wilson as regards our Southern problems shows this. The drama is not wholly materialistic, and the present trend shows the paving of the way for some idealistic dramatic productions which will last."

THE BROADWAY FOR PLAYS.

Although the cry of "Too many theatres" has been heard for many months, Marcus Loew, the "small time" vaudeville proprietor, who broke into the ranks of the producing managers with "The Pleasure Seekers" at the Winter Garden a few weeks ago, is going to tempt fate by turning the Broadway Theatre, now one of his picture houses, back into a "legitimate" playhouse next month with the best seats at less than the $2 scale. The Anderson Gaiety Company is to open the new Strand Theatre at dollar prices.

Other theatrical managers are ready to break into the cheaper field here in New York. Henry Miller announced in San Francisco several days ago that he was making plans to establish three theatres in three parts of New York, with a stock company in each.

"Each company will have a salary list of about $2,500," said Mr. Miller, "which will mean that splendid actors will be employed. Then each company will play a certain play for two weeks, then moving from one theatre to the other. The prices will be as low as they can be made, and we may even play for 10 cents, with the quality of the play and of the players of the highest order."

GEO. B. POST DEAD; NOTED ARCHITECT

Designer of New York Stock Exchange and Many Famous Buildings Was Almost 76.

PLANNED VANDERBILT HOME

Awarded Gold Medal of American Institute of Architects in 1910 —Also Honored by France.

George B. Post, founder of the firm of George B. Post & Son, architects of 101 Park Avenue and designer of many famous buildings in this city and throughout the United States, died yesterday morning after a brief illness, at his Summer home in Bernardsville, N. J. Mr. Post would have celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday on Dec. 15 next. He made a visit to the offices of his firm on Wednesday, and from there he returned to his home in Bernardsville, where he had spent the Autumn. On Thanksgiving Day he was taken ill suddenly, and his daughter, Mrs. Arthur Turnbull, and her husband, who were with him at the time, called in Dr. Francis Delafield, the pathologist, who made a diagnosis of the case. According to the announcement made from the offices of George W. Post & Co., Mr. Post's death was due to causes arising from old age. Mr. Post's city home was at 129 East Sixty-ninth Street.

George Browne Post was born in New York City Dec. 15, 1837, the son of Joel B. and Abby M. Post. He took up the study of civil engineering in the School of Science of New York University and received his C. E. degree from that institution in 1858. In 1908 Columbia University conferred on him the degree of LL. D. Soon after his graduation from New York University, Mr. Post studied architecture with the late Richard M. Hunt, the architect, who imported designs which distinguish many of the landmarks in this city. In 1860 Mr. Post formed a partnership with one of his fellow-students, Charles D. Gambrill.

After the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Post entered the Twenty-second Regiment, New York Volunteers, serving first as Captain. As a volunteer aid, he was on the staff of Gen. Burnside, commanding the Army of the Potomac in 1862 at the first battle of Fredericksburg. For gallantry he was promoted to Major, and later he was elevated to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel of the Twenty-second Regiment.

Mr. Post married Miss Alice M. Stone, daughter of William W. Stone of New York, Oct. 14, 1863. They had five children, George B. Post, Jr., William S. Post, A. Wright Post, James Otis Post, and Miss Alice W. Post, now Mrs. Arthur Turnbull.

Some of the buildings in this city designed by Mr. Post are the New York Cotton Exchange, New York Produce Exchange, New York Stock Exchange, College of the City of New York, building formerly occupied by THE NEW YORK TIMES on Park Row, Pulitzer Building, and the building of the Equitable Life Assurance Society that was burned in 1912. Among the New York residences designed by Mr. Post are those of Cornelius Vanderbilt and Collis P. Huntington, Fifty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue. He also designed the buildings of the Prudential Life and Mutual Life Insurance Companies in Newark, N. J.; the Wisconsin State Capitol, Cleveland Trust Company Building, Cleveland, Ohio, and the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Buildings at the Chicago Exposition, covering more than forty acres.

Mr. Post was decorated Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur, France, in 1901, and in 1910 the gold medal of the American Institute of Architects, the highest gift within the bestowal of that body, was awarded to him in the presence of a distinguished company, including President Taft, in Washington. At that time Mr. Taft congratulated the venerable architect, and said he was glad to live to see in his country the profession develop to such a height in this country and to feel that so much of it had been due to his efforts."

In 1907 Mr. Post was elected an associate academician of the National Academy of Design, and the following year an academician of the academy. In 1907 he also was appointed a honorary corresponding member of the Royal Institute of British Architects. He was a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, President of the American Institute of Architects from 1886 to 1899, President of the New York Chapter of the same, 1904; President of the Architectural League of New York, 1893-7; of the National Arts Club, 1898-1905, having been a charter member of that organization; of the Municipal Art, New York Academy of Science, American Society of Civil Engineers, Chamber of Commerce, Archaeological Institute of America, National Society of Craftsmen, Municipal Art Society, of which he was a Director from 1901 to 1903; Province of Quebec Association of Architects, American Geographical Society, National Geographic Society, Public Art League, Metropolitan Museum of Art, the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, and Century Association.

Mr. Post also was a member of the Century, Union, Lawyers', (Charter,) and Seawanhaka Yacht Club of New York, Cosmos Club of Washington, and Duquesne Club of Pittsburgh.

The funeral services will be held at the University Place Presbyterian Church, at Tenth Street, on Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The interment will be private.

Throng at E. M. Holland's Funeral.

The funeral of E. M. Holland, the well-known actor who died suddenly in Cleveland last Monday, was held yesterday morning in the Little Church Around the Corner. The Rev. Dr. Houghton, a nephew of the minister who read the funeral services over the body of Mr. Holland's father years ago, officiated. The church was crowded with theatrical people, friends of the dead actor, and the chancel was banked with floral offerings. The pall bearers were John Drew, Francis Wilson, De Wolf Hopper, Augustus Thomas, William Courtleigh, Thomas B. Clark, Joseph Grismer, and Clay M. Greene.

BLIND VIOLINIST PLAYS.

Edwin Grasse, Composer, Again Exhibits His Talent.

Edwin Grasse, the blind violinist-composer, gave an interesting concert last night in Aeolian Hall, the programme being made up almost entirely of his own compositions. He was assisted by L. Lorenz Smith, violin; Joseph Kovarek, viola; Willem Durieux, 'cello, and George Falkenstein, piano.

The concert opened with Mr. Grasse's string quartet in D minor, the composer playing first violin. The minuet movement in this was especially liked by the audience. Following this the violinist played a group of three compositions by Goldmark, Paganini-Grasse, and Wieniawski.

Then came Mr. Grasse's Sonata for 'cello and piano in E minor, and the concert closed with his playing three violin pieces of his own composition, "Im Ruderboot," "Wellenspiel," and a Polonaise.

The audience, which was fair in size, demanded a repetition of the "Wellenspiel." In his capacity as violinist, pianist, and composer Mr. Grasse emphasized again last night his threefold talent.

Mrs. T. L. Shevelin Entertains.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Shevelin gave a small dance, followed by a supper, last night at the Plaza. The dance was preceded by a supper given by Capt. Cassatt and Mrs. Cassatt of Philadelphia to Mr. and Mrs. Shevelin, and a party of Philadelphians, all of whom came on for the Army and Navy football game today. After the dinner the guests attended the Shevelin dance in the Plaza's white and gold ballroom. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rawlins, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rough, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Linda Lee Thomas, Miss Catharine Britton, William Rhinelander Stewart, Jr., Harry Day, Jarvis Goer, T. Sandford Beatty, and Ralph Bloomer.

"THE BRIGHTEST, CHEERIEST, HAPPIEST BOOK."

MAKING OVER MARTHA

By JULIE M. LIPPMANN

The FINAL TEST for the success of a book is in the book itself. Every now and then there appears a new book that through sheer intrinsic merit wins its way to the front. A year ago a new book and a new author appeared, unheralded and almost unknown, but the story, because of its merit, its human appeal, its sweet humor and delightful cheeriness, surely won its way to the front. MARTHA BY-THE-DAY, of which it is said "no sweeter humor has been written into a book," has gone through 10 editions, and more people are buying it to-day than ever before.

MISS LIPPMANN has written a new book, MAKING OVER MARTHA, a larger, stronger and even happier story than MARTHA BY-THE-DAY.

"No man of business...can afford to be without it!"

—Vice-President of the National City Bank, New York.

NATIONAL CITY BANK
Wall St., New York. The largest bank in America.

With such authority behind it, this frank statement ought to make all business men think. Isn't it short-sighted not to equip yourself and your employes with this most wonderful of all instruments of human knowledge—the new Encyclopaedia Britannica?

Any day down at the National City Bank in Wall Street you will find the new Encyclopaedia Britannica in use in a working business library that is the product of the highest grade of business acumen.

The Standard Oil interests have never been behindhand in seizing upon aids to success. The men conducting this great institution appreciate the value of expert knowledge; knowledge that is available at any time it is wanted, and on any possible sort of occasion. They are men quick to recognize the latest and best means for improving efficiency. They make money work, whether they put it into an encyclopaedia or a share of stock. And they know that system counts, in making information accessible no less than in the handling of checks.

A large manufacturer of flavoring extracts found that information the book gave him about materials used in his business was alone worth more than its price.

A big company engaged in the manufacture of steel and brass products had the article on Iron and Steel reproduced for special use in connection with its business.

An expert on commerce, writing of the industrial articles, says: "This work ought to find a place on the shelves of every manager of big works in the English-speaking world."

THE NEW ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA

11th Edition (Published by The Cambridge University Press)

is the most highly perfected instrument for making knowledge available for use. It is the only complete systematized inventory of all the knowledge that has practical value, and is the product of the organized cooperation of acknowledged leaders of the world's thought in every department of human activity.

The Index—a Unique Feature

THE most comprehensive and highly perfected card-index system ever put together was probably that maintained in the editorial offices of this work for gathering, sifting, classifying and checking the knowledge of today, in all fields of achievement in its most recent developments. (The index volume, volume 29, with its 500,000 references, grew out of this great intelligence bureau. No other encyclopaedia is indexed. It more than doubles the efficiency of the Britannica.)

Fifteen hundred practical experts and specialists from 21 countries worked together on a systematic plan to produce this entirely new work, and the unprecedented sum of $1,500,000 was spent to make it.

Whether you are manager or clerk, banker, merchant, manufacturer or salesman, steel man or grocer, this work has a claim upon you. It renders a service unparalleled in this day of specialization.

"The best library for the business man. Progressive firms should see to it that it is not only in their offices, but in the homes of those on whom their business success depends," says a specialist on business system.

Last Opportunity on Monthly Payments

THE CLOSING OF THE SUBSCRIPTION LIST opened by the Cambridge University Press for the sale of the New Encyclopaedia Britannica at specially low prices and by monthly payments of only $5 marks a radical change in the method of purchase, and the successful conclusion of a bold enterprise.

The 11th Edition of this work, an entirely new and original survey of human knowledge, was designed to meet the need of the present day for a work of universal reference based upon the latest authority. Upon its completion by the editors, after eight years' continuous labor, an introductory offer was made, at an exceptional price, by direct sale to the public.

The price was exceptional because it was 40 per cent less per volume than the price at which previous new editions of this work had been issued.

The purpose of this early sale at a low price and for small monthly payments was to bring a great educational work, upon the preparation of which over $1,500,000 had been expended, within reach of the largest circle of readers, and to make its usefulness widely and rapidly known. These two objects have now been achieved, more than 50,000 sets having been distributed.

IN ENGLAND, THE OFFER AT THE PRESENT PRICES WILL BE TERMINATED ON DECEMBER 20TH, AND IN THIS COUNTRY, SHORTLY THEREAFTER.

EDWARD HOWARD GRIGGS
The Philosophy of Art

What is Art? What does Art do to the artist who creates? What does Art do to the student who appreciates? These questions underlie this work which deals with sculpture, painting, music and poetry. The author's remark that it is "not a restatement of criticism and philosophy, but the condensed result of twenty-five years' study of works of art in each of the four fields, recording and interpreting what these masterpieces have done to my senses, emotions, imagination and intellect," will stimulate interest among the large following that awaits any utterance from his magnetic pen. $1.50 net; by mail, $1.60.

PAUL HERVIEU
The Labyrinth

This represents the best in modern French drama. James Huneker speaks of it as "a great section of throbbing, real life." "In no other play has Hervieu preserved so great a height of passionate emotional power, nor exposed the relentless working out of human motives struggling with forces greater than themselves; nowhere else has he sustained his interest and developed his story simultaneously with so sure a hand," to quote the introduction which covers Hervieu's dramas and outlines his life. $1.00 net; by mail, $1.10.

AUGUST STRINDBERG
By the Open Sea

In this, Strindberg's best novel, the characters develop through words and deeds. The background is woven from the lives of fisherfolk into a striking tapestry of revenge, love, hate, prejudice and superstition. The unfolding of the hero's mind as it responds to modern scientific thought, and the psychology of Marie's course, are notable accomplishments. Nature life in the North—its fish, vegetation, rocks, its mirages and winds and waters—is delightfully presented. This aspect of Strindberg will attract those who know only his dramatic and self-revelatory works. $1.25 net; by mail, $1.35.

B. W. Huebsch, Publisher, 225 Fifth avenue, New York.

You know Hopalong Cassidy—"the best fighting man in the Southwest"; wherever he is a lot of things happen and they happen quick. Here's another rattling good story about him and his pals of the "Bar 20."

The Coming of Cassidy and the Others
by
CLARENCE E. MULFORD

It tells how Buck Peters started the famous "Bar 20" ranch, how the greatest outfit in Texas was gathered together, and incidentally how Hopalong got his hop. It's a great story.

The Unexpurgated Case Against Woman Suffrage

By

SIR ALMROTH E. WRIGHT, M. D., F. R. S.

Cloth, 12mo, 188 pages.....$1.00 net
(Sent prepaid on receipt of price)

"The author, out of his scientific investigation which is based on a knowledge of medicine and a careful consideration of the laws of political economy and of political philosophy, makes out an argument which merits most careful consideration."

MRS. ARTHUR M. DODGE, President
National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

"He argues that woman, on the whole, is inferior in public experience and in public capacity to man. This does not mean that woman is inferior to man in other qualities equally necessary for the welfare of the State—it does mean that in politics she is out of the place she can render the most efficient service to the State."

WOMAN'S PROTEST, November, 1913.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Irregular Price Movement, with Weakness in Special Issues —Call Money 10 Per Cent.

It was in a somewhat ragged market that trading was resumed on the Stock Exchange yesterday, but for the most part the weakness which was shown appeared in what are frequently classed as special issues. The stocks usually most prominent in the trading suffered relatively little as a whole and in one or two instances, notably in Union Pacific, there was a fair show of strength. Dear call money, accentuated by the continued outflow of gold to Canada was the main underlying factor in the day's market movement. Business recession remained an active topic of discussion and another element in the situation, the slackness of the real estate market, was emphasized by the failure of a realty concern of this city. This became a factor in the decline which occurred in one or two realty owning companies represented in the Stock Exchange list. The embarassment of the concern, for which a petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday, was regarded as a manifestation of a condition in the real estate market which has for some time past been a matter of considerable comment in financial circles. As for the business situation, the point most discussed was the continuing falling off in forward business. Summarizing the trade position, Dun's Review says in its weekly digest that lessened activity reflects prevailing uncertainty regarding the future but adds that the distribution of merchandise for immediats requirements continues large, although retrenchment rather than expansion characterizes the situation as a whole. This is the story which has become familiar in recent weeks of an active hand-to-mouth trade with most merchants showing reluctance to commit themselves very far on orders for the future.

As for the money situation it must be said that the losses which the New York banks have suffered through the gold export movement to Canada, which has run to much larger figures than was expected at the outset, have brought about a condition which has put an unusual tax upon the banks at this centre. The further Canadian gold demand amounted yesterday to about $3,000,000, and as this came on the final day of preparation for next Monday's large disbursements it forced the call rate to 10 per cent. This is the figure to which call money went in the closing days of October when the payments falling due Nov. 1 were being provided for. Then as an addition to the intercst and dividend disbursements the paying off of a large Interborough Rapid Transit bond issue had to be cared for. The transactions calling for special arrangements on this occasion include the $40,000,000 New Haven note issue, which becomes due on Dec. 1.

There was a wide gap between the minimum and maximum estimates of the cash loss which the banks have suffered this week, but no doubt the loss has been large. It also seemed probable yesterday that to-day's statement would show an increase in loans, with the probability that the surplus would be very much cut down. Some thought there might even be a repetition of the Nov. 1 experience, when a temporary deficiency in reserves was caused by the financing of the large payments at that date. The weekly statement of the Bank of England, which the financial community had before it on the resumption of business yesterday, showed a fair gain in gold which so far offset increased reserve requirements that the proportion of reserve to liabilities fell only a little over half of 1 per cent. At 54.38 it stands still well above the percentage at this date in most recent years. The specie holdings of the Bank of France increased slightly for the week, but the gain was small compared with the expansion in discounts.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 5@10 per cent., with the last loan at 6 per cent. The renewal rate was 7 per cent.

Time money rates were 5@5¼ per cent. for sixty and ninety days, and 4¾@5 per cent. for four, five, and six months. Commercial paper was quoted at 5¼@5¾ per cent. for t.e best names.

Clearing House exchanges, $402,722,-631; balances, $16,207,093; Sub-Treasury credit balances, $1,894,019.

The local banks lost $8,077,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations this weeks.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 3 per cent. for short and 4 13-16 per cent. for three months' bills; Berlin, 4⅝ per cent.; Paris, 3½ per cent. Money was 4½@4¾ per cent. in London and 4½ per cent. for the settlement in Berlin.

The Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 49½ pfennigs. The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 29½ centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Canada and Our Gold.

Montreal exchange on New York advanced slightly yesterday to a point where the discount was so slight as to leave very little profit on shipments of gold from this centre. It costs 65 cents to send $1,000 in gold coin by express to Montreal and one quotation of exchange at Montreal, as published in Wall Street in the late afternoon, indicated that New York drafts were carrying a discount of about 62½ cents to $1,000. One reason for the heavy flow of gold to Canada was that the banks desired to strengthen their reserve position for the end-of-the-year statement which is made up as of Nov. 30, and the belief was expressed in some banking circles yesterday that there would come now a lull in the movement of the metal as no more could be sent in time to aid the "window dressing" operations of the Dominion banks. Another element remains to be considered, however. Canada shipped through our ports this Fall an exceptionally large amount of grain in an unusually short period of time. The crop was excellent, the weather for threshing good and facilities for shipment through the lakes out of the ordinary, chiefly because early harvesting enabled shippers to utilize lake traffic extensively before Winter storms came along. In consequence of these conditions Canada still has a substantial credit balance here, despite the free movement of gold in the last week, and it may be that considerably more will be taken next week.

***

An Extra Dividend Helps.

With the exception of Nevada Consolidated, the copper shares on the Stock Exchange followed the trend of the market yesterday and lost ground. The declaration of an extra dividend of 10 per cent. on the par value of Nevada Consolidated appeared to act as a decided stimulus to buying. The dividend was announced around 2:30 o'clock, previous to which not a share of the issue had changed hands. Before the close 1,100 shares were dealt in for a gain of a half point.

***

No Help from London.

If the London stock market was not suffering from as great a dearth of business as the local mart, traders say that there might be considerably more action here in the morning hours. With only a little incentive induced by either a substantial advance or a decline of American issues in the British market before Wall Street starts its day, they would look for a continuance of the movement on this side, perhaps for only a short time, but long enough to add a little zest to the scanning of the ticker. But London has not lately given any indication of waking up. Instead the complaints of poverty among brokers which were voiced in concert two months ago have swelled into a loud chorus, and show no signs of abating. London's participation in yesterday's trading was estimated at 5,000 shares, so evenly divided between purchases and sales that the product was nil as far as effect on sentiment in the Street was concerned.

***

Realty Stock Off.

The receivership proceedings against the New York Real Estate Security Company had an immediate and depressing effect yesterday on the shares of the United States Realty Company, although there is no connection between the two interests. U. S. Realty sold down to 49¾, a loss of 6¼ points from the previous sale, made on Nov. 10. It is hard to reconcile the price of this stock with its dividend record. The company paid 4½ per cent. in 1907 and 1908, 4¼ per cent. in 1909, and 5 per cent. annually since. The bid and asked price of U. S. Realty at the close on Wednesday was 53@56.

A Boost for Good Legislation.

State Superintendent of Banks Van Tuyl was ill yesterday, but a representative pointed out that if his bill for putting real estate concerns which issue debenture bonds under the jurisdiction of the Banking Department had been enacted, some of the more recent investors in New York Real Estate Security Company stock might have saved their money. Both the present Superintendent and his predecessor tried hard to get their authority extended to these concerns, but both failed, the last defeat being credited to Gov. Sulzer. The larger and better managed real estate holding companies have been held up as a decoy by many unsound imitators, who have been free to issue an almost unlimited amount of bonds on the equity over the mortgages on property which they hold. There are between 1,300 and 1,400 real estate companies in this State which would be subject to periodical examination if the desired law could be obtained. So long as real estate values advance and tenants are plentiful even the overcapitalized companies among those which have issued debentures on the earning power of the real estate in their name are able to meet interest payments, and perhaps pay dividends, but a recession running a few months is likely to prove fatal. Let a real setback in values occur and the line between the sheep and the goats in this field would become unpleasantly plain, bond men assert.

Cotton Crop Short.

W. P. Brown of New Orleans, a cotton expert, has issued his crop estimate for 1913. He places the yield for the year at 14,100,000 bales, including linters. A crop of this size would prove larger than many authorities looked for under the unfavorable conditions which existed in the Western territory, but it would not supply the demand. Mr. Brown estimates the year's consumption of cotton at 15,100,000 bales, providing the price is not pushed up to a point where it would check the sale of cheaper goods. This year's cotton crop was not only damaged by the drought in the West, but it was further considerably reduced by the ravages of the boll weevil. A large percentage of this year's cotton is below the average in quality.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Lapses Into Dullness After an Early Period of Activity and Strength.

The outside security market was fairly active for a time after the opening, but as the session progressed gradually grew duller, until near the close it was practically at a standstill. The oil stocks were the feature of the early activity, and good gains were made by most of them. Standard Oil of New Jersey at that time sold up 4 points, to 389, but lost all the gain later. United Cigar Stores rose a point, to 90½, but retained only half the gain at the close.

URGES END OF WAR ON CORPORATIONS

Untermyer Notes Alarming Cessation of Business Activity All Over the Country.

RAILROADS MUST BE AIDED

Is for Pardoning Past Misdeeds and Restoring General Prosperity by Constructive Legislation.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 28.—Samuel Untermyer, arch foe of the so-called "Money Trust," speaking before the Economic Club here to-night, argued in favor of a halt in the investigation of past business misdeeds, advocated "living rates" for the railroads, declared the New York Stock Exchange had inaugurated "sweeping reforms," but still needed incorporation to regain public confidence, and proposed a Federal industrial commission to attend to the details of dissolving trusts and with power to authorize temporary agreements fixing prices and output.

"There has been a sudden and alarming cessation in business activity all over the country," said Mr. Untermyer, "and there is a consensus of opinion that it is not due to the changes in the tariff. The disturbances from that cause have been as yet surprisingly trifling. The business depression is said to be due primarily to the unsettlement and uneasiness emanating from the disclosures of rottenness in corporate management, from pending and impending legislation affecting our financial system and the trusts, and to the inability of the railroads to obtain rates that will permit them to maintain their properties and secure fair returns on their invested capital.

"It was inevitable that in a country whose industrial wealth had sprung up so suddenly and expanded so rapidly abuses should have developed due to the absence of remedies and repressive laws adequate to meet the changed conditions. It was essential that we should at least to some extent uncover the defects and weaknesses of the system and the abuses to which they gave rise in order to learn how and where to apply the legislative remedies. That has been the mission of the various investigations of the past few years that have caused such unrest and impatience in financial centres.

"But we know now sufficiently the nature of the disease to apply the remedy. The patient is so ill that further diagnosis will be more likely to kill than to cure. We must be content to apply the remedies with the knowledge at hand.

"I think we should call a halt upon further governmental investigation into the past crimes in the looting of corporations. We all know that many of our railroads and great industrial enterprises and their shareholders have been robbed by those whose duty it was to protect them, that their securities have been fraudulently manipulated on a vast scale, and that the people's own money in their hands has been used to defraud them, and we know now to some extent at least how the game has been worked.

"By pursuing the subject further we would doubtless learn of innumerable more instances not yet uncovered, some of them far more startling and of vastly greater magnitude than those that have been uncovered, but the evidence would be cumulative only. It would deservedly destroy many fair reputations, but it would further unsettle confidence and accomplish no practical good as a basis for constructive work.

"I am in favor of a general amnesty. Let us wipe the slate and begin the work of so reframing and strengthening our laws that there can be no repetition of the past without the certainty of prompt detection and punishment."

Mr. Untermyer suggested a constructive legislative programme including the following proposals:

Pass the pending Currency bill. (I mean the Senate committee Democratic measure.) Besides mobilizing the reserves of the country where they can be made useful for our legitimate commercial needs, it will take them out of Wall Street, will put them where they belong, and will be the first step in the decentralization of the concentration of the control of these vast funds in the hands of a few men in New York.

Compel the incorporation of Stock Exchanges, and the books of their members may be subject to Governmental inspection.

Enforce complete publicity of all corporate transactions and especially require the fullest disclosure of all dealings of bankers, brokers and middlemen in marketing securities that are sold to the public, making all concerned in such transactions criminally liable for misrepresentation or failure to make full and honest disclosure.

Limit the number of Directors of national banks and interstate public service corporations to nine, so as to concentrate and enforce personal responsibility.

Supplement the anti-trust law by constituting a Federal Industrial Commission, to which the courts would turn over the dissolution of corporations that have been declared unlawful.

Give to the new Industrial Commission the power to approve agreements between competitors for a limited term, regulating prices and output to the extent necessary to protect them against ruinous competition, but under conditions that will fully safeguard the public.

Get rid of the so-called "fiscal agencies," voting trusts, interlocking directorates that characterize the banker-management of our great interstate railroads and industrial corporations, and thus restore to these corporations the privileges of freedom of contract and competition in buying their supplies and raising their money requirements that have been so long denied them.

Make it a criminal offense for any officer or director of a corporation to borrow from or make a profit out of his corporation, whether it be a bank, a railroad, or an industrial company.

Prohibit national banks and interstate corporations from having interlocking directors in potentially competing corporations.

Prohibit any company from owning stock of a potentially competing corporation. The "holding" company should be destroyed. No corporation should be permitted to be operated in the interest of another corporation.

Protect minority shareholders by requiring them to be dealt with in the same way as the majority. To that end make cumulative voting compulsory, so that substantial minorities may have minority representation in their corporations.

Place railroad reorganizations under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission and of the courts, so as to protect the helpless security holders against being exterminated or forced into oppressive and unjust plans of reorganization.

On the subject of higher rates for the railroads, Mr. Untermyer said:

"Under a proper system of accounts a large proportion of the railroads of the country is insolvent to-day. By all means put an end to the 'grafting' in the management of their finances and the purchases of properties and supplies. Punish future offenses as severely as you please, but give them living rates or they will perish while we are reframing the laws under which they are hereafter to live. Let us be fair to them, regardless of how they have treated us in the past. The Government cannot afford to be vindictive.

"Remember that wages, materials, maintenance, everything has increased except rates. Even as to the roads that will escape bankruptcy there is no margin to maintain adequate service at present rates. They cannot refinance maturing obligations on the present results of operations.

"From the point of view of the public interest and without regard to the legal or moral rights of shareholders, it is the most short-sighted policy to starve them."

CALL MONEY UP TO 10%.

Rate Equals Year's High Mark—Due to Heavy Gold Export.

Another day of heavy shipments of gold to Canada by local banks brought with it an advance of call money rates yesterday to 10 per cent., a figure equal to the high record of the year, which was established in the first week of the present month. At the close of business, consignments of the precious metal withdrawn from the Sub-Treasury for transfer acros the border amounted to $3,100,000, and the total taken in the last ten days was brought up to $13,450,000.

Collateral causes in sending call funds up were preparations by the banks for dividend and interest payments on Dec. 1 and arrangements by the city for paying off in December many revenue bonds previously issued against collection of taxes. An important item in the disbursements to be made in behalf of corporations is the retirement of $40,000,000 New Haven notes on Dec. 1.

Gold taken for Canada yesterday was $1,500,000 by the American Exchange National Bank, $800,000 by the National City Bank, $300,000 by the Importers' and Traders' National, and $500,000 by the Bank of New York. The Sub-Treasury also transferred to San Francisco $1,300,000, making a total of $3,700,000 of funds involved in the present movement to the Western centre.

Call money a year ago yesterday loaned at 20 per cent., but with the exception of this unusually high rate, demand loans had not been quite as high as 10 per cent. since 1907. In that year of panic conditions the maximum quotation was 12 per cent. In 1911 the top quotation was 6 per cent., in 1910 2½ per cent., and in 1909 5 per cent.

SAY BRITISH PAID FAIRLY.

Growers Testify for Imperial Tobacco Company in Anti-Trust Suit.

MORGANFIELD, Ky., Nov. 28.—Testimony favorable to the defense was given to-day in the trial of the Imperial Tobacco Company of England, which is charged with conspiracy to violate the Kentucky anti-trust laws. Several tobacco growers testified that the prices paid by the defendant company to the planters had been reasonable. Several independent buyers of tobacco testified they had purchased tobacco of the farmers and sold it to the Imperial Company at a profit.

The growers to-day swore that labor-saving machinery had enabled the farmers to produce tobacco for approximately $5 per hundred pounds. Witnesses for the prosecution had testified previously that the cost of production ranged from $8 to $12 a hundred.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Commenting on conditions in business and trade during the week, Dun's Review says:

Lessened activity in industrial channels reflects the prevailing uncertainty regarding the future. The distribution of merchandise for immediate requirements continues large, but retrenchment rather than expansion characterizes the situation. Caution in entering upon forward commitments is general and new enterprises are limited, while economy is practiced in numerous quarters. Labor is not so well employed and more machinery idle in iron and steel, the leading mills now running considerably below their full capacity. Curtailment of operations results mainly from the restricted buying on the part of the transporting companies, which experience difficulty in obtaining needed funds for equipment and extensions. The opening of the Eastern freight rate inquiry and the beginning of the currency discussion in the Senate attracted attention, and the proceedings in these important matters will be closely followed both in trade and financial circles.

Bank exchanges at leading cities in the United States continue rather light, the total this week amounting to $2,373,681,571, a falling off of 5.9 per cent. as compared with the $2,522,144,870 of the same week last year.

Bradstreet's says:

Quieter conditions rule in trade and industry. Unseasonably mild weather has checked demand for Winter wearing apparel, heavy clothing, dry goods, shoes, rubbers, and this in turn is reflected in rather less active reordering at many centres. Still, dry goods and kindred lines of jobbing business report a good volume of mail orders for quick delivery, and those trades send relatively the best reports and make more favorable comparisons with last year than any other lines. Demand for textiles for Spring continues rather conservative. Holiday trade reports are cheerful, and business has opened well at most centres.

AUTO DEALERS TALK OF COMING RUN

Fully 25 Entries Seem Assured for 500-Mile Contest Next Week—Rules Explained.

At a luncheon yesterday at the Manhattan Automobile Club to the automobile dealers of New York, given by the Motor Dealers' Contest Association, arrangements for the coming 500-mile reliability run were explained further by the Rules Committee, David Beecroft, Emanuel Lascaris, and George H. Robertson. Some objections had been raised by dealers to the regulations regarding equipment on the ground that faulty accessories, the condition of which would not affect the running of the car, were to be penalized as heavily as defects in vital parts of the mechanism.

The criticism, for instance, was made that the penalty for a cracked glass in the windshield and for a broken valve was the same, the penalty for each fault being 5 points. Mr. Beecroft pointed out, however, that a close analysis of the rules put the matter in a different light. The 5 points penalty for a broken windshield, he said, was the sole penalty, charged at the completion of the run, for that defect, while for a broken valve, in addition to the penalty of 5 points imposed at the end of the contest, at least 40 points would be lost through regulations imposing 1 point penalty for each minute of work on the road, 5 points for breaking the seal of the bonnet in order to get at the motor, and an additional point a minute for the replacement of a part. This set at rest objections on this score.

The careful arrangements of the committee for police protection and garage facilities at the noon controls, Riverhead, L. I.; New Haven, Conn., and Poughkeepsie, as well as the night control in this city, were also explained. It was said that at least twenty-five entries seemed assured for the contest, which begins on Wednesday and will last for three days.

The post-Thanksgiving dinner-dance which was to have been held at the Manhattan Automobile Club to-night has been postponed until Saturday evening, Dec. 13.

***

The Nominating Committee of the Long Island Automobile Club has selected this ticket to be acted upon at the annual meeting of the club on Wednesday:

For President—J. S. Frazee; for Vice President—Herbert C. Andrews; for Treasurer—Charles W. Griffin; for Secretary—P. M. Brotherhood; for Members of the Board of Governors, class of 1915—John F. James, Charles Herrman, and F. G. Webb.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

Grain prices lost some ground, with trading in a sluggish manner. Wheat declined from ⅛ to ⅝c, corn stood ⅛@¼c lower for some options and ⅜c higher for others, and oats fell back a fractional distance. Cotton was in fair demand and moderately strong early in the day, but receded later, and left off with gains of from 1 to 8 points. Provisions and cotton oil were firm.

WHEAT.

The foreign markets, including Winnipeg and Buenos Aires, showed an easier tone over our holiday, and prices here were heavy, closing at net losses of ¼@⅝c. The technical position was believed to have been materially weakened by the recent covering movement, and, as there was little or no outside demand and nothing to stimulate new professional buying, price sagged in absence of support. The Argentine news was confusing, and the Northwestern Miller's agent estimated the exportable surplus at 101,000,000 bushels, which was the largest estimate received since October, when one house estimated 106,000,000.

Receipts at Northwestern points were slightly smaller, and there was less pressure of offerings, although, at the same time, the cash and export demand were small. The Modern Miller reported less favorably on the outlook for the Winter wheat crop, calling attention to the absence of snow covering and the presence of numerous insect pests. Bromhall estimated world's exports for the week, exclusive of North America, at 7,600,000 bushels, which, with Bradstreet's American figures, indicated total shipments of 18,586,000 bushels, compared with 15,440,000 last week, and 12,720,000 last year.

In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at 98¼c c. i. f. New York, export basis, and $1.00 f. o. b.; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 98¾c t. e. b.

CORN.

The corn market was only moderately active, but prices were steady most of the day, easing off late and closing ⅛c net lower to ⅛c higher. The weather over the West was unfavorable for curing and marketing the new crop, but the cash demand was also less active and it was said that the Northwest was offering corn quite freely to Chicago.

Prices abroad were easier owing to fears of heavy tenders on Monday although it was practically discounted by the lenders in Chicago on December contracts. In the local cash market old No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 84c, elevator, domestic.

OATS.

The oats market was inactive, with small price changes, closing at ⅛c to ¼c net decline. The cash demand was quiet, and it was said that a large amount of Canadian oats was being loaded for shipment to Chicago.

The local cash market was quiet, standard white being quoted at 48c to 47c; No. 2, 47c to 47½c; No. 3, 45½c to 46c; No. 4, 44½c to 45c; ordinary clipped white, 44½c to 46½c; fancy clipped white, 47c, to 48c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was very inactive, and after showing a slight advance in sympathy with an upturn in the hog market prices ruled within a narrow range in absence of aggressive operations. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 23,000; estimated for Saturday, 18,000. Kansas City received 8,500 and Omaha 7,000.
